Complaint Investigations: A Guide for Supervisors Los Angeles Police Department Internal Affairs Group 75

Computer / Electronic Devices Related Investigations

Since the onset of the 21st Century, computer related crimes have increased significantly. Unfortunately, police officers are not immune to becoming involved in these types of crimes. Therefore, investigators need to have a basic understanding as to how to investigate these types of misconduct.

Internet Crime

There have been reported cases of officers committing a variety of crimes via the computer or internet:

- ☐ Child pornography.
- ☐ Child enticement.
- ☐ Fraud (various types).
- ☐ Identity Theft/ Impersonation.
- ☐ Terrorist/Criminal Threats.
- ☐ Sexual Harassment/Retaliation/Discrimination/Hostile Work Environment.

It is against Department policy to use computers connected to the Department LAN for non-business related access to Internet sites, to listen to music, audio material, or to watch video clips.

Standards of Review

Listed below are some of the laws governing the use of computers:

- ☐ Federal Electronic Communications Privacy Act (FECPA) 18 United States Code 2510
- ☐ Identity Theft: California Penal Code, Section 530.5
- ☐ Annoying/threatening communications: California Penal Code, Section 635(m)
- ☐ Child Pornography: California PC Section 311
- ☐ Computer Data Access and Fraud Act: California PC Section 502
- ☐ Searching cellular phones incident to arrest: California v. Diaz, 2011

Social Networking Issues

Social Media websites such as Facebook, Pinterest, Instagram and Twitter have over a billion users worldwide. It is correctly believed that these sites are personal and have some First Amendment protections in the United States. These protections are from certain types of government intrusion or search. Generally, a search warrant is required since protections are in place. Complaint Investigations:

A Guide for Supervisors

Los Angeles Police Department Internal Affairs Group 76

However, today's "friends, girlfriends, boyfriends, husbands, wives" do not always remain so forever. These individuals have captured the information contained on these sites and brought them to the Departments' attention. Any conduct which may tend to reflect unfavorably upon the employee or the Department is unbecoming conduct. This may also apply to information revealed during "blogging."

Additionally, defense attorneys have gained access to these sites and successfully used them against officers in court as impeachment material. Convictions rest on the credibility of the officer(s). Brady v. Maryland (1963) states evidence affecting the credibility of the police officer as a witness may be used as exculpatory evidence and shall be given to the defense. Brady issues affect the officers' future ability to testify in court and will therefore impact his/her ability to complete some essential duties.

Case Strategy

The goal is to gather all evidence that proves or disproves the allegation. The more difficult issue associated with this type of investigation is that there are usually few witnesses to the acts. The benefit of this type of investigation is that there is more technological evidence. While investigating a computer related crime, investigators should consider the following:

- ☐ Use Department experts and resources, such as Commercial Crimes Division, Computer Crimes Unit, Juvenile Division, Cyber Unit, Criminal Investigation Division, and/or Scientific Investigation Division.
- ☐ Record all results of seizures of computer hard drives, memory, files, photographs, and site content.
- ☐ Request Information Technology Division (ITD) to conduct checks and results.

Search Warrants

Most internet companies will require a warrant prior to releasing information regarding a client/user. A judge will require prima facie (evidence) for a crime where the internet or electronic device is a factor prior to issuing a warrant. Generally, there is no issue when conducting criminal investigations. Cellular phones are considered electronic devices under the current definitions of the law. It is illegal to knowingly access without permission or authority, any electronic device data, electronic device system or electronic device network in order to wrongfully control or obtain property, software, or data. However, the same case authorized law enforcement officers to conduct a warrantless search of the contents of a cellular phone incident to arrest, as long as the cellular phone is in the arrestee's immediate control (See California Penal Code, Section 502 and California v. Diaz).
