President expected to launch commission on 'election integrity'

Commission to be chaired by vice president

In a closed- door meeting with Congressional leaders and subsequently in numerous tweets shortly following his inauguration, President Donald J. Trump alleged that three to five million illegal votes were cast in the 2016 general election.

Although he had no evidence to back up his claims — including a claim that former New Hampshire Senator Kelly Ayotte (R) would have been re-elected had there not been voter fraud — Trump said he would sign an executive order to create a presidential commission to look into the alleged voter fraud.

The president's claims were met with denial from state and local elections officials and great skepticism from others in the elections field. Even Snopes.com weighed in on the claim.

"The process had integrity. It was extremely well administered. And in the end, the people's voice was heard and the process served voters well," U.S. Election Assistance Commission Chair Matthew Masterson (R) told the Center for Public Integrity.

Now, according to multiple media outlets, the president is expected to sign an executive order today (May 11) authorizing the establishment of an "election integrity" commission. Read More...

And we Persist!

Robert,

Kansas Secretary of State and Vice Chair of the so-called Presidential Commission on Election Integrity Kris Kobach ought to be clear on one thing: the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law is very persistent in its pursuit of justice and equality. We've seen Mr. Kobach in court enough times for him to know this about us. We've already been successful in communicating with every secretary of state in the country about the severity of the Commission's demand for sensitive voter information. In addition, we filed a complaint against Kobach on the grounds that he appeared to be leveraging his leadership of the Commission to further a partisan agenda. We also recently asked the D.C. District Court to force the Commission to immediately open its records for the public in advance of yesterday's meeting. As you might know, the court denied our request, but that has not slowed us down. We will continue to #fightlikehell in the courts against this absurd attempt at voter suppression and keep our 866-OUR-VOTE hotline open to all of you who have experienced vote discrimination or have concerns about the Commission. We need you to spread the word about our voter protection hotline and donate today to help keep our battles in the courts alive.

We Sued Kobach.

Dear Robert,

We just filed suit against the sham Presidential Advisory Commission on "Election Integrity" for its shady and illegitimate behavior.

Kobach's Commission has been acting in violation of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (FACA) by withholding information about its meetings and operating behind closed doors.

Among the violations is the telephone conference held by the Commission on June 28th— a secret meeting that amounted to Kobach's bizarre request for the personal information of our nation's 200+ million registered voters.

Federal law requires that all President's Commissions operate transparently. With voting rights and voter privacy at risk, it has never been more important to take a bold stance and hold this Commission accountable.

Donate $100 today to support our fight and see Kobach's fraudulent Commission put to rest.

"Trump's voter commission says it doesn't need to make privacy impact assessment"

Posted on July 17, 2017 9:45 pm by Rick Hasen

Wash Times:

In a court filing on Monday, the commission argued federal law doesn't require it to perform a privacy risk assessment before collecting voter data, which was a key argument in one of the first lawsuits brought by the Electronic Privacy Information Center (EPIC) earlier this month.

After Kris W. Kobach, the panel vice chairman, asked states to turn over names, partial Social Security numbers, birthdays, political party affiliations, military status and other public information last month, EPIC filed suit, hoping to force the commission to complete a Privacy Impact Assessment before gathering the personal data.

EPIC quickly scored a win when the commission suspended its collection of state voter information earlier this month until a judge rules on the matter.

On Monday the commission asked the judge to deny EPIC's request for a restraining order on the gathering of data, arguing that the pro-privacy group doesn't have the legal right, or "standing," to file the lawsuit.

New Details on December Hack of U.S. Election Assistance Comm'n, as House Republicans Try to Shut It Down

Posted on July 17, 2017 9:27 pm by Rick Hasen

WSJ:

The hack appeared to include a breach of the EAC's administrative-access credentials as well as access to nonpublic reports on flaws in voting machines, according to Andrei Barysevich, an analyst with cybersecurity firm Recorded Future.

Access to the reports could have allowed someone to exploit flaws in voting machines, Mr. Barysevich said. The stolen credentials could have been used to install malicious code on the EAC site, thus potentially infecting any user of it. The users could include state election officials, who might then use a thumb memory stick to interact with other machines, such as ballot machines not connected to the internet.

The security firm, which assessed the hack as having likely occurred in November, turned the information over to law enforcement in December, and Mr. Barysevich has been cooperating with the FBI on its probe.

As far as the House Republicans trying to shut the EAC, it is hard to imagine a worse Idea. As I wrote Sunday:

Meanwhile, House Republicans are moving to abolish the United States Election Assistance Commission, a bipartisan federal agency that serves as a clearinghouse for information about best voting practices and certifies the security of voting machines. Does that sound like a good idea right now?

Extremist to lead new voter fraud commission — challenging money bail — new SPLC lawsuit in Mississippi

Trump's commission to study mythical voter fraud includes figures tied to hate groups

President Trump has appointed Kris Kobach to help lead a new commission to study the nonexistent threat of voter fraud, which he claims cost him the popular vote. Kobach is a lawyer who champions laws to suppress voting and has long represented the Federation for American Immigration Reform, which has been named a hate group by the SPLC. Also on the commission is Ken Blackwell, a senior fellow at the Family Research Council, an anti-LGBT hate group.

SPLC challenges wealth-based bail system in Alabama county

We've filed suit today in federal court to challenge a wealth-based bail system that, as in many other jurisdictions across America, discriminates against the poor. People charged with misdemeanors or felonies in Alabama's Randolph County are automatically jailed if they can't afford bail – regardless of whether they're a threat to the community or likely to flee before trial. It's one of the first suits anywhere to challenge the constitutionality of felony bail practices.

We're seeking a court order to restore money needed by public schools that are already deeply underfunded.

Trump's voter-fraud commission wants to know voting history, party ID and address of every voter in the U.S.

President Trump is signed an executive order on May 11 initiating an investigation into voter suppression and election fraud. Here's what we know so far. (Patrick Martin/The Washington Post)

The chair of President Trump's Election Integrity Commission has penned a letter to all 50 states requesting their full voter-role data, including the name, address, date of birth, party affiliation, last four Social Security number digits and voting history back to 2006 of potentially every voter in the state.

In the letter, a copy of which was made public by the Connecticut secretary of state, the commission head Kris Kobach said that "any documents that are submitted to the full Commission will also be made available to the public."

On Wednesday, the office of Vice President Pence released a statement saying "a letter will be sent today to the 50 states and District of Columbia on behalf of the Commission requesting publicly available data from state voter rolls and feedback on how to improve election integrity."

States began reacting to the letter on Thursday afternoon. "I have no intention of honoring this request," said Governor Terry McAuliffe of Virginia in a statement. "Virginia conducts fair, honest, and democratic elections, and there is no evidence of significant voter fraud in Virginia."

Connecticut's Secretary of State, Denise Merrill, said she would "share publicly-available information with the Kobach Commission while ensuring that the privacy of voters is honored by withholding protected data." She added, however, that Kobach "has a lengthy record of illegally disenfranchising eligible voters in Kansas" and that "given Secretary Kobach's history we find it very difficult to have confidence in the work of this Commission."

Under federal law, each state must maintain a central file of registered voters. States collect different amounts of information on voters. While the files are technically public records, states usually charge fees to individuals or entities who want to access them. Political campaigns and parties typically use these files to compile their massive voter lists.

In May, Trump created a commission to investigate alleged acts of voter fraud after he claimed, without evidence, that 3 million to 5 million undocumented immigrants voted illegally in the 2016 election. The commission is chaired by Kobach, who is the Kansas secretary of state and a voter-fraud hard-liner.

Earlier this month, a federal judge fined Kobach $1,000 for "presenting misleading arguments in a voting-related lawsuit," according to Politico.

Advocates for voting rights and civil liberties are also sounding alarms over the letter. "The concern is that this is going to be used to justify regressive and disenfranchising federal law," Myrna Pérez, deputy director of the democracy program at New York University Law School's Brennan Center for Justice, said in an interview.

Vanita Gupta, chief executive of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights and former head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, said on Twitterthat the letter is "laying the groundwork for voter suppression, plain & simple."

The White House press office did not return a request for comment on this article. A spokesman for Kobach in the Kansas secretary of state's office referred an inquiry to an email address listed in the commission's letter. The commission did not return a request sent to that email address.

Trump and his allies have said the commission's work is necessary to prevent what they call widespread instances of voter fraud. But evidence for such fraud is exceedingly thin. Kobach has made it a central issue of his tenure in Kansas and has secured nine voter-fraud convictions. Most were older Republican voters, and at least one claims he was targeted for an "honest mistake."

Academics who have studied the issue for decades say that voter fraud — particularly of the type that strict voter-identification laws championed by Kobach and others are intended to combat — is vanishingly rare and that voter-ID requirements are a burdensome solution to a practically nonexistent problem. A federal judge ruled that some of Kobach's proposed ID requirements constituted a "mass denial of a fundamental constitutional right."

While civil-liberties advocates are concerned with what Kobach might do with what would amount to a nationwide voter file, privacy advocates worry about the implications of making such data available to the public, as the commission says it intends to do. It hasn't specified how it would make the data available.

"Why does a random member of the public . . . need to know when you last voted and what your political party is?" asked the Brennan Center's Perez. "I think that access to this data in the wrong hands could always leave the opportunity for mischief. In this particular instance, I'm worried about harassment as well."

States are "stewards of [this] public information," Perez said. "Once it leaves their hands in this way, there's no telling whose going to get it, and how, and what they're using it for."

PROPUBLICA

Presidential Commission Demands Massive Amounts of State Voter Data

A commission created by President Donald Trump to enhance confidence in America's elections has asked all 50 states for copies of their voter records which often include names, addresses and ages. The commission has said it intends to make the information widely available.

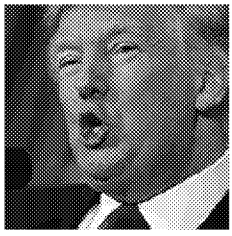
On Wednesday, all 50 states were sent letters from Kris Kobach — vice chair for the Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity — requesting information on voter fraud, election security and copies of every state's voter roll data.

The letter asked state officials to deliver the data within two weeks, and says that all information turned over to the commission will be made public. The letter does not explain what the commission plans to do with voter roll data, which often includes the names, ages and addresses of registered voters. The commission also asked for information beyond what is typically contained in voter registration records, including Social Security numbers and military status, if the state election databases contain it.



The Trump Administration

ProPublica's ongoing coverage of the 45th President.

President Donald Trump established the commission through an executive order on March 11. Its stated goal is to "promote fair and honest Federal elections" and it is chaired by Vice President Mike Pence. The commission plans to present a report to Trump that identifies vulnerabilities in the voting system that could lead to fraud and makes recommendations for enhancing voters' confidence in election integrity. No deadline has been set for completion of the work.

A number of experts, as well as at least one state official, reacted with a mix of alarm and bafflement. Some saw political motivations behind the requests, while others said making such information public would create a national voter registration list, a move that could create new election problems.

"You'd think there would want to be a lot of thought behind security and access protocols for a national voter file, before you up and created one," said Justin Levitt, a professor at Loyola University School of Law and former Department of Justice civil rights official. "This is asking to create a national voter file in two weeks."

David Becker, the executive director of the Center for Election Innovation & Research, also expressed serious concerns about the request. "It's probably a good idea not to make publicly available the name, address and military status of the people who are serving our armed forces to anyone who requests it," he said.

Kobach, the secretary of state in Kansas, has been concerned about voter fraud for years. His signature piece of legislation was a law requiring Kansans to show proof of citizenship when they register to vote, which is currently ensnarled in a fraught court battle with the American Civil Liberties Union. He has written that he believes people vote twice with "alarming regularity," and also that non-citizens frequently vote. Multiple studies have shown neither happens with any consistency.

Kobach also runs the Interstate Voter Registration Crosscheck Program, a proprietary piece of software started by Kansas Secretary of State Ron Thornburgh in 2005. Under the program, 30 states pool their voter information and attempt to identify people who are registered in more than one state.

Some expect the information Kobach has requested will be used to create a national system that would include data from all 50 states.

It is not uncommon for voters to be registered in more than one state. Many members of Trump's inner circle — including his son-in-law Jared Kushner and daughter Tiffany Trump — were registered to vote in two states. Given the frequency with which voters move across state lines and re-register, the act of holding two registrations is not in itself fraud. There is no evidence to suggest that voting twice is a widespread problem, though experts say removing duplicate registrations are a good practice if done carefully.

"In theory, I don't think we have a problem with that as an idea, but the devil is always in the details," said Dale Ho, the director of the ACLU's Voting Rights Project. While he believes voter registration list maintenance is important, he says Kobach's Crosscheck program has been repeatedly shown to be ineffective and to produce false matches. A study by a group of political scientists at Stanford published earlier this year found that Crosscheck highlighted 200 false matches for every one true double vote.

"I have every reason to think that given the shoddy work that Mr. Kobach has done in this area in the past that this is going to be yet another boondoggle and a propaganda tool that tries to inflate the problem of double registration beyond what it actually is," Ho said.

Some experts already see sloppy work in this request. On at least one occasion, the commission directed the letter to the incorrect entity. In North Carolina, it addressed and sent the letter to Secretary of State Elaine Marshall, who has no authority over elections or the voter rolls. In that state, the North Carolina Board of Elections manages both.

Charles Stewart, a professor at MIT and expert in election administration, said it was proof of "sloppy staff work," and questioned the speed at which the letter was sent. "It seems to me that the data aren't going anywhere. Doing database matching is hard work, and you need to plan it out carefully," he said. "It's a naïve first undertaking by the commission, and reflects that the commission may be getting ahead of itself."

Connecticut Secretary of State Denise Merrill, who oversees voting in the state, said she was dismayed about the commission's failure to be clearer about what its intentions are. In a statement, Merrill said her office would share publicly available information with the commission. But she said that "in the same spirit of transparency" her office would request the commission "share any memos, meeting minutes or additional information as state officials have not been told precisely what the Commission is looking for."

"This lack of openness is all the more concerning, considering that the Vice Chair of the Commission, Kris Kobach, has a lengthy record of illegally disenfranchising eligible voters in Kansas," she wrote.

Alabama's Republican Secretary of State John Merrill (no relation) also indicated he had questions for Kobach regarding how much of the data would be made public and how Alabamans' privacy would be protected, even while he expressed support for the commission. "Kobach is a close friend, and I have full confidence in him and his ability, but before we turn over data of this magnitude to anybody we're going to make sure our questions are answered," he said.

Colorado Secretary of State Republican Wayne Williams, for his part, said he was not concerned with what the commission planned to do with the data. "Just like when we get a [public-records] request, we don't demand to know what they are going to do with the data," he said. "There are important reasons why the voter roll is publicly available information."

The extent to which voter roll data is public varies across the country. While some states, like North Carolina, make their voter rolls available for free download, other states charge high fees. Alabama, for example, charges one cent per voter in the roll for a total cost of more than $30,000. The state law provides a waiver for government entities, so Merrill said the commission would receive the data for free. Other states, like Virginia, do not make this information public beyond sharing it with formal campaigns and political candidates. When ProPublica tried to purchase Illinois' voter roll, our request was denied because they only release it to government entities for privacy reasons. Illinois did not respond to a request regarding whether they would release this information to the PCEI, which — while a government entity — intends to make the information public.

There's No Evidence Our Election Was Rigged

We had more than 1,000 people watching the vote on Election Day. If millions of people voted illegally, we would have seen some sign of it. Read the story.

The letter from the commission also asks quite broad questions of state elections officials.

"What changes, if any, to federal election laws would you recommend to enhance the integrity of federal elections?" asks the first question. The letter also asked for all information and convictions related to any instance of voter fraud or registration fraud, and it solicited recommendations "for preventing voter intimidation or disenfranchisement."

"The equivalent is, 'Hey, doctors, what changes would you suggest regarding healthcare? Let us know in two weeks,'" said Levitt, the Loyola professor. "If I were a state election official, I wouldn't know what to do with this."

While the commission is being chaired by Vice President Mike Pence, Kobach signed the letter alone. Jon Greenbaum, chief counsel for the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, said this is an indication that Kobach — not Pence — "will be running the show," which he said should be a point of concern.

"As we know with Kobach, he's obsessed with trying to identify voter fraud and finds it in a lot of places where it doesn't exist," he said.

Vanita Gupta, the former acting head of the Department of Justice's civil rights division under President Barack Obama, said the commission's letter was an indication the commission was "laying the groundwork" to carry out changes to the National Voter Registration Act that might seek to restrict access to the polls.

The National Voter Registration Act — sometimes called the Motor Voter Act — was enacted in 1993. It allows the DOJ the authority to ensure states to keep voter registration lists, or voter rolls, accurate and up-to-date. It also requires states to offer opportunities for voter registration at all offices that provide public assistance (like the DMV).

In November, Kobach was photographed holding a paper addressing national security issues and proposing changes to the voter registration law. It is not clear what these changes were. The ACLU is involved in a lawsuit against Kansas' state law requiring people to show proof of citizenship in order to register to vote. As part of the suit, ACLU lawyers requested access to the document reflecting the changes Kobach proposed.

Originally Kobach told the court the document was beyond the scope of the lawsuit, but last week the court found the documents were relevant and that Kobach had intentionally misled the court. He was fined $1,000 for the offense and required him to turn the document over. It has not yet been made public.

Gupta said her concern about the future of the voter registration act was deepened by the fact that, on Thursday, the DOJ sent a letter to the 44 states covered by the act requesting information on the maintenance of their voter rolls. States were given 30 days to answer a set of detailed questions about their policies for list maintenance.

"The timing of the letters being issued on the same day is curious at the very least," she said.

The White House and the DOJ all did not respond to requests for comment about the letters.

The letter did not ask about compliance with the portions of the act that require states to attempt to expand the voter base, such as by offering voter registration forms and information in public offices.

Danielle Lang, deputy director of voting rights for The Campaign Legal Center, said the focus on list maintenance troubled her. While she said this might point to a new direction in enforcement for the DOJ's voting rights section, it was too early to tell how this information might be used.

Levitt said he did not recall a time when the DOJ has previously requested such broad information. While the information is public and not, on its face, troubling, Levitt said the only time he recalled requesting similar information was during targeted investigations when federal officials suspected a state was not complying with the law.

Kris Kobach wants every U.S. voter's personal information for Trump's commission

blowry@kcstar.com

Kansas Secretary of State Kris Kobach has asked every state in the nation to provide President Donald Trump's new voter commission with the names, birthdates and Social Security information for registered voters going back to 2006.

Kobach, a former chairman of the Kansas Republican Party and a candidate for Kansas governor in 2018, serves as vice chairman of Trump's Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity.

In a June 28 letter, Kobach asked the Connecticut secretary of state's office to provide it with all publicly available voter roll data, including the full names of all registered voters along with their addresses, dates of birth, the last four digits of their Social Security numbers, voting history and other personal information.

Kobach said in a phone call that he sent similar letters to election officials in every state and that as Kansas' top election official he will be providing the commission with all of the information for Kansas voters.

Kobach clarified that the personal data would be hosted on a secure server run by the federal government and not disclosed to the public. He said that the request for the Social Security digits was meant "to prevent false positives."

He said that his critics have attacked the Interstate Crosscheck System, a data sharing system between states which Kansas oversees, for producing false positives and that this would ensure more accurate data. Kobach has previously promised that the commission would undertake the most comprehensive study of voter fraud to date.

"The idea is to have the best data possible," Kobach said. "The purpose of the commission is to quantify different forms of voter fraud and registration fraud and offer solutions. And so you have to have this data in order to do any meaningful research."

Kobach said the commission would cross-reference the data provided by states against federal databases to determine the number of non-citizens registered in each state, dead people still on the voter rolls and people registered in more than one jurisdiction.

Kobach's request faced backlash from Democratic election officials, including at least one who planned to buck the request.

California Secretary of State Alex Padilla said in a statement that he will "not provide sensitive voter information to a commission that has already inaccurately passed judgment that millions of Californians voted illegally."

"California's participation would only serve to legitimize the false and already debunked claims of massive voter fraud made by the President, the Vice President, and Mr. Kobach. The President's Commission is a waste of taxpayer money and a distraction from the real threats to the integrity of our elections today: aging voting systems and documented Russian interference in our elections," Padilla said.

Missouri Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft, a Republican, called the commission's requests fair and said that his office looks "forward to working with Sec. Kobach and the Commission on its findings and offer our support in the collective effort to enhance the American people's confidence in the integrity of the elections process."

Ashcroft's father, former U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft, was a mentor for Kobach during his tenure at the U.S. Department of Justice.

Connecticut Secretary of State Denise Merrill, a Democrat, said in a statement that her office plans to share "publicly-available information with the Kobach Commission while ensuring that the privacy of voters is honored by withholding protected data."

"In the same spirit of transparency, we will request that the Commission share any memos, meeting minutes or additional information as state officials have not been told precisely what the Commission is looking for," she said. "This lack of openness is all the more concerning, considering that the Vice Chair of the Commission, Kris Kobach, has a lengthy record of illegally disenfranchising eligible voters in Kansas."

Kobach has championed some of the strictest voting laws in the country during his tenure as secretary of state. Those laws have faced multiple lawsuits.

Last week, a federal judge fined him $1,000 for making "patently misleading representations" about documents he took to a November meeting with Trump that relate to federal voting law as part of an ongoing voting rights case.

"The courts have repudiated his methods on multiple occasions but often after the damage has been done to voters," Merrill said. "Given Secretary Kobach's history we find it very difficult to have confidence in the work of this Commission."

The commission is chaired by Vice President Mike Pence. Pence's spokesman, Marc Lotter, said that in the commission's first phone meeting Wednesday every member on the call supported the request for documents.

Vanita Gupta, the former head of the U.S. Department of Justice's office of Civil Rights, said that the timing of the letter coincides with a Justice Department request to states for information on voter registration processes. Gupta, who now leads the Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights, said the letters "seem to confirm that the Trump administration is laying the groundwork to suppress the right to vote."

Kobach said called this criticism "complete nonsense."

"There's no way you can suppress somebody's vote simply by knowing they're registered," he said, noting that states' voter registration files are public records. "How does having the last four Social allow the federal government to suppress your vote?"

Rick Hasen, an election law expert at the University of California, Irvine, said that Kobach's request raises questions about what safeguards will be put in place to protect voters' data. He said the letter does not make that clear.

"If Barack Obama tried to get all of this information from state election officials it would be front page news on Fox News for months and would prompt a congressional investigation of federal takeover of state election processes," Hasen said.

Kobach's letter to Merrill asks her to provide her thoughts on how to enhance election integrity and to submit a response electronically by July 14. It states that documents submitted to the commission will become available to the public. Kobach said only the input from election officials will be made public, not voters' data.

Kobach said that his quest to analyze the national data would not impact his duties in Kansas. "The Voter integrity commission is so squarely aligned with what I'm doing as secretary of state that it enhances it," he said.

Voting QFRS

House

1. In 2013, in Shelby County, Alabama v. Holder, the Supreme Court effectively struck down Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, which required jurisdictions with a documented history and ongoing record of race discrimination in voting to preclear any voting changes with either the Department of Justice or a three-judge federal court before their implementation.

   Following the Shelby decision, previously covered jurisdictions implemented various forms of restrictive voting laws, which make it impossible or unduly burdensome for millions of people to participate equally in the political process and elect their candidates of choice. Despite the documented instances of voter suppression currently going on in our country, the Administration appears singularly focused on investigating voter fraud, even though there are no substantiated allegations of widespread voter fraud in the 2016 elections.

   Earlier this year, I led more than 70 of my colleagues in a letter to President Trump urging that any investigation he conducts into alleged voter fraud also include an investigation of voter suppression. We never received a response to that letter, and just over a month ago the President announced his Advisory Commission on Election Integrity to investigate only instances of voter fraud.

   a. In light of the President's newly-formed Commission, how does the Department plan to allocate resources to enforce the Voting Rights Act and combat the proliferation of voter suppression laws since Shelby County? (b)(5)

   b. Does the Department acknowledge that voter suppression is a significant and growing problem that should be prioritized? (b)(5)

2. According to the fiscal year 2018 budget request, "[t]he Department will continue to protect voting rights through efforts to detect and investigate voting practices that violate federal laws, through affirmative litigation to enjoin such practices, and through the monitoring of elections all throughout the country each year."

   c. Please describe what is meant by "voting practices that violate federal laws" and provide examples. Would it include requiring a photo ID to vote, which federal courts have found violate the Voting Right Act? (b)(5)

   d. These enforcement priorities for voting rights appear to exclude protecting against voter suppression efforts, which have proliferated in the wake of the Supreme Court's Shelby County decision. How will the Voting Rights Section prioritize combatting voter suppression efforts—including, but not limited to, the enactment of strict photo ID requirements, efforts to unlawfully purge voter rolls, and restrictions on early voting and polling locations? (b)(5)

3. In April 2017, a federal district court found that Texas's strict voter photo ID requirement was enacted purposefully to discriminate against Black and Latino voters. The Department of Justice had taken the position that Texas's law was intentionally discriminatory and challenged the law Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act and the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution. One of the Attorney General's first decisions was to abandon the Department's claim of intentional discrimination in its lawsuit against Texas.

    a. Why did the Justice Department abandon the intentional discrimination claim? (b)(5)

    b. Do you plan to withdraw from, or change positions in, any other pending voting rights litigation? (b)(5)

4. In May 2017, President Trump issued an executive order that established the Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity.

    a. What role did the Attorney General and/or the Deputy Attorney General have advising on the creation of this Commission or the drafting of this Executive Order? (b)(5)

    b. Will the Department commit to not spending any of its resources on the operation of the Commission, including but not limited to, providing facilities or office space, funding for staff or facilities, travel expenses, or other costs associated with the commission? (b)(5)

    c. The Commission's vice chair is Kansas Secretary of State Kris Kobach, who joined the president in estimating that "3.2 million aliens voted in the president election." Do you have any evidence that 3.2 million aliens voted in the presidential election? (b)(5)

    d. How will the Department ensure that the Commission is not used to justify voter suppression tactics? (b)(5)

Senate

Question 21: Voting Rights and Voter Suppression

After your nomination hearing in March, I submitted a number of questions to you about voting rights and voter fraud. Specifically, I asked if you believe there is credible evidence that over 2.5 million people voted illegally in the last election, and I asked what steps you would take to ensure strong voting rights enforcement continues. You responded to the first question that you were "not aware of the context or basis for the [President's] remarks and therefore [you were] not in a position to comment." You also pledged to "fairly, effectively and appropriately enforce voting rights laws and other laws within the Department's jurisdiction."

1. Are you now in a position to comment on whether there is credible evidence that over 2.5 million people voted illegally in the last election? (b)(5)

2. If not, will you commit to obtaining the information that you need to answer this question and to doing so by July 31, 2017? (b)(5)

3. Since becoming Deputy Attorney General, what steps have you taken to ensure that strong voting rights enforcement has continued? (b)(5)

In the time since you submitted your responses to my questions on voting rights, President Trump has established a Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity. The Administration claims the purpose of this Commission is "to promote fair and honest Federal elections." The Department also released a Fiscal Year 2018 Budget and Performance Summary. The "FY 2018 Strategy" for the Civil Rights Division states the following with respect to voting rights: "The Department will continue to protect voting rights through efforts to detect and investigate voting practices that violate federal laws, through affirmative litigation to enjoin such practices, and through the monitoring of elections all throughout the country each year." The FY 2018 Strategy makes no reference to investigating allegations of voter suppression or to ensuring that all of those eligible to vote are not disenfranchised.

4. Were you consulted by President Trump or anyone in the Trump Administration about the establishment of the Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity? (b)(5)

5. In light of the Justice Department's resources and expertise, do you believe that this Commission is necessary "to promote fair and honest Federal elections"? (b)(5)

6. What role did you play in drafting the FY 2018 Strategy for the Civil Rights Division? (b)(5)

7. What role did Rachel Brand play in drafting the FY 2018 Strategy for the Civil Rights Division? (b)(5)

8. What will the Civil Rights Division do to investigate allegations of voter suppression? (b)(5)

9. What will the Civil Rights Division do to ensure that all of those eligible to vote are not disenfranchised? (b)(5)

Senator Lankford

Voting Rights

The President's May 11, 2017, Executive Order created a Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity. Rather than protecting the right to vote in this country this commission seems directed at finding cases of voter fraud and impersonation which are very rare and much less common than voter disenfranchisement through strict voter ID laws.

1. What role did you and other Justice Department employees play in writing the May 11 Executive Order? (b)(5)

2. Were career attorneys in the Civil Rights Division consulted? If not, why? (b)(5) (b)(5) (b)(5)

3. The Executive Order says the commission "shall have staff to provide support for its functions." Has the Justice Department provided any staff to work full- or part-time for the commission? (b)(5)

4. Will the commission need congressional appropriations and if so how much has the administration sought in funding, whether at DOJ or elsewhere in the executive branch? (b)(5)

5. How much has been spent so far on the commission and what is its expected budget? (b)(5)

6. Do you think the rare incidences of voter fraud and impersonation merit the creation of this commission? (b)(5)

Re: Colorado's response to your request for information

Dear Secretary Kobach:

I received your request for input and information on behalf of the Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity. This letter responds to your questions, details some of the processes Colorado election officials follow to ensure election integrity, and explains what publicly available voter registration data I can provide under Colorado law.

Background

Elections are working well in Colorado. By every relevant metric, our state ranks as a leader in election administration. Thanks to sound policy and the hard work of our 64 county clerks and recorders, Colorado is often ranked first and always ranked in the top five in the nation in both voter turnout[1] and percentage of eligible Coloradans who are registered to vote.[2] Our election model gives voters unmatched choice in how they vote—whether by mail ballot (returned through the mail or dropped off in secure drop-boxes) or in person (by paper ballot or electronic voting or ballot marking device with paper record). And we continue to innovate by rolling out new technology, including a real-time statewide electronic poll book and a modern voting system with paper ballot records that's been adopted by most of our counties. This year Colorado will implement a scientific risk limiting audit to further assure voters that their votes are counted and reported accurately.

As our election processes become more complex and dependent on technology, we remain vigilant in our commitment to the security of our election systems and our statewide voter registration database. And our counties conduct regular list maintenance in accordance with state and federal law to ensure the accuracy of our voter rolls. Colorado also participates in two key interstate data-sharing compacts, the Electronic Registration Information Center (ERIC) and the Interstate Crosscheck, with implementation guided by strong matching criteria.

While I'm proud of the work we're doing in Colorado, there is always room for improvement. Below I provide my views and recommendations along with some more-detailed explanations of Colorado's work to maintain election integrity.

Answers to your questions

1. What changes, if any, to federal election laws would you recommend to enhance the integrity of federal elections?

Recent concerns about the security and integrity of elections emphasize the importance of the voluntary voting systems guidelines and other programs established by the Elections Assistance Commission ("EAC") with the assistance and support of state and local governments across the country. It therefore continues to be my position that these guidelines and other support assistance from the EAC provides a strong basis for the continued existence of this effective agency as an assistive commission.

I also would strongly encourage that the federal government shift resources to incentivize states' participation in the Election Registration and Information Center (ERIC) which is discussed further below. ERIC's programs provide the most accurate and complete method to maximize participation and ensure that voter rolls are accurate.

Federal election laws should apply equally across the states. And if exemptions to provisions in those laws exist, exemption eligibility should be based on states' current policies and laws rather than what those laws and policies were at the time the federal law was adopted. For example, the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 (NVRA) exempted the states that had same-day registration at the time of the law's adoption.[3] Because the NVRA doesn't extend the exemption to states like Colorado that later adopt same-day registration, it discourages states from adopting policies streamlining and increasing voter registration. The Commission should consider whether the exemption provision in the law should be applied to all states whose laws meet the original threshold requirements which would encourage other states to make it easy for citizens to participate.

There is also an opportunity to reform the burdensome auditing requirements for older voting equipment that was purchased with funds provided under the Help America Vote Act (HAVA). There remain 10 counties in Colorado with legacy voting systems that were purchased with HAVA funds. Despite the fact that each voting system and its components are fully depreciated, a directive from the federal Office of Management and Budget requires onsite audits of this generally worthless equipment.[4] In a geographically dispersed state like Colorado, this exercise is not a constructive use of resources. The Commission should review the audit policy for fully depreciated HAVA-funded equipment.

2. How can the Commission support state and local election administrators with regard to information technology security and vulnerabilities?

[3] 52 U.S.C. § 20504 (a) (1).

[4] OMB. Circular A-87 (15) (h), Cost Principles for State, Local, and Indian Tribal Governments (May 10, 2004).

My office has implemented a rigorous security program that includes real-time network monitoring between the voter registration system and multiple county networks; communication with upstream internet service providers to detect and mitigate attacks; working with counties and state agencies to create a "fusion center" for real-time monitoring and response capability; and requiring our cybersecurity awareness training of all state and county users of vote tabulation equipment and the voter registration system.

Security vulnerabilities are best identified and contained when state information security experts have the information they need to protect critical systems. I recently sent a letter to Secretary of Homeland Security Kelly voicing my displeasure that the federal government, which identified vulnerabilities in local jurisdictions during the 2016 election, failed to inform states' chief election officials, like myself. Because states have the information technology experts and resources to identify issues and coordinate with local jurisdictions, it's imperative that the federal government inform me and other state chief election officials when potential threats arise.

For these reasons, I asked Secretary Kelly to establish a process for immediately notifying state election officials of any actual or potential security threats as they arise. This will allow us to take necessary actions to maintain system integrity and communicate with local election officials across our states.

I recommend that the Commission work with DHS and other relevant federal agencies to understand the universe of cyber threats and determine how to best disseminate timely information to state election officials.

3. What laws, policies, or other issues hinder your ability to ensure the integrity of elections you administer?

It's crucial in a mail ballot state like Colorado to have the most up-to-date address for each voter. We work closely with the Colorado Department of Revenue (the agency responsible for driver's licenses) to encourage people to update their voter registration information when they get or renew a driver's license. And we've developed a secure electronic transmission process between our two agencies so we're able to receive all new voter registrations and updates on a nightly basis. But there are other address libraries we would like to take advantage of. For example, the federal jury wheel—the list of potential jurors for federal trials—contains useful address information that we'd like to have. This information would enable our state to update voter registration information to ensure that Coloradans receive the correct ballot on a timely basis. To date, my office's attempts to get this list have been rebuffed. The Commission should study the feasibility of a secure exchange between the federal courts and state election officials.

My office also uses all available tools to ensure that only U.S. citizens are registered to vote in Colorado. For example, we conduct a bi-weekly (daily during election periods) crosscheck between the statewide voter registration database (SCORE) and the Department of Revenue's driver's license database to identify non-citizens based on the documentation they provided when getting a license. When we identify someone who is registered to vote but who provided non-citizen documents when getting a driver's license, we conduct further research and, if necessary, send correspondence asking the registrant to confirm that he or she is eligible to vote.

We would like to take advantage of existing federal databases to more accurately determine current citizenship status. I've already mentioned the federal jury wheel, which also would have useful citizenship information. In addition, the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service has willingly provided my office with access to its SAVE database so we can attempt to confirm the citizenship status of those we identify as potential non-citizens. Unfortunately, SAVE does not allow dynamic searches and rarely returns the person's most recent citizenship status. SAVE was not designed to search for people who are not available to provide their most recent documentation. SAVE administrators have expressed willingness to work on enhancing the database to make it a more effective tool. The Commission should investigate this option.

4. What evidence or information do you have regarding instances of voter fraud or registration fraud in your state?

There have been a few cases of voter and registration fraud in Colorado, but it's rare because our laws and policies are designed to prevent it. Each month (and sometimes weekly or daily, depending on the task) our counties conduct the following list maintenance:

- Canceling due to death: Each month the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment (CDPHE) provides my office with a list of Colorado residents who have died in the previous month. We import this list into SCORE and make the full list of deceased individuals available and searchable for the counties. In addition, SCORE has a function that automatically identifies and flags records for each county that appear to have a matching record in the current month's list. Counties review the information to determine whether minimum matching criteria[5] are met and cancel registration records accordingly.[6]

  In addition to the information provided by CDPHE, my office now has access to the national Social Security Death Index. We search this index monthly and provide relevant potential matches to each county for review and cancelation as necessary. Furthermore, counties cancel registration records of deceased electors when they receive written confirmation of death from electors' families.[7]

- Canceling convicted felons: Each month the Colorado Department of Corrections (CDOC) provides my office with a list of individuals currently serving a sentence of incarceration or parole for a felony conviction. The monthly list is available and searchable in SCORE. The system also identifies and flags potential matching records for each county. Counties review the information to determine whether minimum matching criteria are met and cancel registration records accordingly.

  In addition to the information provided by CDOC, the Colorado U.S. Attorney's office sends quarterly notices of individuals who have been convicted of a felony. Other U.S. Attorney's offices also send lists on a regular basis. The Secretary forwards these lists to the appropriate counties for review. The counties determine whether minimum matching criteria are met and cancel registration records for electors who are currently serving a sentence of incarceration or supervised release for a felony conviction. [8]

- Change-of-address processes: Colorado counties proactively update registration information or send correspondence to electors based on information in the National

[5] Sections 1-2-603 and 1-2-604, C.R.S.; Election Rule 2.5.1 (Defining minimum matching criteria as the elector's name, date of birth, and any one of the following: 1) Colorado driver's license number; 2) last four digits of the Social Security Number; or 3) residential address).

Change of Address database (NCOA).[9] On a monthly basis our office compares voter registration data for eligible records with NCOA data to identify electors who have moved. Counties use the monthly data to update records for active electors who have moved within the county and to send notifications to other electors who have moved to another county or out of state.[10]

Colorado is also a member the Election Registration and Information Center (ERIC), which allows states to better interact with electors by sharing elections, motor vehicle, death, felon, and other records maintained by state agencies. By aggregating multi-state information, the organization allows participating states to track an individual's residency and send appropriate elections-specific information. For example, if a person moves to Colorado from another participating state and obtains a Colorado driver's license, the system will notify the other state's elections department that they need to correspond with the person to determine if he or she is still a resident of that state. While ERIC is relatively new, with 20 member states to date, it will continue to grow as a resource in the state's efforts to maintain accurate voter rolls.

- Other list maintenance: Counties regularly cancel or update registration records based on voter-initiated activities, including driver's license address changes.[11] If an elector withdraws his or her registration, the county will cancel the record.[12] Withdrawal is available on Colorado's online voter registration system at www.GoVoteColorado.com. Additionally, if a county receives a notification from another state that the elector has moved and registered in the new state, the county will cancel the registration after determining that minimum matching criteria are met.[13] Furthermore, because SCORE is a real-time statewide database, it ensures that an elector only has a single registration record in Colorado, even if the elector moves. If the elector submits an application in a new county to change his or her address, the new county will transfer the elector's record in SCORE.

In addition to keeping the voter rolls clean, Colorado also protects its in-person and mail-ballot voting processes. When a voter goes to any voter service and polling center in his or her county to vote in person, the county clerk uses a real-time electronic poll book that's connected to SCORE to register the voter (if necessary), issue the proper ballot style, and give the voter credit for voting in the system. Once the voter receives credit, he or she is unable to vote at another location in the county and would be stopped from attempting to register in another county.

If a voter chooses to vote his or her mail ballot (in 2016 about 93 percent of all voters returned a mail ballot rather than voting in person), the counties use signature verification to confirm that the returned ballot belongs to the person entitled to vote it.[14] Under this process, once the county receives the ballot in the return envelope, election judges compare the signature on the envelope's return affidavit with the signature on file for that voter in SCORE. A bipartisan team of election judges reviews any questionable signatures and will reject a signature if both judges agree that it doesn't match the one in the voter's record. In that case—or if the voter forgot to sign the affidavit—the clerk promptly notifies the voter who has until eight days after the election to cure the issue.[15]

In the 2016 election, thousands of mail ballots were rejected for signature discrepancies, missing signatures, or missing identification (which certain first-time voters must provide when returning a mail ballot[16]). Many people whose ballots were rejected took the opportunity to cure and eventually had their votes counted; but some did not. All told, Colorado counties rejected and did not count 16,209 ballots because of signature discrepancies, 2,606 ballots that were never signed, and 2,593 ballots that were missing identification. In accordance with Colorado law,[17] the 16,209 uncured signature discrepancies have been turned over to the district attorneys for investigation. In many cases, they will discover that the voter submitted an errant signature which they chose not to cure. In other cases they will discover that another family member or resident signed the ballot but that the intent was not sufficiently malicious to initiate prosecution. In other cases, they will be unable to discover who submitted the ballot.

Despite these safeguards that prevent most attempts at voter fraud, a few cheaters have been successful. For example, a local news organization[18]—using the same public voter data that the Commission requested—identified a handful of people who appeared to have forged signatures on ballot-return envelopes for ballots they were not entitled to vote. One person, who appeared in court in this week, has been charged with forging the signatures of her deceased parents and voting their ballots in multiple state elections.

My office is also currently cooperating with the Arizona Attorney General's office, which is prosecuting a husband and wife who have been charged with voting in both Colorado and Arizona during the 2012 general election. And there will be more cases like this. Through our partnerships in ERIC and the Interstate Crosscheck, we have investigations underway into instances of double-voting (both for voting twice in Colorado and for voting in Colorado and another state). When we complete our investigation and make our findings known to law enforcement, we'll provide more detail to the Commission.

5. What convictions for election-related crimes have occurred in your state since the November 2000 federal election?

Although there will likely be more after my office's 2016 investigation, I'm aware of the following convictions and pending cases:

- In 2005, Ajmal Shah was convicted of voter fraud for attempting to register by providing false information regarding U.S. citizenship;
- In 2011, David Harold Shackley was convicted of voting in more than one Colorado county in the 2008 and 2009 elections;
- In 2011, Rodney Paul Jones was convicted in Arizona of double voting in Arizona and Colorado in the 2008 general election;

- In 2011, John Marotta was convicted in Arizona of attempted illegal voting for casting ballots in both Arizona and Colorado in the same election;
- In 2014, Carol Hannah was convicted of voter fraud for voting in both Arizona and Colorado in the 2010 election;
- In 2015, Vitaliy B. Grabchenko pleaded guilty in Arapahoe County for procuring a false voter registration in 2013;
- In 2015, Bruce Rickey was charged with voting twice in the 2015 coordinated election;
- In 2016, Maureen Moss pleaded guilty to forging signatures on a petition to qualify a U.S. Senate candidate to the Republican Party primary election ballot;
- In 2016, Elsadig Saeed Merghani pleaded guilty to forging signatures on a petition to qualify a ballot initiative on the 2016 general ballot;
- In 2016, James Criswell pleaded guilty in Kansas to double voting in Colorado and Kansas in the 2016 general election;
- In 2016, Sharon Farris pleaded guilty in Kansas to double voting in Colorado and Kansas in the 2016 general election;
- In 2016, Ron R. Weems pleaded guilty in Kansas to voting in both Kansas and Colorado in the 2012 and 2014 general elections;
- In 2016, Lincoln Wilson pleaded guilty in Kansas to voting in both Kansas and Colorado in elections in 2010, 2012, and 2014;
- In 2016, Randall Killian pleaded guilty in Kansas to voting in Colorado and Kansas in the 2012 general election;
- In 2017, Angelo Felix Abad pleaded guilty to forging signatures on a petition to qualify a ballot initiative on the 2016 general election ballot;
- In 2017, Toni Lee Newbill pleaded guilty to voting twice using her deceased father's name in the 2013 general election and in the 2016 primary election;
- In 2017, Steven Curtis was charged with fraudulently signing and returning his ex-wife's ballot; and
- In 2017, Sarilu Sosa-Sanchez was charged with forging her deceased parents' signatures and voting their ballots in multiple elections.

In another case in Larimer County, Colorado, potential vote fraud was detected and referred to the local district attorney. There, a vote was cast in the name of a deceased voter, Irvin Mniszewski. However, the case could not be prosecuted because the suspected forgers had since also died.

6. What recommendations do you have for preventing voter intimidation or disenfranchisement?

Basic laws that prevent voter intimidation and electioneering at or near polling locations are certainly necessary.[19] But it's also important to give voters confidence in the state's election system through open processes. In Colorado each county clerk and recorder uses bipartisan judges appointed by the parties, assuring fairness at each stage of the process.[20] Election watchers also have significant access to all election-related activities,[21] and they play a key role in ensuring the integrity of elections at the local level. The public also has access to counties' election plans (detailing where polling locations will be and what services the county will provide) and watcher plans (detailing how each county will accommodate watchers at all locations where election activities will happen). The counties submit these plans to my office for approval and we make them available to anyone who requests them.

[19] See sections 1-13-713, C.R.S. (prohibiting intimidation) and 1-13-714, C.R.S. (prohibiting electioneering).

[20] Section 1-6-101, C.R.S.

Because Colorado voters primarily vote by mail, my office also works closely with the U.S. Postal Service to ensure that all election mail is treated uniformly and handled efficiently. And we communicate regularly with voters on timelines for returning ballots by mail, including when it's too late to put a ballot in the mail stream to ensure it will be received by the county in time. In addition to working with the post office, I initiated a grant program for counties to receive matching funds from my office for new or additional 24/7 secure drop-boxes which provide a secure and convenient method to return a ballot for urban and rural voters alike.

Historically voting took place only in pristine polling locations in which voters were protected from intimidation or disenfranchisement. As individuals move to voting from home and other locations, we need to examine how to protect the secret ballot and how to protect voters from inappropriate attempts to influence their votes or to disclose their votes to others. Laws and regulations prohibiting vote trading or intimidation in any manner are still critical to protecting a voter's right to cast his or her own ballot as he or she chooses.

7. What other issues do you believe the Commission should consider?

Colorado is a member of the Election Registration and Information Center (ERIC), which allows states to better interact with electors by sharing elections, motor vehicle, death, felon, and other records maintained by member-states' agencies. By aggregating multi-state information, the organization allows participating states to track an individual's residency and send appropriate elections-specific information. For example, if a person moves to Colorado from another participating state and obtains a Colorado driver's license, the system will notify the other state's elections department that they need to correspond with the person to determine if he or she is still a resident of that state. While ERIC is relatively new, with 20 member states to date, it will continue to grow as a resource in the state's efforts to maintain accurate voter rolls.

Because states election officials are the experts at maintaining clean voter rolls, and ERIC is a powerful tool to facilitate this, the Commission should reach out to ERIC to better understand its processes and security protocols. The Commission has requested states' public voter roll data. While this data may serve a purpose, a single request for data that lacks the non-public data necessary to accurately match voters across states can't be used to effectively assess the accuracy of voter rolls. ERIC states enter into agreements that allow them to securely share sensitive data and to ensure that, when the data is compared, it's the most up-to-date and in a uniform, consumable format.

The Commission also should encourage states' voter registration processes to solicit the prior address at which an individual was registered to vote so that the jurisdiction can be notified.

Request for voter roll data

You requested publicly available voter roll data. Under Colorado law, limited voter registration data is publicly available.[22] But the law also prohibits my office from releasing certain confidential data.[23] In accordance with these laws, my office can provide the following public data:

- Full first, middle, and last names;
- Residential and mailing addresses;
- Year of birth;
- Political party affiliation;
- Vote history (meaning elections in which the voter participated);
- Voter status (active or inactive); and
- Whether the voter is designated as a military or overseas voter.

My office will not provide the following confidential voter data:

- Last four digits of social security number; and
- Month and day of birth.

The Commission has also requested "information regarding any felony convictions," and "information regarding voter registration in another state." Information of this kind exists only in canceled voter records, which we are not able to provide without extensive redaction of confidential voter data.

In light of the Commission's request that we delay providing data, we'll await further communication. Once you've determined to make a new request, please contact my office at (303) 894-2200 x6389 for instructions on obtaining the public data in a secure manner.

As with any requestor, my office is not enabled by Colorado law to restrict your usage of the publicly available data after it is provided. Please accept, however, my input that all data you receive should be secured.

Please also note that the official voter rolls of Colorado remain in our control and custody. Neither the federal government nor any other entity can make any change in Colorado's voter rolls.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide input and recommendations.

Regards,

Wayne W. Williams

In January the Chicago Republican Party filed a FOIA request with the Chicago Board of Elections for the list of voters who had voted in the November 2016 general elections.

The board responded with a list of 1,101,178 individuals. A quick check of the elections returns published on the Chicago Board of Elections website showed that 1,115,664 votes had been cast. The difference between the number of voters in the file and the number of votes cast was 14,000, or about 1.3%.

There should be never be more votes than voters; every ballot cast should be recorded against a registered voter.

A breakdown of the votes by precinct shows that the discrepancies are not evenly distributed. Fifteen precincts show 100 more ballots cast than voters. One precinct shows more ballots cast than registered voters. Some precincts show a negative discrepancy, that is, more voters than votes cast. Subtracting out those precincts, the total discrepancy is about 16,000 votes or 1.4%.

The Chicago Republican Party made an inquiry, pursuant to FOIA, as to the source of the discrepancies. Despite repeated followups, the board has failed to respond except to say that they have been "reviewing all discrepancies" and that there will be a "final report". It's been more than three months since the first inquiry and more than six weeks since the report was due. At this point it seems to be more than a simple clerical error.

Given the history of voter fraud in Chicago, the magnitude of the problem, and the Chicago Board of Election's history of favoring the Democrats, the problem warrants external scrutiny.

A spreadsheet is attached. Tab one shows the discrepancies by precinct. Tab two shows the same data sorted with the largest discrepancies first.

Thank you John, and hello Chris!

Chris, as John mentioned, I have forwarded the information he sent to me on the Chicago issue to the Presidential Commission staff. I will follow up on that and find out what they are doing to investigate it.

I don't know the members of the Chicago Board of Elections, but I do know Lance Gough, the Executive Director. I also know (b)(6) and (b)(6) from Cook County. Is Cook County also involved in this particular issue? It does not surprise me at all that they are working on behalf of Democrats.

A write-up of your experiences would be very helpful. I'd be happy to speak with you as well. Please send me a good phone number for you and some times it would be best to call. If you are willing, I could also ask the Presidential Commission's Director if we might add you to one of our meeting agendas as a witness. I think the entire Commission would benefit from hearing from you on what is going on in Chicago.

Thanks for fighting the good fight!

Best,
Christy

Christy, I can give you much more information on the inner workings of the Chicago Board of Elections. It's an extremely partisan organization that has been working on behalf of the Democrats for decades. They got sloppy in this most recent matter, and it was bad enough to draw public attention. But what isn't public is that their behavior is part of a larger pattern of giving an advantage to one party in ways both large and small.

We had to sue them in federal court last year to stop them from trying to install Democrats in internal Republican Party positions. (Hard to believe, but true.) We won, and the judge wasn't kind to them. But it's rare that we can get them into federal court when they step over the line. (Here's the case, if you're curious: http://cookcountyrecord.com/stories/511011314-judge-not-a-close-case-chicago-gop-has-right-to-exclude-dem-voters-from-committeeman-ranks)

I would like to bring some of the problems to the attention of the Commission. Tell me how best to proceed. I'd be happy to have a call with you, or to do a succinct write up on our experiences with them.

I believe a broader investigation into their practices is more than warranted.

The comments to my Hill piece below have been surprising, and show the necessity of educating Trump supporters that centralizing election control in Washington D.C. is a very bad idea, no matter who is President. They seem to think just because Trump is the President, Washington is the solution and centralization of election control is good. This is the fallacy that affects a number of Trump supporters. Centralizing control (even if through the Time Place Manner provisions of the Constitution) always helps the Left.

No, we don't need national voting standards

By J. Christian Adams, opinion contributor - 02/13/17 10:00 AM EST 203

How has the American constitutional system managed to survive 230 years despite the alleged scourge of voter confusion, long lines at polling places, and Russian hacking? Why do we still not have national voting standards? The answer is simple: Alexander Hamilton and James Madison knew what they were doing.

Professor Bradley Blakeman took to the pages of this publication declaring that "it makes sense that there be uniform standards in federal elections that insure all Americans are treated equally and fairly when exercising their most valued right as a citizen." The last thing we need is Washington, D.C. issuing more standards.

Stepping outside of the academy, it makes no sense for Vermont and Hawaii be held to the same standards of selecting the number and locations of polling places they should provide — let alone how many voting machines each should have therein. It makes even less sense to adopt a uniform voting machine for all Americans, especially after the Dutch demonstrated that using a single system invited the undivided attention of hackers.

The Constitution gives states the power to run their own elections. The vast majority of proposals advanced by Prof. Blakeman are already state law of one form or another with understandable, state-specific variations. The professor's individual ideas are not the problem, but his belief that Washington, D.C. is the solution is wrong.

Perhaps most alarming is Professor Blakeman's charge that "it makes no sense that states have the power to make their own rules and requirements with regard to federal elections." Really? That nonsensical arrangement was the subject of much deliberation by the Founders.

The only reason the federal government was given any power to set the terms for electing federal offices was because of a fear of suffocation, that the states would suffocate the federal government by not holding any elections. (Federalist No. 59). In 2017, suffocation of the federal government by the states is hardly a problem we face.

The opposite is true.

States like Kansas and Georgia recently petitioned the U.S. Election Assistance Commission, an entity charged with producing the federal voter registration form, to include in their state-specific instructions that proofs of citizenship be incorporated into the registration process.

Following recent, reinforcing Supreme Court rulings holding that states are tasked with setting voter qualifications, the EAC adjusted state forms. Shortly thereafter, the Commission was sued by leftist organizations to block the change in instructions.

The Obama Justice Department decided to align itself with the plaintiffs, despite its pre-existing obligation to defend the EAC. Kansas is now more vulnerable to illegal voting because unelected federal attorneys decided to override an exclusively state function.

Today, states are fighting the federal government to execute their Constitutional duty to craft and uphold reasonable voter qualifications especially where keeping noncitizens from casting ballots is involved.

Professor Blakeman's initial proposals for federal standards may offer something for everyone, but he cannot reasonably trust an increasingly polarized Washington to resist the temptation to shift rules to benefit incumbent powers.

Decentralization over the power of elections helps preserve liberty. Central authority is the problem, not state governments crafting election systems best suited to their local needs.

Decentralization also provides an inherent form of security that transcends technological advancement. During the height of the Russian hacking scare of 2016, election officials knew the doomsday scenarios pitched by Washington were practically impossible. All the decentralized election systems make hacking a fruitless endeavor.

Fifty different databases of voters house registration files, each connected to hundreds of other databases designed to pipe in new voter information. Counties and municipalities engage with different vendors for voting hard- and software.

Officers print ballots and select polling locations to fit local needs and languages. Professor Blakeman's calls for "uniformity" would reduce the target to just one.

Finally, decentralization naturally serves the most vulnerable of voters. In the vast majority of the thousands of jurisdictions, local election officials have relationships with their constituents.

Transferring that power to Washington, where some distant bureaucrat across the continent must opine about any change drives a wedge between the citizen and the franchise.

Election administration is, at its core, a customer service function best performed locally. The genius of the Constitution was the decentralization of power and decision making. When it comes to something so important as states holding elections, that Constitutional design shouldn't be scrapped so the federal government dictates more rules to the states.

I have not forgotten and will be bringing this up at our first Presidential Commission meeting on July 19. I've been reading the stories/conspiracy theories about your NVRA letter and the Commission's letter going out to the States on the same day and am amused at all the speculation and conclusions in them. Hopefully between DOJ and the Commission we can clean up the voter rolls. For the life of me, I don't know why people should be against cleaning them up. Of course, that's a rhetorical statement, because I do know why some people are against it. In any case, here's to continuing to do what's right for our country and the voters! Thank you for your sacrifices and all your efforts.

I'm doing well and hope you are too.

John,

It appears that the Election Integrity Commission is finally gearing up. They're in the press today.

Did you succeed in passing this matter on to anyone on the Commission? This might be a good time to ping them again.

Chris

Here it is:

In January the Chicago Republican Party filed a FOIA request with the Chicago Board of Elections for the list of voters who had voted in the November 2016 general elections.

The board responded with a list of 1,101,178 individuals. A quick check of the elections returns published on the Chicago Board of Elections website showed that 1,115,664 votes had been cast. The difference between the number of voters in the file and the number of votes cast was 14,000, or about 1.3%.

There should be never be more votes than voters; every ballot cast should be recorded against a registered voter.

A breakdown of the votes by precinct shows that the discrepancies are not evenly distributed. Fifteen precincts show 100 more ballots cast than voters. One precinct shows more ballots cast than registered voters. Some precincts show a negative discrepancy, that is, more voters than votes cast. Subtracting out those precincts, the total discrepancy is about 16,000 votes or 1.4%.

The Chicago Republican Party made an inquiry, pursuant to FOIA, as to the source of the discrepancies. Despite repeated followups, the board has failed to respond except to say that they have been "reviewing all discrepancies" and that there will be a "final report". It's been more than three months since the first inquiry and more than six weeks since the report was due. At this point it seems to be more than a simple clerical error.

Given the history of voter fraud in Chicago, the magnitude of the problem, and the Chicago Board of Election's history of favoring the Democrats, the problem warrants external scrutiny.

A spreadsheet is attached. Tab one shows the discrepancies by precinct. Tab two shows the same data sorted with the largest discrepancies first.

Good to hear from you. I don't have any relationship with the task force, but if you'd like to send me a write-up, I'll see if I can get it to someone who does.

Thanks.

John,

Thanks for speaking with me a few weeks back about the discrepancies in Chicago's vote.

I saw this today:

Do you have any relationship with this group? Do you know anyone in charge there? I'd like to get a brief writeup on the problem into someone's hands.

Christy:

Thanks. I'll put Chris Cleveland in touch with you directly.

I hadn't heard about the ACLU suit, but that is unbelievable.

I am thrilled for Maureen that the opportunity opened up for her. I am sure she is knocking it out of the park! Would love to catch up at some point, particularly once we have our confirmed head, which after today is looking much better.

We are doing what we can to fight the good fight - glad to be in the trenches with you!

Best,
John

Hi John,

Hope you are well. I sent the info on the Chicago issue (deleting your email address and messages from it) to the staff of the presidential commission a couple of months ago so we can co super it and hopefully investigate it. Please feel free to give Chris Cleveland my contact info. I'd be happy to talk to him.

Did you see the ACLU lawsuit against California for throwing out 40,000 or so ballots? I read that California's defense was that the ballots were tossed because signatures on them didn't match. If that's not admitting that there is voter fraud, then is it otherwise admitting to voter suppression? I have 't read the actual filings, but given the Secretary of State out there says there's no voter fraud, I find it quite fascinating.

I know you must be crazy busy, but would love to catch up soon - maybe we can find some time in October. I spoke to Maureen this week and she told me about her detail to the Western District of Virginia. I honestly don't know how you're doing it! God bless you!!!

Best,
Christy

Hi Maureen,

Here is the HAVA Grant Report that shows the HAVA monies provided to each state and the balances. This report is the latest we have - in fact, another one was due a couple of weeks ago, but our grants people have not provided it to me yet. As soon as I get a copy, I will forward it to you. I think they were waiting on some of the reports that are due from the states.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

I still need to provide you with a link to whatever NVRA list maintenance guidance we have - as soon as I get that, I will send it to you.

Thanks!

Christy

THE U.S. ELECTION ASSISTANCE COMMISSION

ANNUAL GRANT EXPENDITURE REPORT

FISCAL YEAR 2015

March 2016

Overview

The Election Assistance Commission (EAC) was created by Congress in 2002 to improve the administration of elections for Federal offices through funding, guidance and policy development under the Help America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA). HAVA funds support State and local voting districts in upgrading systems for casting votes, registering voters in statewide voter registration databases, providing provisional voting options, and implementing other improvements to the administration of Federal elections that include training for election officials and poll workers, polling place accessibility improvements, and information on how and where to vote.

EAC has administered nearly $3.3 billion in Federal funds to States and other eligible entities since its inception.

Grants Expenditure Summary

Through September 30, 2015, a total of $3,247,294,645[1] has been made available to the 50 States, American Samoa, the District of Columbia, Guam, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the United States Virgin Islands (hereinafter referred to as States) under HAVA. States have reported total expenditures of $3,197,438,400 or 89% percent of total Federal funds and accrued interest available under Sections 101, 102 and 251 of HAVA (See Attachment A).

Election Reform—Formula Funds
HAVA Section 101 Payments Supports activities that improve the administration of Federal elections. Year: 2003 Award amount: $349 million Status: 85% Expended Funds are available to States until expended
HAVA Section 251 Requirements Payments Supports States in becoming compliant with Title III of HAVA Years: 2003, 2004, 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011 Amount: $2.604 billion Status: 89% Expended Funds available to States until expended

[1] This includes $300.3 million in Section 102 funds that were appropriated for the replacement of punch card or lever voting machines. Thirty States received Section 102 funds. States were required to expend funds under this section by November 2010 and return any remaining funds to EAC for disbursement as Section 251 funds.

HAVA SECTION 101 Funds

A total of $349,182,267 was disbursed to States in 2003 under Section 101 of HAVA, which provided funds to States for activities to improve the administration of Federal elections. As of September 30, 2015, States reported total expenditures of $338,048,344 or 85% percent of the funds awarded and accrued interest. Twenty three (23) States have spent all of their Section 101 funds and interest and another 14 States have spent at least 90 percent of their funds. Table 1 provides a full accounting of expenditures by State.

HAVA SECTION 251 Funds

Section 251 funds, known as Requirements Payments, were distributed to the States using a formula based on a percentage equal to the quotient of the voting age population of each State and the total voting age population of all States. HAVA requires that States deposit Section 251 money in interest bearing state election accounts.

With over 85% of HAVA Section 251 expended, state spending is accelerating. In FY 2015 annual spending was $108 million, up from $75.5 million in 2014 and $65 million in 2013.

As of the September 2015, Ten (10) States have reported using 100 percent of their HAVA Requirements Payment funds (including interest) while another 24 States reported using almost 90 percent of their funds and interest. States reported cumulative expenditures of $2,559,820,225 (86% percent of funds and accrued interest) through September 30, 2015 (See Table 2)

Meeting went well. Good discussion on elections including EAC, DOJ and DHS. Was told Senator McConnell is very interested in elections.

Sitting in the car dealership re-reading the district court opinion in NC. SMH -again - on how partisan the Appeals Court opinion was.

We won in EDVA on these briefs (PILF vs. [Manassas City])

United States District Court
Eastern District of Virginia
Alexandria Division

The PUBLIC INTEREST LEGAL FOUNDATION Plaintiff, v. SUSAN REED, in her official capacity as General Registrar for the City of Manassas, Defendant.	No. 1:16-CV-1375-GBL-MSN RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS

RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO SUSAN REED'S MOTION TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO RULE 12(B)(6)

Plaintiff Public Interest Legal Foundation ("PILF"), through counsel, files this response in opposition to the Defendant Susan Reed's Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) (Dkt. 8).

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

This is an action brought under the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 ("NVRA"), 52 U.S.C. § 20501, et seq., to enforce obligations of election officials to allow inspection and photocopying of election records. 52 U.S.C. § 20507(i)(1). Plaintiff seeks election records from Defendant cataloging the list maintenance of registrations of those registrants found ineligible to vote because of problems with the registrant's United States citizenship status. The Defendant does not contest that she has failed to make the requested records available to Plaintiff. The Defendant has repeatedly refused to provide these list maintenance records even though multiple local election registrars from other jurisdictions in the Commonwealth have already provided Plaintiff the same records for their respective counties. (Compl. ¶ 8-16, 33-34.) Defendant's motion relies entirely on a single statute to deny inspection rights. This statute, part of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, Pub. L. 103-322, § 300002(a), 108 Stat. 1796 (1994), codified at 18 U.S.C. § 2721, has nothing to do with election list maintenance records or this case. Lastly, Defendant's motion is contrary to the unanimous weight of authority in rulings by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia and other federal courts which have held that list maintenance records must be disclosed, even if the records contain derivative data originally captured by motor vehicle departments or contain arguably private information.

12(b)(6) STANDARD

The standard of review governing a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss is well established. While a complaint need not contain detailed factual allegations, it must plead "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). A Rule 12(b)(6) motion should be granted "only if it is clear that no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations." Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A., 534 U.S. 506, 514 (2002). In addition, this Court must "accept as true all well-pleaded allegations" and should construe those allegations in the light most favorable to a plaintiff. Mylan Labs., Inc. v. Matkari, 7 F.3d 1130, 1134 (4th Cir. 1993). "Rule 12(b)(6)'s purpose is to test the sufficiency of a complaint and not to resolve contests surrounding the facts, the merits of a claim, or the applicability of defenses." Presley v. City of Charlottesville, 464 F.3d 480, 483 (4th Cir. 2006) (quotations and citations omitted). A Rule 12(b)(6) motion should be granted "only if it is clear that no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations." Swierkiewicz, 534 U.S. at 514.

I. The statute relied on by the Defendant has no relevance to this case.

The Complaint states that, beginning on August 8, 2016, the Plaintiff repeatedly and unsuccessfully sought particular election records from the Defendant. (Compl. ¶ 8-16). The Plaintiff sought, inter alia, the list of registrants whose registration the Defendant cancelled due to problems with the registrant's United States citizenship status.

The National Voter Registration Act provides Plaintiff broad rights to inspect election list maintenance records upon request. Records "concerning the implementation of programs and activities conducted for the purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of official lists of eligible voters" must be made available to members of the public upon request directed to a custodian of those records pursuant to the NVRA. 52 U.S.C. § 20507(i)(1). The statute does not merely require the defendant to photocopy the records and at some point mail the records to a requesting party, such as a state freedom of information act statute typically requires. It mandates that defendant "shall make available for public inspection" the records. Id. The NVRA public inspection provisions are far more expansive than most typical state freedom of information act statutes, and certainly Virginia's. Compare 52 U.S.C. § 20507(i)(1) with Va. Code § 2.2-3704(C) (NVRA has no procedure to extend or delay right to immediate inspection of records). The NVRA does not provide a deadline by which an election official must provide the records, and instead relies on the statutory notice period before a suit may be brought found in 52 U.S.C. § 20510(b), a notice period which is not in issue in this motion and has been satisfied by the Plaintiff. Moreover, "where available," requestors have a right to "photocopying at a reasonable cost" of these records. 52 U.S.C. § 20507(i)(1). As we shall see below, courts have interpreted these NVRA public inspection rights to election list maintenance records broadly, and fatally to Defendant's motion to dismiss. Requesting parties may both physically inspect election list maintenance records as well as photocopy them pursuant to 52 U.S.C. § 20507.

The Defendant has denied, and continues to deny, access to publically inspect these records and would not provide duplications to the Plaintiff. (Compl. ¶¶ 11-12). Specifically, on August 8, 2016, the Plaintiff sought the following, as plead in the Complaint:

1. Documents regarding all registrants who were identified as potentially not satisfying the citizenship requirements for registration from any information source, including information obtained from the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles or from the Virginia State Board of Elections since 2011. This request extends to all documents that provide the name of the registrant, the voting history of such registrant, the nature and content of any notice sent to the registrant, including the date of the notice, the response (if any) of the registrant, and actions taken regarding the registrant's registration (if any) and the date of the action. This request extends to electronic records capable of compilation.

2. All communications regarding your list maintenance activities relating to #1 above to the Commonwealth's Attorney, Virginia Attorney General, Virginia State Police, any other state law enforcement agencies, the United States Attorney's office, or the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

3. The total voting-age population in your jurisdiction as of the date of your response; and

4. The total number of voters registered in your jurisdiction as of the date of your response.

(Compl. ¶ 8.) It is true that the Plaintiff's request mentioned documents "including information obtained from the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles," but the requests went far beyond that category of documents and unambiguously went far beyond motor vehicle records. Indeed, the request detailed in the Complaint included election list maintenance records that facially have nothing to do with the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles.

Three Sub-classes of Records Sought

The request above included requests for these sub-classes of documents, none of which have been provided by Defendant:

a. Documents regarding all registrants who were identified as potentially not satisfying the citizenship requirements for registration from any information source.

b. Documents that provide the names of the registrant who were identified as potentially not satisfying the citizenship requirements for registration from any information source.

c. All documents providing the nature and content of any notice sent to any registrant potentially not satisfying the citizenship requirements for registration, including the date of the notice, the response (if any) of the registrant, and actions taken regarding the registrant's registration (if any) and the date of the action.

Note that these three subclasses of requested documents listed in the Complaint make no mention of motor vehicle information and specifically seek election list maintenance records having nothing to do whatsoever with motor vehicle records. Nevertheless, Defendant's sole defense relies on a federal statute that has nothing to do with the above three subclasses of list maintenance records: the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, Pub. L. 103-322, § 300002(a), codified at 18 U.S.C. § 2721.

A closer examination of the plain language of 18 U.S.C. § 2721 reveals it has nothing to do with this case. It states:

> (a) In General.—A State department of motor vehicles, and any officer, employee, or contractor thereof, shall not knowingly disclose or otherwise make available to any person or entity:
>
> (1) personal information, as defined in 18 U.S.C. 2725(3), about any individual obtained by the department in connection with a motor vehicle record, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section; or
> (2) highly restricted personal information, as defined in 18 U.S.C. 2725(4), about any individual obtained by the department in connection with a motor vehicle record, without the express consent of the person to whom such information applies, except uses permitted in subsections (b)(1), (b)(4), (b)(6), and (b)(9).

18 U.S.C. § 2721. Personal information is defined by 18 U.S.C. § 2725(3) as: "information that identifies an individual, including an individual's photograph, social security number, driver identification number, name, address (but not the 5-digit zip code), telephone number, and medical or disability information, but does not include information on vehicular accidents, driving violations, and driver's status." The only possible information sought by the Plaintiff that even appears on this list is a name. As discussed below, Defendant's argument regarding 18 U.S.C. § 2721 would produce an absurd result in interpreting the NVRA public records provisions.

"Highly restricted personal information" is defined by 18 U.S.C. 2725(4) is "an individual's photograph or image, social security number, medical or disability information." Nothing of that sort has even been sought by the Plaintiff. Thus, the only arguable record which 18 U.S.C. § 2721 prevents from release is a name. As discussed below, withholding the name of a registrant is plainly not permitted by the NVRA.

Defendant's reliance on this statute to deny public review of election records is misplaced for multiple reasons. Remember, Plaintiff sought election list maintenance documents from the three classes of records discussed above regarding registration records which were ultimately scrutinized or cancelled for problems with citizenship status of the registrants.[1] Plaintiff's requests were not made to a state motor vehicle agency. The requests were made to the Defendant county general election registrar. Plaintiff's requests do not involve motor vehicle information. They seek list maintenance records of a local registrar tasked with maintaining voter rolls free of non-citizens.

Yet the plain language of the statute relied upon by the Defendant does not pertain to a local general election registrar. The statute relied on restricts only state motor vehicle departments. The statute's reach is limited to a "State department of motor vehicles, and any officer, employee, or contractor." 18 U.S.C. § 2721(a). Defendant is not within the reach of the statute. Defendant is not the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles. Defendant is not an "officer" of the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles, nor an "employee." Nor is the Defendant a contractor with the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles. Contractor is defined as "one that contracts, a party to a bargain: one that formally undertakes to do something for another." Webster's Third New International Dictionary, 2002, or "a party to a contract, 2. More specif., one who contracts to do work or provide supplies for another." Blacks Law Dictionary, 9th ed. 2009. Defendant has no contractual relationship whatsoever with the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles, much less one envisioned by the term "contactor" in § 2721(a). Defendant is a stand-alone local constitutional office, and not a contractor under § 2721(a).

[1] Multiple federal felony statues implicate non-citizens who register to vote. 18 U.S.C. § 611 makes it a felony for non-citizens to vote in federal elections. 18 U.S.C. § 1015 makes it a felony to make false statements, including on voter registration forms, in order to register to vote or to vote in any Federal, State, or local election. 52 U.S.C. § 20511 makes the fraudulent submission of voter registration applications and the fraudulent casting of ballots a felony. It is also a felony for an individual to simply "falsely and willfully represent[] himself to be a citizen of the United States." 18 U.S.C § 911. The Virginia Constitution also mandates that only American citizens may register to vote. Va. Const., Art. II, Sec. 1.

Defendant is not even a state officer of any sort. In any event, Defendant carries the heavy burden of a motion to dismiss and has made no showing whatsoever to the contrary that Defendant is a "contractor" as envisioned by § 2721(a). Nor could it because a 12(b)(6) motion may not test "the applicability of defenses." Presley, 464 F.3d at 483. Defendant's motion is better suited as an affirmative defense or basis to seek summary judgment.

But the fact that Defendant's office is not covered by the plain meaning on § 2721(a) is just the first of several problems with Defendant's reliance on 18 U.S.C. § 2721. Next, the Plaintiff has sought information from voter registration records, not motor vehicle records. Section 2721 only pertains to motor vehicle records. Plaintiff has not sought records "obtained by the [motor vehicle] department in connection with a motor vehicle record" as used in § 2721(1)(emphasis added). It has sought election list maintenance records such as notices mailed by a local election official to potential non-citizens on the registration rolls, the dispositions of those election inquiries by an election official, and records of cancellations of election registrations pursuant to those inquiries.

The Plaintiff's inquiry, as demonstrated by the responses from numerous other general registrars to the Plaintiff across the Commonwealth, has nothing to do with motor vehicle records. For example, Plaintiff included as "Exhibit B" to Plaintiff's Complaint the first page of a response from the Prince William County general registrar to an identical request. Prince William was one of multiple counties which provided, rather than denied, the requested records. Exhibit B does not come from the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles and plainly contains no motor vehicle information whatsoever. It is an election list maintenance record, not a motor vehicle record. Plaintiff seeks the same record for the Defendant's county.[2]

The Plaintiff requested election records maintained by the Defendant to conduct voter roll list maintenance. Plaintiff requested records that have nothing to do with the motor vehicle records or state department of motor vehicles covered by 18 U.S.C. § 2721. It is true that Plaintiff's request provided a multipart request "including information obtained from the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles or from the Virginia State Board of Elections." But the mention of the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles sourced records was inclusive, not exclusive. Defendant's motion inappropriately lumps all of Plaintiff's discrete requests, no matter the source, into one motor vehicle category – as if Plaintiff had asked for all records "only from the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles." Plaintiff made no such request, and Defendant cannot now rely on a statute which has nothing to do with the three subclasses of records sought.

Finally, if Defendant is actually arguing that any list maintenance record which can trace its heritage to any nexus with a state motor vehicle agency, it has reduced the point to the absurd. The only record the Defendant can plausibly bar under personal information listed in 18 U.S.C. § 2725(3) would be the name of the registrant. Defendant's argument would prohibit the release of the name of any registered voter to any party. It would fully eradicate the public records rights enacted by the NVRA (also known as "Motor Voter") when it made both DMV and social service agencies voter registration entities. Motor vehicle agencies are not the only agencies

[2] Contrary to assertions made by the Defendant, the Plaintiff has absolutely not received the requested records regarding the Defendant's county from any other source or even been offered the same. Even if Plaintiff had received the requested records from any other source, it would not absolve Defendant's obligation under the NVRA to permit an inspection of the same.

where voter registration is mandated under the NVRA. Even if motor vehicle records provided to general registrars may not be disclosed, the derivative list maintenance activities certainly must be disclosed, particularly the cancellation of voter registrations.[3] To accept Defendant's argument would obliterate public inspection rights to any election records which can trace its origin to some prior processing by a motor vehicle agency. Accepting Defendant's extreme position would fundamentally reorder the political landscape of the Commonwealth and deny voter information to Legislators and other entities who have relied on it for decades or more. It is reductio ad absurdum if a registration record could never be disclosed to anyone if it contained the name of someone that once provided information to a motor vehicle agency pursuant to NVRA.

II. The Motion to Dismiss should be denied because the unanimous weight of authority supports Plaintiff.

The overwhelming weight of authority supports denial of Defendant's motion and Plaintiff's rights under the NVRA to inspect the requested documents. Under strikingly similar circumstances, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, the Fourth Circuit and other federal courts found that public inspection and information rights under the NVRA support denial of the Defendant's motion. See Project Vote v. Long, 682 F.3d 331, 334-335 (4th Cir. Va. 2012) (affirming summary judgment in favor of plaintiff NVRA records requestor); Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 752 F. Supp. 2d 697, 703-704 (E.D. Va.

[3] For example, Plaintiff's three subsets of requested records detailed in this response do not include any records subject to Virginia Code Ann. § 24.2-410.1(B), which is a motor vehicle department non-citizen list. To the extent that Plaintiff was denied inspection rights to that discrete subset of information sought (and which is plainly not contained in the three classes detailed in this response), any denial based on Virginia Code Ann. § 24.2-410.1(B) would be invalid based on the Supremacy Clause and inspection rights to list maintenance records under 52 U.S.C. § 20507(i)(1). Contrary to Defendant's motion, Plaintiff is not pressing that claim and has sought three subclasses of records which are facially not DMV records in the Complaint.

2010) (denying defendants 12(b)(6) motion in NVRA public inspection case); Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 813 F.Supp.2d 738, 742-43 (E.D. Va. 2011) (granting summary judgement for plaintiff/requestor in NVRA public inspection rights case); Project Vote v. Kemp, No. 1:16-cv-2445-WSD, 2016 WL 5092512, ___ F. Supp.3d ___, *11-14, (N.D. Ga., Sept. 20, 2016) (denying defendant's motion to dismiss in NVRA public inspection case and granting injunctive relief to plaintiff records requestor).

There can be no debate that "the NVRA provides a public right to information." Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 752 F. Supp. 2d at 703. Plaintiffs therefore "need show [no] more than that they sought and were denied specific agency records." Id. at 703 (internal citations omitted) (brackets in original). The two Project Vote rulings in the same litigation regarding public inspection rights under the NVRA by the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia as well as the Fourth Circuit's affirmation in Project Vote strongly support denial of Defendant's motion. In Project Vote, plaintiffs sought voter registration and list maintenance records, namely voter registration forms. Id. at 699. Defendants there raised similar arguments to the arguments now being raised by the Defendant in this case— namely, that the NVRA did not require the disclosure of the requested information and various other federal statutes and state exemptions superseded NVRA public inspection rights. All three opinions by the district court and Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals in Project Vote are contrary to the Defendant's position.

In the first opinion in Project Vote, the district court denied a 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. As a preliminary matter "the court must first determine what constitutes a program or activity conducted for the purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of official lists of eligible voters." Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 752 F. Supp. 2d at 705. In this case, Plaintiff seeks records specifically related to activities aimed at ensuring the accuracy of the official lists of eligible voters, namely whether certain registrations were examined or canceled due to problems with citizenship status. It is hard to imagine a record more germane to public inspection rights of the NVRA. The "process by which the Commonwealth determines whether a person is eligible to vote certainly falls within the purview of the federal statute, as such a process, by its very nature, is designed to ensure that the Commonwealth's lists are current and accurate." Id. at 706.

The district court rejected the defendant's arguments in Project Vote that disclosure under the NVRA of certain personally identifying information, such as names of registrants subject to cancellation, would frustrate the purposes of the NVRA.

> The court disagrees. As a general matter, the statute identifies the information which Congress specifically wished to keep confidential, and sections of the statute require that the state inform applicants that such information will be kept confidential and used for limited purposes. . . . Similarly, the statute explicitly requires that other information related to voter registration, which to some persons may be considered sensitive, be disclosed to the public. See 42 U.S.C. § 1973gg–6(i)(2) (subjecting to disclosure lists including the "names and addresses" of persons to whom notices are sent regarding their removal from the voter rolls.)

Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 752 F. Supp. 2d at 710 (emphasis added). This is precisely the sort of information the Plaintiff requested in the three subclasses of information sought— including names of registrants who received notices of possible citizenship defects and the ultimate disposition of those inquiries and the date of disposition.

In granting the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment in Project Vote, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia also rejected the defense that public inspection rights were inconsistent with other federal statutes, and should so again here. "The court disagrees with this position. The instant dispute only involves the proper interpretation of the NVRA's Public Disclosure Provision. Disclosure of the completed voter registration applications does not implicate" either the Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment Act or Help America Vote Act.[4] Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 813 F. Supp. 2d at 743. The district court also specifically rejected the defense that various state laws prohibited the inspection of election records: "Furthermore, to the extent that any Virginia law, rule, or regulation forecloses disclosure of completed voter registration applications with the voters' SSNs redacted, the court FINDS that it is preempted by the NVRA." Id. If Virginia law prohibits disclosure of documents pertaining to list maintenance activity, that state statute is preempted.

Defendant's effort to narrow the scope of the holdings in Project Vote should be rejected. Remember, in denying the defendant's 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss in Project Vote, the court considered it an elementary question that records related to actual list maintenance and registrant removal programs were unquestionably subject to disclosure under the NVRA. Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 752 F. Supp. 2d at 706. The plaintiff sought information beyond actual list maintenance and registrant removal records— namely the voter registration forms themselves. At issue in Project Vote was whether underlying voter registration forms (some of which were likely filled out in a motor vehicle agency) were also subject to disclosure even though they were not specifically mentioned in the NVRA disclosure provisions.

The district court ruled against the defendant and held that the NVRA reaches beyond mere list maintenance records. Whether records related to list maintenance and cancellation of registrations were subject to disclosure was not a close call. The court relied on the plain text of the statute and ruled that the records subject to disclosure were expansive. "As the statute requires disclosure of 'all records' relating to voter registration procedures, a fortiori voter registration applications, which obviously so relate, must also be disclosed." Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 752 F. Supp. 2d 697 at 706 n.14. Thus, the court rejected the defendant's 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss because NVRA public inspection rights superseded any state created exemptions and were not in conflict with other federal laws. Accordingly, even registration forms were subject to disclosure.

Defendant's argument that Project Vote "is factually distinguishable from the requested information in the current matter" (Mot. to Dismiss ¶ 22) somehow manages to misunderstand the posture of Project Vote and the fact no party in that case disputed that list maintenance documents detailing the processing of registrant cancellations are subject to disclosure under NVRA. Project Vote was a dispute about whether voter registration forms are also list maintenance records. Defendant somehow misunderstands this central characteristic of Project Vote.

After denying a motion to dismiss, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia subsequently granted summary judgment to the requesting NVRA plaintiff in the second Project Vote opinion. Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 813 F.Supp.2d at 742-43. Defendants there sought to treat an NVRA public inspection request like a Virginia Freedom of Information Act request and limit actual physical inspection rights. The district court rejected the defense: "Additionally, to the extent that the Virginia statute limits the availability of the Requested Records to the public for inspection and photocopying, it is superseded by the NVRA, pursuant to the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution." Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 813 F.Supp.2d at 741.

In granting summary judgment to the plaintiff-record requestor, the district court again interpreted the NVRA public inspection rights broadly. A "program or activity covered by the Public Disclosure Provision is one conducted to ensure that the state is keeping a 'most recent' and errorless account of which persons are qualified or entitled to vote within the state." Id. at 742 (internal citation omitted). The three subclasses of information sought by the Plaintiff are virtually synonymous with what the Project Vote court held is subject to disclosure under NVRA.

In entering injunctive relief for the requesting plaintiff in Project Vote, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia ordered the release of all requested information, save for social security numbers, and ordered that "the defendants will need to remove language on Virginia's voter registration application that claims the application is not subject to public disclosure." Project Vote Voting for America v. Long, 813 F.Supp.2d at 746. Thus, the district court found that there could be no genuine issue of material fact when a defendant election official denies public inspection rights to any list maintenance record or voter registration form that does not include social security numbers and granted the plaintiff summary judgment.

The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the district court's denial of the defendant's motion to dismiss and grant of summary judgment to a plaintiff requestor under NVRA. Project Vote v. Long, 682 F.3d 331, 334-335 (4th Cir. Va. 2012).

> Finally, as explained above, Section 8(i)(1) of the NVRA mandates public disclosure of voter registration activities. It generally requires states to make available for public inspection and, where available, photocopying at a reasonable cost, all records concerning the implementation of programs and activities conducted for the purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of official lists of eligible voters.

Id. at 334 (internal citations and quotations omitted). The court rejected the argument that only "voter removal" records were subject to disclosure and held the reach of documents subject to inspection included voter registration forms. "First, the process of reviewing voter registration applications is a 'program' and 'activity.' Under Virginia law, election officials must examine completed voter registration applications and register applicants that possess the necessary qualifications." Id. at 335. It again bears mention that both the district court and Fourth Circuit found it a settled question that "voter removal" records of the sort sought by Plaintiff here are certainly within the reach of the NVRA, even if Defendant seeks to "factually distinguish" Project Vote from this case. Defendant's effort to limit the reach of the Project Vote cases is misguided.

The court noted that voter registration forms were subject to disclosure because evaluating their completeness was "conducted for the purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of official lists of eligible voters." Id. The importance of disclosing records regarding "accuracy" and "currency" were the touchstones of public disclosure requirements under the NVRA to the Fourth Circuit. Records related to the accuracy and the currency of the registration lists simply must be disclosed. Records related to whether registrants were removed for defective citizenship status is squarely within this obligation.

"Finally, the fact that [Section 8(i)(1)] very clearly requires that 'all records' be disclosed brings voter registration applications within its reach." Project Vote v. Long, 682 F.3d at 336 (emphasis added). The Fourth Circuit went further on this point: "As this court has recognized, 'the use of the word 'all' [as a modifier] suggests an expansive meaning because 'all' is a term of great breadth.'" Id. (brackets in original). "Because the NVRA requires disclosure of all materials described in Section 8(i)(1), including voter registration records, defendants must permit inspection of the completed applications, as instructed by the district court."[5]

The Fourth Circuit lastly rejected the defendant's claim that other federal statutes prohibit the disclosure of information for the same statutory construction reasons this Court should reject Defendant's similar defense: "Appellants' argument ignores the plain language of the MOVE Act, which expressly limits the application of its security and privacy provisions to personal data conveyed during the voter form request process." Project Vote v. Long, 682 F.3d at 338. For the reasons discussed above, the plain language of the statute Defendant relies on to block release of information offers no defense.

The Fourth Circuit held that the importance of transparency in the election process through NVRA disclosure outweighs any privacy concerns. "Public disclosure promotes transparency in the voting process, and courts should be loath to reject a legislative effort so germane to the integrity of federal elections." Id. 339-40. As Defendant does here in this case before this Court regarding the public disclosure provisions of the NVRA, "[i]n the end, appellants ask us to revisit issues already resolved by the Congress." Project Vote v. Long, 682 F.3d 331, at 340.

Lastly, Defendant could resolve this dispute by providing a document that would take minutes to print from computers in Defendant's office, as many other local general registrars have already done for the Plaintiff. The fact that the data is in electronic form does not absolve

[5] Nor was the court willing to entertain that a list in the NVRA of some documents subject to disclosure precluded documents not listed. "First, the statute clearly states that 'all records' falling under Section 8(i)(1) must be publicly disclosed, not just those explicitly listed in Section 8(i)(2). Moreover, as the district court recognized at the motion to dismiss hearing, the term 'shall include' sets 'a floor, not a ceiling.'" Project Vote v. Long, 682 F.3d at 337 (internal citations omitted).

Defendant from compliance with the NVRA. The district court denied a motion to dismiss and granted summary judgment for a plaintiff-NVRA requestor in the recent case of Project Vote v. Kemp, No. 1:16-cv-2445-WSD, 2016 WL 5092512, ___ F. Supp.3d ___, *11-*14, (N.D. Ga. Sept. 20, 201. There, the court rejected the defense that electronic records are not subject to disclosure. "Interpreting 'records' to exclude information contained within electronic databases also would allow States to circumvent their NVRA disclosure obligations simply by choosing to store information in a particular manner. Given the ubiquity and ease of electronic storage, this would effectively render Section 8(i) a nullity." Id. at *12. The district court accordingly denied a motion to dismiss and entered injunctive relief against the defendant ordering the disclosure of records.

For these reasons, Defendant's motion to dismiss should be denied.

Counsel for Defendant

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Richmond Division

THE PUBLIC INTEREST LEGAL FOUNDATION, INC. Plaintiff, v. SUSAN REED, in her official capacity as General Registrar for the City of Manassas, Defendant.	)	Civ. No. 1:16-CV-1375

SUSAN REED'S REPLY TO PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

Susan Reed ("Defendant"), in her official capacity as General Registrar for the City of Manassas, by counsel, respectfully submits this Reply to Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition to Defendant's Motion to Dismiss pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). In connection therewith, Defendant respectfully states as follows:

Procedural Background

The Public Interest Legal Foundation, Inc. ("Plaintiff") commenced this adversary proceeding by filing a Complaint on October 31, 2016 seeking declaratory and injunctive relief to compel Defendant's compliance with Section 8 of the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 ("NVRA"). Defendant filed a motion to dismiss on November 25, 2016. Plaintiff filed its Memorandum in Opposition to Defendant's Motion to Dismiss on December 6, 2016.

Argument

I. Non-Citizenship Cancellation Reports Derived from the DMV Are Prohibited From Disclosure

Plaintiff asserts that its requests for non-citizenship cancellation reports "do not involve motor vehicle information" and that they "seek list maintenance records of a local registrar tasked with maintaining voter rolls free of non-citizens." Specifically, Plaintiff argues that its requests pertain to three subclasses of information that relate to all list maintenance. However, all of the information requested related to the non-citizenship of persons and their identities is entirely derived from Department of Motor Vehicle ("DMV") records, and is therefore only property disclosed under discrete circumstances found in 18 U.S.C. § 2721(b) and (c). The plaintiff falls outside of the class of persons to whom this information is lawfully available.

The NVRA specifies that list maintenance documents are "records concerning the implementation of programs and activities conducted for the purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of official lists of eligible voters, except to the extent that such records relate to a declination to register to vote or to the identity of a voter registration agency through which any particular voter is registered." 42 U.S.C. § 1973gg-67(i)(l). Plaintiff may access such information through inspection of the voter rolls and voter registration documents. In its Complaint, Plaintiff focuses its request on "records showing individuals whose voter registrations have been cancelled because they were determined to not be United States citizens." Comp. ¶ 10. While the disclosure requirements have been interpreted broadly, there is no authority establishing that non-citizenship cancellation reports must be disclosed under the NVRA. The information in non-citizenship cancellation reports derives from the DMV. As such, the non-citizenship cancellation reports are distinctly different from the list maintenance documents created and maintained in the Office of the General Registrar.

Plaintiff erroneously posits that 18 U.S.C. § 2721 applies only to disclosures by the DMV. This contention is flawed. Section 2721(b) allows the DMV to disclose "personal information" to "any government agency, including any court of law enforcement agency, in carrying out its function . . . ." Consequently, the DMV is permitted to disclose non-citizenship cancellation reports to the General Registrar, an official of a government agency; however, this disclosure does not extend to list maintenance requests made by private citizens. Section 2721(c) prohibits re-disclosure by an authorized recipient (the General Registrar) to those who fall outside of the exceptions enumerated in Section 2721(b). The plaintiff does not fall under the exception found in paragraph (b)(1) and cannot reasonable be said to be assisting any government agency in carrying out its functions. Rather, providing the personal information to the General Registrar for the express purpose of disclosing the information to a private citizen would be a direct violation of the prohibition established in Section 2721.

Additionally, Plaintiff contends that the information requested relates to voter registration records and not motor vehicle records. Specifically, Plaintiff requests documents "regarding all registrants who were identified as potentially not satisfying the citizenship requirements for registration from any information source"; "provid[ing] the names of the registrant who were identified as potentially not satisfying the citizenship requirements for registration from any information source"; and "provid[ing] the nature and content of any notice sent to any registrant potentially not satisfying the citizenship requirements for registration." Despite these initial vague requests, in its Complaint, Plaintiff elaborates and solely focuses solely on disclosure of "duplicate records showing individuals whose voter registrations have been cancelled because they were determined not to be United States citizens (hereafter, the "noncitizen cancellation reports")." Compl. ¶ 10.

While Plaintiff argues that its request is not restricted to the DMV, all of the information requested by the Plaintiff derives from the DMV. Mandating disclosure of the information would require the DMV to knowingly provide the information to the General Registrar for disclosure to a non-governmental private entity. Such disclosure would contradict the express prohibitions under Section 2721. Accordingly, the information is prohibited from disclosure.

II. Project Vote Pertained to Voter Registration Information and Is Distinguishable

Plaintiff argues that the "overwhelming weight of authority" supports denial of Defendant's motion by contending that the Project Vote cases are dispositive of the current matter. Project Vote dealt with a non-profit group that sought to increase voter registration. See Project Vote Voting for Am., Inc. v. Long, 682 F.3d 331 (4th Cir. 2012); Project Vote Voting for Am., Inc. v. Long, 813 F. Supp. 2d 738 (E.D. Va. 2011); Project Vote Voting for Am., Inc. v. Long, 752 F. Supp. 2d 697 (E.D. Va. 2010). The plaintiffs in Project Vote specifically requested

> "completed voter registration applications of any individual who timely submitted an application at any time from January 1, 2008, through October 31, 2008, who was not registered to vote in time for the November 4, 2008 general election," as well as "documents identifying the reasons the applications were rejected."

682 F.3d at 332 (emphasis added). In the current matter, Plaintiff request "duplicate records showing individuals whose voter registrations have been cancelled because they were determined not to be United States citizens." Consequently, the information requested is not voter registration applications and is entirely different than the requested information at issue in Project Vote.

First, as previously established, the information requested is directly derived from the DMV and is prohibited under Section 2721(a). Additionally, while the voter registration information in Project Vote did not deal with non-citizenship cancellation requests, the Fourth Circuit did address information relating to citizenship under the NVRA. Specifically, the Fourth Circuit found

> [w]ithout verification of an applicant's citizenship, age, and other necessary information provided by registration applications, state officials would be unable to determine whether that applicant meets the statutory requirements for inclusion in official voting lists. Thus, completed applications not only "concern[ ] the implementation of" the voter registration process, but are also integral to its execution

682 F.3d at 336 (emphasis added). In analyzing Plaintiff's request for voter registration applications, the Fourth Circuit suggests that citizenship information can be provided by registration applications. Id. The relevant non-citizenship information requested by Plaintiff is accessible through the normal information divulged by state election officials in voter registration applications. While not presented with a request for non-citizenship cancellation reports, the Fourth Circuit found that voter registration applications were sufficiently detailed to provide citizenship information when determining whether individuals were properly included in voting lists. Id. Rather than supporting Plaintiff's contention, Project Vote demonstrates that the information sought by Plaintiff can be received through voter registration applications and other information normally sought under the NVRA.

Lastly, improper disclosure of personal information protected by the DMV has led to incidents of danger and harassment to the victim. In Margan v. Niles, the plaintiff, who had been hired to administer the defendant's workers' compensation case, hired a team of private investigators to gather information regarding the defendant's alleged compensable work-related injury. 250 F.Supp.2d 63, 66 (E.D.N.Y. 2003). In response, the defendant accessed personal information from the DMV through his friend, a police officer, and went to the plaintiffs' homes, "engaged in acts of vandalism" and harassment towards the plaintiffs. Id. at 66-67. Specifically, the defendants went to the plaintiff's home, "videotaped her family, including her children; delivered the videotape together with a threatening note to her home; sent her flowers with a threatening greeting card attached; and otherwise harassed or threatened her." Id. at 66. Margan is a striking example of why the personal information at issue is prohibited from disclosure and the utility Section 2721 serves in protecting private citizens from unnecessary disclosure. Allowing the Plaintiff access to the protected information within the non-citizenship cancellation reports would needlessly place many Virginia residents at risk of similar harassment and threatening conduct.

As such, Plaintiff's request is prohibited from disclosure under Section 2721 and accessible through voter registration applications. Accordingly, this Court should grant Defendant's Motion to Dismiss pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) and dismiss the Complaint with prejudice.

WHEREFORE, Susan Reed, in her official capacity as General Registrar for the City of Manassas, respectfully requests that the Court: (i) dismiss the Complaint filed by the Public Interest Legal Foundation, Inc. with prejudice for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6); and (ii) grant Defendant such other and further relief as may be just and proper.

Respectfully submitted,

SUSAN REED, in her official capacity
General Registrar for the City of Manassas

v.	)	Case No. 1:16-cv-01375
SUSAN REED, in her official capacity as General Registrar for the City of Manassas,	)
Defendant.	)

ORDER

THIS MATTER comes before the Court on Defendant Susan Reed's Motion to Dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. (Dkt. No. 8.) Plaintiff, The Public Interest Legal Foundation, Inc., brought this suit under Section 8 of the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 ("NVRA"), 52 U.S.C. § 20507, seeking declaratory and injunctive relief to order Defendant, in her official capacity as General Registrar for the City of Manassas, to allow Plaintiff to inspect voter records.

Defendant has moved to dismiss the Complaint on the grounds that the privacy provision of the Driver Privacy Protection Act of 1994 ("DPPA"), 18 U.S.C. §§ 2721-2725, overrides the public disclosure provision of the NVRA under the circumstances of this case. The Court finds that the DPPA does not apply to the disclosure of the voter information requested by Plaintiff. Because Plaintiff has stated a plausible claim for declaratory and injunctive relief, it is hereby ORDERED that Defendant Susan Reed's Motion to Dismiss is DENIED.

You're welcome. The FEC Guidance on Implementing the NVRA is SUPER OLD - one doc is from 1994, and the other is from 1998. I'm attaching the 94 doc here and will send you the 98 doc in a separate email (this email work-around doesn't have enough bandwidth for attaching both.)

I'll be working from home in the morning tomorrow and then heading up to DC for an early evening event. Feel free to call whenever.

Hi Maureen,

Here is the HAVA Grant Report that shows the HAVA monies provided to each state and the balances. This report is the latest we have - in fact, another one was due a couple of weeks ago, but our grants people have not provided it to me yet. As soon as I get a copy, I will forward it to you. I think they were waiting on some of the reports that are due from the states.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

I still need to provide you with a link to whatever NVRA list maintenance guidance we have - as soon as I get that, I will send it to you.

Thanks!

Implementing the National Voter Registration Act: A Report to State and Local Election Officials on Problems and Solutions Discovered 1995 – 1996

Prepared by:
The Office of Election Administration
Federal Election Commission
Washington, D.C. 20463
March 1998

What is the Office of Election Administration?

The Office of Election Administration (formerly known as the National Clearinghouse on Election Administration) is a division of the United States Federal Election Commission. Our purpose is to help State and local election officials ensure the integrity and efficiency of the election process. We pursue this mission through research, publications, conferences, speaking engagements, and by providing information on a broad spectrum of election related matters free of charge to State, local, and international election officials, legislators, academics, the media, and the general public.

If you have questions about federal election related legislation or about the election process in general, please feel free to contact us at the numbers and addresses provided on the inside of the back cover.

What is Their Role in the National Voter Registration Act?

The National Voter Registration Act of 1993 specifically requires the Federal Election Commission (1) to provide information to the States regarding their responsibilities under the Act, (2) to design the national mail registration form, and (3) to report to the Congress each two years on the impact of the NVRA on the administration of elections.

Accordingly, in 1993, the FEC's Office of Election Administration provided the States with a guide to Implementing the National Voter Registration Act of 1993: Requirements, Issues, Approaches, and Examples. In 1994, we provided the States camera-ready copy and a modest supply of the national mail registration form and accompanying booklet. And, of course, we submitted the required report to the Congress in both 1995 and 1997.

We remain available to answer any questions you may have about the NVRA or to discuss any problems you may be having with it -- although the enforcement authority of the Act is the Department of Justice. But if you have questions or problems, please do not hesitate to contact us at the numbers or addresses provided on the inside back cover.

Office of Legislative Affairs

Office of the Assistant Attorney General Washington, D.C. 20530

DEC 0 1 2017

The Honorable Sheldon Whitehouse
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Whitehouse:

This responds to your letter to the Attorney General and the Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division dated July 11, 2017, and your letter to the Attorney General, Deputy Attorney General, Associate Attorney General, and Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division dated September 26, 2017, regarding activities of the Department of Justice (Department) and the Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity (the Commission). We are sending similar responses to the other Senators who joined your letter. We apologize for our delay in responding to your letters.

We appreciate your concerns about voting rights issues, and we agree that the right to vote is fundamental to our democracy and that the importance of access to the ballot for all Americans is paramount. Your letters request responses to a list of specific questions, including requests for documents. It is important to note that attorneys from the Department's Civil Division are currently representing the Commission in ongoing civil litigation. Accordingly, they communicate with the Commission's attorneys on a regular basis, and with members of the Commission as necessary to gather information related to the litigation. Pursuant to longstanding policy it is not appropriate for the Department to provide documents or records of communications that may implicate ongoing litigation. While we cannot respond to each of your individual inquiries, we are pleased to provide the following information about the role of the Department as it relates to voting rights and the Commission.

Your letters asked about the role of the Department in the official activities of the Commission. The Commission is a part of the Executive Office of the President, rather than the Department. The Department and the Civil Rights Division (Division) are not affiliated with the Commission's official activities. Indeed, the Division does not have jurisdiction to investigate or prosecute fraudulent voter registration or fraudulent voting. See 28 C.F.R. § 0.50(a). Beyond representing the Commission in litigation, we are not aware of Department resources currently being used to support the Commission.

Your July 11th letter also references two letters sent to states on June 28, 2017, requesting additional information about their procedures for maintaining voter registration lists – one from the Department and a separate letter from the Commission. The Department did not coordinate the sending of its June 28th letter with the Commission. To the best of our knowledge, the sending of the Division's letter and the Commission's letter on the same day was sheer coincidence.

The Division routinely makes requests for data and information from states and localities as part of its enforcement responsibilities under all of the federal voting rights laws, including the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA), the Help America Vote Act (HAVA), the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA), and the Voting Rights Act (VRA). In fact, through the NVRA, Congress specifically authorized the Department to seek election-related information from states and localities. See 52 U.S.C. §§ 20703, 20705. The Division seeks to work cooperatively with jurisdictions to obtain the necessary information to conduct its enforcement responsibilities.

Prior to June 2017, the Division's last round of requests to various states for list maintenance information under the NVRA took place several years ago. However, the Division does not maintain a centralized record of all such previous requests for information. Please note that information regarding data that either was or was not provided by the states in response to a 2014 survey administered by the Election Assistance Commission (EAC) survey is publicly available on the EAC's website.

Your July 11th letter also inquired about the Department's position in Ohio A. Philip Randolph Institute v. Husted. The Supreme Court recently granted certiorari to consider the issue of when a state can legally remove voters from registration lists under the NVRA and HAVA. Consistent with the Department's usual practice, the Office of the Solicitor General reviewed the case and decided to participate as an amicus. The Office of the Solicitor General has filed its amicus brief, a copy of which is enclosed. Because this litigation is currently pending, the Department is not in a position to comment further.

With respect to your questions about the Commission's compliance with privacy laws, we note that the Department's Office of Privacy and Civil Liberties is responsible only for assessing whether activities conducted by the Department require a privacy impact assessment; it is not responsible for assessing activities outside of those conducted by the Department, such as the Commission. Likewise, the Department is not responsible for ensuring that data collected and stored by the Commission will not be in violation of existing state or federal law, and thus cannot speak to steps the Commission may have taken in this regard. We respectfully refer you to the Commission for that information.

Your September 26th letter also inquired about certain Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests that the Department has received. As with all FOIA requests, the Department followed its standard procedures in responding to the FOIA request from the Campaign Legal Center. The Department appropriately used Exemption 6 of the FOIA to protect personal contact information in accordance with statute and the Department's Guide to the Freedom of Information Act Exemption 6, which is available at https://www.justice.gov/sites/default/files/oip/legacy/2014/07/23/exemption6.pdf. In response to your request, we are enclosing a complete set of all the documents furnished to the Campaign

Legal Center in response to that organization's FOIA request received by the Department on February 15, 2017, and a complete set of the documents furnished to the Brennan Center for Justice in response to that organization's FOIA request received by the Department on July 25, 2017.

Additionally, your September 26th letter asked about the use of private email addresses to conduct government business. The Department briefs incoming staff members about the prohibitions on the use of personal accounts and the timing and appropriate capture of business information. DOJ policy 0804.01, which has been in place since May 8, 2015, explicitly prohibits the use of personal accounts for Departmental business except in exigent circumstances. The policy requires that under those circumstances, the employee must assure capture of Departmental information in Departmental recordkeeping systems within 20 days. This policy ensures that all agency records are incorporated within a Department recordkeeping system that would be searched in response to a FOIA request. Please note that in the instance referenced in your letter the email in question was forwarded to the Attorney General's official email account, which captured the record in the Department's recordkeeping systems, consistent with Department policies and Federal Records Act requirements.

Your September 26th letter also raised concerns about responsiveness to Congressional correspondence. Upon my confirmation as Assistant Attorney General in August 2017, the Office of Legislative Affairs began a comprehensive review of all outstanding Congressional correspondence, and, where appropriate, is now working to respond. The Department's backlog of overdue letters was extensive, including several hundred unanswered letters dating back to 2015. In the past 90 days, we have made significant progress, though much work remains. We are working to provide responses to your inquiries, however, in doing so, the Department must continue to prioritize inquiries from the Chairmen of the various Committees that exercise oversight over the Department's programs, policies, and activities. Our goal is to be as responsive as possible without hindering the other important work the Department is doing, consistent with the Department's significant law enforcement, litigation, and national security responsibilities.

We hope this information is helpful. Please do not hesitate to contact this office if we may provide additional assistance regarding this or any other matter.

Sincerely,

Stephen E. Boyd
Assistant Attorney General
