1 (9:20 0' CLOCK, A. M.)

2 THE COURT: I received a copy of the 3 Defendant's, Intervenor Defendant's trial exhibit list.

4 Appreciate that.

5 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, if I might, there was, I

6 think, one thing that we neglected to include on the list,

7 which is in addition to the affidavit of Donald Green

8 dated June 26, 2008, there should also be the expert

9 report and supplemental expert report of Donald Green.

10 THE COURT: All right. That's in connection 11 with the entry on page three?

12 MS. YOUN: Yes, correct, halfway down the page.

13 THE COURT: All right, thank you.

14 Before we get started, I wanted to raise one 15 issue kind of as a follow-up to what we talked about 16 yesterday on the aggregation question, and I want to refer 17 counsel to the Defendant's and Intervenor Defendants joint 18 motion for partial summary judgment, specifically the 19 memorandum in support. This says in further support of 20 that motion, which is document 301-2.

21 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, if I may, is 22 that on October 3rd, 2008?

23 THE COURT: No, November 19.

24 MS. YOUN: Yes, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: All right. At pages four to five,

1 there's some statements made that I just wanted to follow
2 up on. The first is on page four of the second full 3 paragraph, second sentence, "When such independent 4 expenditures exceed the matching fund threshold or when 5 the sum of the aggregate independent expenditures and 6 expenditures made by a nonparticipating opponent exceeds 7 the matching fund threshold, the matching funds in the 8 amount of the excessive expenditure is awarded to the 9 participating candidate."

10 And then on page five, the first full paragraph, 11 "Sections 9, 7, 13 and 9714 can also work in combination 12 so that the sum of nonparticipating candidate expenditures 13 and independent expenditures may trigger the release of 14 funds to a participating candidate." And then that gives 15 an example that is at odds with my understanding of what

16 we talked about yesterday and I just want to be clear 17 which is correct.

18 MS. YOUN: Sure, and I wanted to apologize for 19 that submission, Your Honor. At the time we submitted 20 this brief, that -- the interpretation that's set forth 21 here is not clear from the face of the statute but is not 22 barred from the, by the face of the statute. At that time 23 we were under the impression that that interpretation of 24 the statute was still a possibility. Since then, we have 25 been informed by the SEEC that they are not in fact

1 going to interpret the statute to, you know, to allow for 2 that kind of aggregation, either for independent
3 expenditures or for excess expenditures. I think, I guess 4 because it's a facial challenge, I think that that 5 interpretation of the statute is still open. That's the 6 one that they informed us they are intending to make.

7 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, I don't want to 8 add further confusion here. We actually had a conference 9 call to discuss this last night because it is the state's 10 position, the SEEC's position that with respect to 11 excess expenditures, which really relate to a high 12 spending opponent, and the language of the statute 9713 13 talks -- doesn't refer at all to aggregation. It is the 14 SEEC's position, the SEEC hasn't had the opportunity yet 15 to apply that but it is the SEEC's position that we have 16 through Director Rotman, that there is no aggregation, 17 except of one, a single candidate's aggregating a single 18 candidate's expenditures. But you would not in that 19 circumstance under the excess expenditure provision 20 aggregate across candidates. Independent expenditures,

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
21 Your Honor, do involve some aggregation, there's a 22 specific section, the last section of 9714 that does 23 discuss aggregation.

24 THE COURT: All right. Help me understand from 25 an evidentiary point of view what I have here. What

244

1 you're telling me is you have an oral representation from 2 the SEEC that that's not how they intend to interpret the 3 statute.

4 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: You know, we can supplement
5 the record with a declaration, if necessary, but we do 6 think that that is the, that that is the proper 7 construction based on the language of 9713, because it 8 talks about expenditures or expenditure by an opponent and 9 really the thrust of this, of this section is to deal with 10 a high spending opponent, and there's nothing in this, 11 there was nothing in this section that refers at all to 12 aggregating, and I contrast, Your Honor, with 9714, sub C
13 I believe it's two, which talked about aggregating.

14 So, you know, we do believe, Your Honor, that 15 that is, you know, we are certainly happy to supplement 16 with a declaration clarifying what we believe is the 17 appropriate construction. That is, that excess 18 expenditures don't aggregate across candidates but that 19 independent expenditures do aggregate across and to these 20 individuals, but we think that construction is the proper 21 construction on the face of the statute, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: Well, all right. Let's look at 23 9714(c)(2). It doesn't use the word "aggregate" but it 24 uses the word "combined with."

25 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: That's what I'm referring 245

1 to, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: Right. So it says the additional 3 monies under Subsections A, B of this section to match
4 independent expenditures shall be granted to a qualified 5 candidate committee who have a participating candidate 6 opposed by a nonparticipating candidate only if the 7 nonparticipating candidate's campaign expenditures
8 combined with the amount of the independent expenditures 9 exceed the amount of the applicable grant authorized.

10 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Yes.

11 THE COURT: Now --

12 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: So that, Your Honor, is what 13 we suggest requires aggregation under the independent 14 expenditure reference, but we didn't see, Your Honor, 15 anything in 9713 that uses aggregating combined with or 16 any parallel language to suggest that there's aggregating 17 across candidates, Your Honor, under the excess 18 expenditure provision.

19 THE COURT: Well, wait a minute, what about 20 9713(a)?

21 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Well, there, Your Honor, it
22 talks about expenditures made by a nonparticipating
23 candidate. So -- and so, you know, it really only refers 24 in all of these subsections and the subsections are 25 largely identical, they just talk about the different

1 steps, excess expenditure grants, but it really just 2 refers to, to a nonparticipating opponent's candidate's 3 expenditure.

4 I mean I just don't see, Your Honor, we don't 5 see -- you know, it would require, I guess, an inference

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
6 that we don't see in the statutory language to suggest 7 aggregating across candidates.

8 (Pause)

9 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: And there was also an 10 administrative right behind which, as the expenditures are 11 made, the candidate would use the expenditure, there is an 12 aggregation by the SEEC and at some point that aggregation 13 exceed the, in the first instance a 90 percent amount 14 which would sort of set the stage for the first stage 15 excess expenditure supplemental grant.

16 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, we would submit that the 17 word "aggregate" would be unnecessary to the construction 18 that the attorney general is urging, and it makes sense if 19 you are a legislature who wants to insulate or protect the 20 participating candidate to combine all the spending by, or 21 to aggregate all the spending by nonparticipating 22 candidates so that the participating candidate is never 23 placed at a spending disadvantage. And I think that's 24 pretty plainly -- we've always understood the statute to 25 mean that.

247

1 So we believe that it does cross endorse, and we 2 certainly agree with them on independent expenditures that 3 it, that the numbers are aggregated for purposes of 4 triggering independent expenditures.

5 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Well, Your Honor, I don't 6 know that the legislature intended to make a participating 7 candidate of the resources, of all of the combined
8 opponent's resources. It makes sort of a super resourced 9 candidate in, for example, a gubernatorial race where 10 there could be two or three other opponents. What we've 11 always understood this to show, and what we think the 12 language of the statute requires, is that we talk about a 13 high spending opponent, and that is the language where we 14 talk about a singular opponent in the first sentence of 15 all these subsections by a nonparticipating candidate.

16 Your Honor, we -- you know, I do think it is 17 correct, as Attorney Youn suggests, that particularly at 18 this stage, a facial challenge stage, there ought to be a 19 particular deference to the, you know, to the construction 20 by the administrative body responsible for construing
21 this. We're happy to put in that affidavit but, you know, 22 I don't see any language here. I do suggest in cross 23 aggregation and, you know, that is in stark contrast, I 24 think, to 9714.

25 THE COURT: All right. Is there anywhere in the 248

1 statute where the legislature anticipated that the 2 participating candidate could face a challenge by more 3 than one nonparticipating candidate? I don't see it in 4 these sections. Doesn't seem --

5 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Well, I think there's 6 always, I mean that's always a reality, that there are -- 7 I mean there's certainly nothing in the statutes that 8 would take I think the set off limiting the number of 9 candidates in a number of candidates.

10 THE COURT: No, that's not what I'm saying. Did 11 the legislature make it clear one way or the other --

12 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, there's nothing 13 explicitly that talks about that, but the understanding is 14 that one high spending opponent, nonparticipating, could 15 trigger excess, multiple excess expenditure grants if 16 there were, for example, two participating candidates.

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
17 So, if you had, for example, a self-funded --

18 THE COURT: Right.

19 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: -- third party candidate, 20 that would trigger one. Once that candidate reached the 21 threshold, could trigger in both instances where the 22 participating candidate's excess expenditures --

23 THE COURT: The question though is what happens 24 if I have a self-funded nonparticipating candidate who's 25 very careful and doesn't want to trigger and then you have

1 a minor party who comes in and spends another 30-, 40,000?

2 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: It's our position, Your 3 Honor, that you don't aggregate in that circumstance.

4 THE COURT: Okay. All right, but just to be 5 clear, the aggregation provisions of 9713 --

6 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: I think what we would see, 7 given the language in 9713, I think what we see in 9713
8 language, for example, that might say an expenditure by a 9 nonparticipating opponent combined with other 10 expenditures, if we were going to be consistent 11 language-wise across 9713 and 9714.

12 THE COURT: Actually I meant to focus back on 13 9714(c)(2). Under (c)(2), you aggregate all independent 14 expenditures plus the nonparticipating candidate's 15 campaign expenditures when deciding whether --

16 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Yes.

17 THE COURT: -- that trigger is met.

18 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: That's our position, Your 19 Honor.

20 THE COURT: Okay. That's helpful.

21 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Thank you, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: Thank you. You mentioned

23 supplementing the record. Do you want to submit anything 24 in writing that would --

25 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: You know, I think that might

1 help to clarify the record, Your Honor. We're very happy
2 to do that. If the court is willing to receive that kind 3 of a declaration, we'd be happy to submit it.

4 MR. LOPEZ: Yes, Your Honor. I guess we're 5 getting ahead of ourselves. I can see us briefing this 6 issue. The Attorney General actually made a dramatic 7 change in our view, in this law unrelated to the trigger 8 provision but having to do with the minor party candidates 9 while qualifying at the petitioning process.

10 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: That wasn't --

11 MR. LOPEZ: But that was done after the law was 12 in effect for two years. It was done by declaratory 13 ruling and under the state law declaratory rulings have 14 binding effect. Anything short of a declaratory ruling 15 has no binding effect on the Attorney General and, in 16 fact, can be repudiated and can go in a different 17 direction at any time.

18 I raise this, A, because there is case law. The 19 preponderance of case law supports the idea that the 20 statute can't be amended by representations made in court
21 or by declarations. It has to be done by the legislature 22 or at the very least through the rule-making process.
23 And, if you'll recall from yesterday, I referred to a 24 binding effect of an organizational fact sheet, I believe 25 it was, and I was corrected by Attorney General

251

1 Murphy-Osborne or Counsel Youn that that has no binding

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
2 effect on the, the agency responsible for administering
3 the CEP.

4 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, just a couple 5 points. The declaratory ruling issue with respect to 6 petitioning wasn't initiated by the Attorney General's 7 office. That was by the SEEC. And also in connection 8 with some official action taken by the Secretary of State.
9 We're not amending the statute; you are, Your Honor. What 10 we're suggesting to you is what our administrative 11 construction of the statute is.

12 You know, we may be -- and I apologize, in fact 13 we are and I do apologize for it -- contradicting a 14 representation made in a brief. I take responsibility for 15 that. You know, we are happy to give you, for whatever 16 Your Honor thinks it's worth, our official, and in this 17 instance it would be an official statement by Beth Rotman 18 suggesting what we believe is the proper construction, but 19 it certainly isn't by way of amendment of the statute.

20 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, we do apologize for the 21 representation that was made in the brief. One reason we 22 find ourselves in this situation, I think it bears 23 repeating, is because we're talking about a series of 24 hypothetical injuries that have not occurred yet. Every 25 statute, when it is passed, has gray areas that are, you

252

1 know, those gaps are then filled by, by the administering
2 agency. In this case the injuries that we're talking 3 about, these kind of aggregation and cross aggregation 4 hypotheticals have not occurred and, thus, the SEEC has 5 not had occasion to issue declaratory rulings to fill 6 these gaps. They haven't had a chance to do that yet 7 and -- but on a facial challenge, we think that the, you

8 know, this court is required to construe the statute. As 9 long as the statute is open to interpretation that does 10 not cause a sort of injury that plaintiffs are claiming, 11 then we are entitled to the benefit of that 12 interpretation.

13 MR. LOPEZ: Well, under that logic, Your Honor, 14 you could give the benefit of the interpretation to every 15 provision of the statute that they argue doesn't 16 discriminate the way it, the statute appears to 17 discriminate on the face of the statute. And this 18 language, I think, very -- I don't know how clear it is, 19 because we seem to be debating it, but in my view the more 20 reasonable construction of this is that, you know, go with 21 this program.

22 You're going to hear testimony from George 23 Jepsen today, whose declaration -- and from Senator Meyers
24 through his declaration, that the only way public 25 financing is going to work is if we insulate these

253

1 candidates from the chance, no matter how remote, that 2 they are going to be placed on a spending disadvantage,
3 and this language would be consistent with that testimony,
4 Your Honor, and I would suggest it would be consistent 5 with what the legislature called for.

6 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, I don't think we 7 would review a candidate as a spending disadvantage. If 8 we are to look at, for example, presidential candidates
9 who are equally funded, I think we would view a candidate 10 at a spending disadvantage if there is one candidate who 11 has a high spending opponent and that is what we think 12 this refers to. And, by the way, we're not asking for the benefit of the doubt on statutory language that is 14 anything other than we think debatable or, in our view, 15 clear on our side of this debate.

13 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt

16 You know, we think this is at the very least a 17 very, very plausible and sensible construction that we're 18 suggesting. We do think in that instance in this context 19 at this stage we are entitled to that presumption, Your 20 Honor.

21 THE COURT: Well, I'm happy to receive the 22 declaration, and I'll tell you, there is what appears to 23 me on the face to be a plausible reading that the words in 24 the aggregate refers back not to the candidate but, 25 rather, to the words contributions, loans or other funds

1 have been received or that an expenditure is made or 2 obligated to be made. In other words, their expenditure 3 may well be that not just with expenditures but with the 4 combination of contributions, loans, funds, expenditures
5 and so forth.

6 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: And we'll address that in 7 the declaration, Your Honor, but that is sensible in the 8 administrative context because it's all of those sources 9 of funding that are reported by the, what says the high 10 spending opponent, but we'll address that, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: All right. Are the defense
12 attorneys ready for their case?

13 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, just to give you 14 a little bit of a road map I think where we anticipate 15 going, we discussed yesterday having discussion about any 16 objections that plaintiffs may have in light of our 17 exhibit list proffer. It was my understanding we would 18 handle that at the outset --

20
21
22
23
24
25

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: -- as we did yesterday, and then Attorney Dunn is going to present the testimony of our expert, Professor Green. Then I think we're going to conduct the same sort of factual recitation that Attorney Lopez did yesterday. Attorney Youn is going to handle that primarily. Others may have some input along the way.

And then I had anticipated by -- I originally anticipated doing what were in the nature of opening remarks but I think in light of our discussion yesterday, I think I'll reserve that for closing remarks at the appropriate time. And I think what that leaves on the table is I think a discussion about the pending issue about the 2008 data. So, and I as well as others -- the intervenor defendants may have some closing remarks as well but that's how we anticipate proceeding.

12

THE COURT: All right, that's fine. So let's start with the exhibits. Is the plaintiff prepared to indicate which exhibits you object to?

13
15
16
18

MR. LADOV: Yes, Your Honor. Our first objection was to the declaration of Jackie Thrasher. This was submitted as Document 310-3 on December 3rd. She's a member of the Arizona House of Representatives. She testified to some extent about her experience but I think the reason --

19

THE COURT: Go ahead, I'm listening.

20
22
23

MR. LADOV: So the reason that we object, and I think the reason that it's been introduced is for paragraph number eight where she speaks of an incident, an alleged incident I think in an Arizona election where

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
24 somebody who ran as a Green was really a shill for the 25 Republican party, we think as an entrant party effort of 256

1 bringing a newspaper report. There's no indication of 2 personal knowledge, and we also object on the ground of 3 relevance. We don't think an incident in Arizona of a 4 Republican abusing the system has any relevance to our 5 plaintiffs. And there certainly, if you look at paragraph 6 33 and their findings, which is what this refers back to, 7 there's no indication that this information was before the 8 Connecticut Legislature.

9 MS. YOUN: If I may respond, Your Honor?

10 THE COURT: Sure. Give me one minute. I still 11 haven't found this yet.

12 MR. LADOV: I think this was submitted as an 13 exhibit or an amendment to their findings of fact.

14 MS. YOUN: It's document 303?

15 MR. LADOV: Or 310 actually. I'm sorry, Docket 16 310-3.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, I'm sorry if this isn't 19 apparent from the -- isn't as clear as it might be from 20 the text of this, but the affiant here or the declarant is 21 indeed testifying from her personal knowledge. She is 22 testifying in paragraph eight about the race that she ran 23 in and lost to the Green Party candidate. And the quote 24 that, you know, she was considered a shill is a quote 25 taken from Jackie Thrasher herself and is quoted in the 257

1 newspaper article referenced there. It's not an attempt 2 to put in the fruit of that newspaper article, it's just 3 referring the Court to that as well in case the Court sees

4 any of those facts sufficient to take judicial notice.

5 With respect to the relevance objection, we are 6 not putting this in as a legislative document and we agree 7 that it would be inappropriate to do so. This was not 8 before the legislature. Indeed, it hadn't happened yet.
9 However, we are putting this in on the tailoring analysis 10 as to whether or not the tailoring of the threshold is 11 necessary to discourage abuses of the system or 12 participation in the CEP from candidates who have no 13 chance of being elected to office.

14 THE COURT: All right. Well --

15 MR. LADOV: Well, Your Honor, I guess if I 16 may --

17 THE COURT: Just a moment. Let me just inquire, 18 because there was nothing that indicates she has 19 knowledge, for example, of the second sentence. She had 20 been a registered Republican for years until four days 21 before she ran as a Green Party candidate. Then we have 22 financial reports concerning qualifying contributions. So 23 she's testifying in effect with double hearsay about 24 what's in some financial records that I haven't seen.
25 Then she's talking about what the Green Party itself said

1 which, again, is a double hearsay problem. You know, 2 there's the newspaper article, which is a double hearsay
3 problem.

4 MS. YOUN: Yes, I think the newspaper article 5 we're happy to leave out, but I think the substance of the 6 declaration here is that she was in this race and she did 7 lose to this candidate. And I think that as a, as a 8 candidate in that election, she -- I mean she knows from

9 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
her own personal knowledge that her opponent switched 10 parties four days before the election. I think that 11 that's a sufficient basis for personal knowledge.

12 MR. LADOV: Your Honor, we certainly have no
13 evidence from this declaration that she has personal 14 knowledge. We've had no opportunity to cross her on that, 15 so I think that we would argue that the hearsay problems 16 still stand and there is just no foundation here for 17 bringing that evidence.

18 MS. YOUN: You know, this is --

19 THE COURT: Let me just say this. I'm going to 20 overrule the objection for the following reasons. It 21 seems to me that the statements that are made here are 22 ones that can be confirmed or refuted through an 23 examination of public documents in the State of Arizona, 24 specifically required filings under their Clean Elections 25 Act, the party registration financial reports. These are 259

1 all matters that are a matter of public record in Arizona
2 that I can, that I can look at and confirm one way or the 3 other the veracity of these statements.

4 I'm going to keep out the statement about being 5 a shell because the only source for that is the newspaper
6 article, and it seems to me that that that sentence needs 7 to be excluded. But, again, the amounts received in 8 funding can be confirmed by the public records in Arizona.

9 MS. YOUN: With respect to that, and I would 10 just emphasize this is a candidate testifying to your own 11 personal knowledge of what's happening in the race around 12 you, even as Mr. DeRosa is able to say a Republican ran 13 against me and received this percentage of the vote and 14 received this amount of contributions. You know, it's 15 true that Mr. DeRosa may have learned that from going to 16 the Secretary of state's website and that may not be 17 apparent from the face of this declaration. But still, as 18 a candidate, I believe that that does overcome hearsay 19 because he does have sufficient personal knowledge of 20 events in which he is intimately involved.

21 THE COURT: You just won.

22 MS. YOUN: Okay. I'll sit down.

23 THE COURT: The only part I'm keeping out is the 24 statement from the newspaper which, you know -- I mean
25 that's at least double, if not triple hearsay. Somebody

1 said it reportly to a reporter who reports it in the 2 newspaper. She reads it and reports it to us, so maybe 3 it's quadruple hearsay.

4 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, if I may be heard, from 5 the first day that we entered into phase two, the parties
6 entered into an agreement which we submitted to the court 7 and which the court signed in which they agreed that they 8 would exchange the names of their affiants and make those 9 affiants available. We complied with those rules. Our 10 affiant that we have tendered has been made available for 11 deposition. On November -- on this last date we are 12 receiving testimony from someone in Maine who I never 13 heard of, someone in Arizona who I never heard of, someone 14 in New Jersey who I know of from the newspapers because 15 she ran in a high profile race, and I just want to raise 16 the additional objection that we've never had notice of 17 these affiants in the past.

18 Now, I know that we submitted Narain's 19 declaration only last week but Narain is a paralegal in my

20 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
office and I submit that his declaration stands on, in a 21 different relation than declarations from witnesses, like 22 the witness from Maine, but Narain's declaration, all 23 Narain's declaration does is confirm the data in the, the 24 data in the Nikolaidis declaration.

25 So, I would ask the court in reviewing its 261

1 decision on whether or not to let these declarations in 2 and consider them, the parties had an agreement about 3 tendering witnesses who would testify to the merits.

4 THE COURT: I understand your position and I
5 understand your frustration. The defendants will soon be 6 arguing that I should not consider this declaration 7 because it deals with the 2008 election, so, you know --

8 MR. LOPEZ: Okay.

9 THE COURT: -- it cuts both ways.

10 MS. YOUN: Certainly. And just to respond to 11 Attorney Lopez on the agreement argument, the only reason 12 we submitted these declarations on the date that we did is 13 because the Court had specifically asked us to provide 14 evidence of whether these, this kind of splinter candidacy 15 issue had occurred in other states, and the plaintiff did 16 not at that scheduling conference raise -- we said we 17 would provide it, the plaintiff did not indicate that he 18 objected to us providing this information at the court's 19 request.

20 THE COURT: Okay. What's the next objection?

21 MR. LADOV: So, Your Honor, the next objection 22 was to the declaration of Jonathan Wayne. This was also 23 attached as three -- sorry, 310-2 filed on December 3rd.

24 THE COURT: Okay.

25 MR. LADOV: I think our objections are similar.

1 Mr. Wayne is the executive director of the Maine
2 Commission on Government Ethics, but, again, when you read 3 through his declaration he appears to be relying on news
4 reports. It's not clear what, if any, of this is personal 5 knowledge. We don't know that there's any foundation that 6 any of this is personal knowledge.

7 To the extent that he's citing information that 8 is before the commission, we would certainly argue that, 9 that the defendant should have provided those citations 10 and that record, so that we would have the opportunity to 11 take this testimony, put it into context, respond to it 12 appropriately rather than through the hearsay news reports 13 that they are using.

14 And, again, just to sort of highlight a couple 15 of places, I mean in paragraph 11 on the last page, we had 16 Mr. Wayne quoting Glen Cummings, the outgoing speaker of 17 the Maine House, as quoted in a news report. So I mean 18 there's certainly double, if not triple hearsay problems 19 there. And I think, again, we would just object to the 20 entire declaration as lacking foundation and as hearsay.

21 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, if I may respond? This 22 is the Director of the Commission and he is submitting 23 evidence from his own personal knowledge regarding 24 testimony as is set out in paragraph seven that were, that 25 was submitted to this commission in the form of hearsay.

1 He's testifying about, for example, paragraph ten, the 2 commission received testimony that Laurel Rodgers (ph)
3 also attempted to recruit a homeless man, and the mere 4 fact this also appears in the newspaper articles

5 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
6 referenced does not mean that the basis for his knowledge 7 is those newspaper articles. Those, those references are 8 included for the court's convenience, but they are not the 9 foundation for this evidence.

10 MR. LADOV: I'm sorry, Your Honor, if I could 11 just add a relevance objection as well, I think we'd also 12 point out it's unclear whether the abuses that they are 13 discussing are even relevant to minor parties. For 14 example, paragraph nine, unless I'm missing something, 15 they discuss Sarah Trundy (ph) who ran against an 16 incumbent purportedly using the system. It's unclear what 17 her party affiliation is and whether any of this evidence 18 really speaks to the right of the government to 19 discriminate between major and minor parties.

20 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, this evidence goes to the 21 tailoring argument as to the necessity for the threshold 22 and the way in which it opens up a system to abuses of 23 someone's -- if a system's qualifications thresholds are 24 not sufficiently high to deter these kinds of abuses.
25 Now, we have never meant to cast any aspersions on the Green Party or the Libertarian party or any of 264

1 Connecticut's minor parties. You know, we don't believe 2 that they could be -- that they are fringe or in bad
3 faith. What we are talking about is instances of abuses 4 in other states and the reason why we think that setting 5 thresholds at the level they were set was well tailored by 6 the Connecticut Legislature.

7 MR. LADOV: I guess, Your Honor, I guess in 8 response I would add that the Maine qualifying criteria is 9 comparatively low compared to the Connecticut qualifying 10 criteria for qualifying parties. If that's what they are 11 trying to use this to argue, then I think we argue it's 12 more prejudicial than relevant.

13 MS. YOUN: That's an argument that goes to 14 weight rather than admissibility, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Well, all right. I'm going to 16 sustain the objection in part. I'm going to permit 17 paragraphs one through five, the first sentence of 18 paragraph six, the first sentence of paragraph seven, the 19 first sentence of paragraph ten. The rest is either 20 hearsay or irrelevant, it appears to me.

21 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, if I might be heard with 22 respect to the first two sentences of paragraph eight and 23 the first sentence of paragraph nine. Although those are, 24 although --

25 THE COURT: Yes, okay, the first two sentences

265

1 of paragraph eight, that's fine.

2 MS. YOUN: And first two sentences of paragraph 3 nine.

4 THE COURT: That's -- that's fine, too.

5 MS. YOUN: Oh, I'm sorry. Also the last 6 sentence of paragraph nine. I'm sorry. Because it would 7 have been the commission that issues such a finding.

8 THE COURT: That's fine. Okay. Next?

9 MR. LADOV: I think next, Your Honor, maybe we 10 could just make a standing objection rather than going 11 through all the declarations. I think along the lines of 12 our discussion yesterday, obviously we're not going to 13 object to any of the declarations to the extent that they 14 are bringing in personal knowledge, but to the extent that 15 fact witnesses are offering opinions that are beyond the scope of their personal knowledge, we would object.

17 I guess by way of example, looking at the 18 supplemental declaration of George Jepsen which was 19 submitted on December 3rd, the -- and this is filed as 20 Document 309-6.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. LADOV: So we certainly would have no 23 objections to the first, I believe two pages where he 24 talks about his personal experience, but then on page 25 three, all of a sudden we have him discussing the 266

1 experience of the Republican party, which he has no 2 personal knowledge of based on the declaration, and 3 discussing opinions about what a major party candidate 4 could or could not do. We would simply ask the court to 5 restrict the reading of paragraphs like that to any facts, 6 factual statements and narrow any opinions to what would 7 be personal experience.

8 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, with respect to 9 paragraphs 10, 11, 12 and 13, this is a declaration from 10 the former Chair of the Connecticut Democratic party.
11 He's talking about the party resources that could be 12 brought to bear basically to rescue a candidate in an 13 emergency. I'm happy to have the sections of paragraph 10 14 that refer to the Republican party struck but I think as 15 to the Democratic party, he is the appropriate witness and 16 the only witness who can testify to those facts and these 17 are well within his personal knowledge.

18 MR. LADOV: And I think, Your Honor, in 19 response, we would just caution against Mr. Jepsen being 20 permitted to testify to what major party candidates in 21 general can or can't do. If he wants to testify to what

22 the Connecticut Democratic party is able to do, of course 23 he's entitled to that.

24 THE COURT: In paragraph 10, I'm not going to 25 consider his statements about the Republican party, and in

267

1 general I will treat both sides' declarations the same in 2 terms of statements apparently beyond personal knowledge 3 or opinion statements from fact witnesses.

4 MR. LADOV: And, Your Honor, I think our only 5 other objection was to the -- it's an article about 6 Barrack Obama. It's Document 309-2. It's referenced in 7 paragraph 87.

8 THE COURT: I have it.

9 MR. LADOV: I think this is just hearsay. I
10 think to the extent the Court were to take judicial notice
11 of those facts, we would add there are a lot of reasons 12 why then Senator Obama did not decide to participate in 13 public financing, we would submit, and among those reasons 14 and perhaps the main reason, he had immobilized an army of 15 donors and raised far more money privately than he could 16 through the public system. And we would argue the 17 Obama/McCain race is a strong argument in favor of our 18 position on the troubling nature of excess expenditure.

19 MS. YOUN: That's an argument that goes to 20 weight rather than admissibility. This is evidence, a 21 statement from Senator Obama himself that evidences his 22 state of mind and the reasons that caused him not to 23 participate in the system.

24 THE COURT: But it's in a newspaper article.

25 MS. YOUN: It's a newspaper article he authored.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. LADOV: But --

MS. YOUN: And it is testimony of his state of mind.

THE COURT: It's an out-of-court statement of Mr. Obama offered for the truth presumably of what his state of mind was.

MS. YOUN: I think it's offered for the fact that -- it is offered for the fact that it is common knowledge that a public financing system that doesn't provide a means to defend against independent expenditures will cause participating -- will deter candidate participation in such a program, and this is a statement of that fact having been reported.

THE COURT: Okay. You know what? I'm going to exclude this newspaper article but both sides can argue all you want about the Obama/McCain race. I don't have to close my eyes to the world in making a ruling.

MS. YOUN: Okay. We would ask Your Honor to take judicial notice of the facts in the Obama/McCain campaigns --

THE COURT: There's a lot that happened in that campaign that you almost can't not know.

MS. YOUN: Yes.

MR. LADOV: I think that's all of our objections.

THE COURT: Okay, thank you.

MR. DUNN: Your Honor, we call Donald P. Green to testify.

THE COURT: All right. Please remain standing and raise your right hand.

7 DONALD P. GREEN, called as a
8 witness on behalf of the Defendants, having been duly 9 sworn by the Court, testified as follows:

10 THE COURT: Please be seated, state your full 11 name for the record and give us your business address.

12 THE WITNESS: My name is Donald P. Green,
13 D-O-N-A-L-D, G-R-E-E-N. My place of business is Yale
14 University where I'm professor of Political Science.

15 DIRECT EXAMINATION

16 BY MR. DUNN:

17 Q. Good morning, Professor Green.

18 A. Good morning.

19 Q. Professor, so that the lawyers can hear you, I would 20 just ask if you could keep your voice up a little bit.

21 You, from your first brief responses, appear to be a 22 little bit soft-spoken. So, I know you're used to 23 addressing large classes, so if you can just treat them 24 like a class, I think we'll be fine. Okay?

25 A. I'll do my best.

1 Q. Okay, thank you.

2 Professor, you just said that your professional 3 association is with Yale University. What position
4 specifically do you occupy at Yale?

5 A. I'm the A. Whitney Griswold Professor of Political 6 Science. I also direct Yale's Institution for Social and 7 Policy Studies.

8 Q. What is the Institution for Social and Policy
9 Studies?

10 A. It is a -- it is a policy institute resurgence 11 founded in 1968 to foster cross discipline collaboration

12 in the social sciences.
13 Q. How long have you been a professor at Yale 14 University?
15 A. This is my 20th year.
16 Q. And is all of that the Political Science Department?
17 A. Yes.
18 Q. And how long have you been the director of the 19 Institute?
20 A. I'm in my 13th year.
21 Q. And, by the way, what's the highest educational 22 degree that you hold?
23 A. I hold a Ph.D in Political Science from the 24 University of California, Berkeley.
25 Q. And when did you obtain that degree?

1 A. In 1988.
2 Q. So, if my arithmetic is correct, is it the case that 3 pretty much from your studies at the University of 4 California you came to Yale University?
5 A. That is correct.
6 Q. And since that time, you've taught and done research 7 at Yale, is that correct?
8 A. Yes.
9 Q. Has any of that research been in the areas of 10 elections and American elections in particular?
11 A. Yes, almost all of it. My specialty is American 12 politics with a special reference to campaigns, elections 13 and public opinion.
14 Q. And in the course of that research and teaching, have 15 you had occasion to focus at all on campaign expenditures
16 and their effect on American elections?
17 A. Yes, I've written extensively on that topic.

18 MR. DUNN: Your Honor, we have proffered
19 Professor Green as an expert and would ask that he be 20 permitted to testify as an expert in this action.

21 THE COURT: I don't understand there to be any 22 objection to that. Any objection to his expert 23 qualifications?

24 MR. LOPEZ: Well, Your Honor, I was going to 25 voir dire the witness when given the opportunity, but I'm 272

1 happy to wait and sort of conduct my voir dire as I go
2 through his expert -- as I go through my examination. I 3 don't know how the court wants to proceed.

4 I'm a little concerned about throwing the door
5 open and letting him testify to anything and everything 6 because I don't think he's qualified to testify to 7 everything he's testifying to in his report. But, rather 8 than have that fight now, I thought I'd go through it as I 9 got to those areas in his report.

10 THE COURT: It seems to me there's two issues.
11 One is do you want to voir dire about his expert 12 qualifications; that is his qualifications to testify as 13 an expert presumably in the area of the effect of 14 campaign funds on elections? Is that the proffer?

15 MR. DUNN: I'm sorry -- the effect on, on 16 elections and the effect of campaign financing and funding 17 on elections.

18 THE COURT: Okay. Do you want to voir dire his 19 qualifications to testify as an expert on that subject is 20 question one. Question two is do you want to cross 21 examine him about whether he really has any experience
22 that bears on the issue. That seems to be the cross

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
23 examination, not voir dire.

24 MR. LOPEZ: That's the second, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: All right. So I take it you're not

1 objecting then to his qualifications as an expert?

2 MR. LOPEZ: I am not.

3 THE COURT: All right. He's qualified as an 4 expert on the issue proffered.

5 BY MR. DUNN:

6 Q. Professor Green, did you prepare and submit a report 7 in connection -- well, first of all, were you retained in 8 connection with this matter?

9 A. Yes, I was.

10 Q. Who retained you?

11 A. The Brennan Center.

12 Q. And, in general, what was your understanding of the 13 nature of your retention?

14 A. That I would write a report and then perhaps I would 15 testify.

16 Q. And did you, in fact, prepare a report that you 17 understand has been submitted in this action?

18 A. Yes, I did.

19 Q. And did you then prepare a supplemental report at my 20 request?

21 A. Correct.

22 Q. And an affidavit, declaration that you submitted as 23 well?

24 A. Correct.

25 MR. DUNN: May I approach, Your Honor?

274

2 MR. DUNN: Okay.

3 BY MR. DUNN:

4 Q. Professor Green, I'm going to show you a copy of what 5 appears to be your declarati on dated June 26, 2008, and a 6 copy of what purports to be the expert report of Donald P.
7 Green and the supplemental expert report of Donald P.
8 Green.

9 MR. DUNN: Your Honor, for your convenience and 10 that of your clerk, I have copies and I have provided 11 copies to Mr. Lopez as well.

12 THE COURT: All right, thank you.

13 MR. DUNN: It's my understanding these are 14 already in evidence, Your Honor, and that they were 15 admitted without objection.

16 THE COURT: Yes, I should just indicate, as we 17 did yesterday, all of the exhibits listed on the 18 defendants' and intervenor defendants' trial exhibit list 19 that were not subject of an objection that was sustained 20 are admitted as full exhibits.

21 BY MR. DUNN:

22 Q. Professor Green, you can keep those in front of you 23 and refer to them as appropriate in connection with my 24 questioning because they are in evidence.

25 In connection with your work in this matter, did you

1 form any opinions concerning the effect of the Connecticut
2 Citizens Election Program on third or minor parties?

3 A. Yes, I did.

4 Q. And, in general, could you tell us what the opinion
5 was that you formed in that regard concerning that program 6 and its effect on third or minor parties such as the 7 plaintiff Green Party?

8 A. My basic conclusion is that the CEP is likely to 9 benefit minor parties for a variety of reasons having to 10 do with the kinds of resources that it provides for minor 11 party candidates to which they might not otherwise have 12 access. Number one.

13 Number two, it provides a series of electoral 14 incentives for those candidates which enables minor 15 parties to build, and presents in a variety of various 16 constituents enabling subsequent candidates to, again, 17 achieve CEP grants and have access to substantial 18 financial resources.

19 And, finally, I concluded from the way in which the 20 CEP is structured that it provides voters with an 21 incentive to support minor party candidates who might not 22 otherwise win their votes. Due to the strategic 23 incentives that our plurality rule, first-past-the-post 24 electoral system creates incentives that currently give 25 voters tremendous incentive to vote only for one of the

1 two top candidates. Under the CEP, voters now have an 2 incentive to provide some modicum of support for minor 3 party candidates who they might support in order to get 4 them past qualifying thresholds for grants; 10 percent, 15
5 percent, 20 percent, as the case may be. These votes
6 might not otherwise go to those minor party candidates 7 because the logic of our electoral system gives voters 8 incentive to support only the candidates that are likely 9 to finish first or second.

10 Q. So, are you saying that the existence of the 11 thresholds to qualify under the CEP actually provide 12 incentives that aid minor parties?

13 A. Yes.

14 Q. Can you explain why that would be?

15 A. Well, the idea would be suppose a voter were inclined 16 to support a minor party candidate but felt that the minor 17 party candidate was only likely to get, say, ten percent 18 of the vote. In that case, the voter might be inclined to 19 support one of the two major party candidates running in 20 the same race, again in a three candidate competition.
21 The underlying logic of our plurality rule system subject
22 to something called Duverger's Law, which says in any kind 23 of single member constituency that is selected, selects 24 leaders according to plurality rule, voters are driven to 25 support only the top two candidates on the grounds that no

277

1 one wins anything under our system for finishing anything 2 other than first, and so there's tremendous pressure to 3 transfer votes to one of the two top candidates in hopes 4 of putting them over the top in a plurality system.

5 Q. And are you saying that the thresholds themselves 6 provide incentives to voters as opposed to candidates?

7 A. Yes, they actually provide incentives to both but the 8 idea would be now voters have an incentive to provide some 9 electoral support as far as an intermediate goal beyond 10 having the plurality votes. Having merely ten percent of 11 the votes enables candidates who might otherwise receive 12 nothing to receive some kind of a reward from the 13 political system.

14 Q. In addition to the thresholds for obtaining 15 qualification by voting, there are also petitioning 16 thresholds in the statute; are you aware of those?

17 A. Yes, I am.

18 Q. And have you -- do you believe that the existence of 19 those thresholds are a benefit or a detriment to minor 20 parties?

21 A. Well, I think that they impose some costs on minor 22 parties but I think that those are outweighed by the 23 benefits that they create. Essentially the CEP creates a 24 program by which petition campaigns for candidates who did 25 not qualify based on past vote totals are subsidized, they

1 are subsidized to a very generous extent. So that now 2 minor party candidates have not only the incentive but 3 also the wherewithal to fund outreach campaigns, enabling 4 them to reach out to voters, to give their names out to 5 voters, to canvass voters. And in so doing, in so 6 gathering petitions and perhaps even qualifying 7 contributions along the way, they are likely to run more 8 viable campaigns in the general election.

9 So, I think that the petitioning provision of the law
10 actually creates a healthy set of incentives for third 11 party candidates because it subsidizes their outreach 12 efforts and gives them a kind of structure within which to 13 run credible campaigns.

14 Q. The statute has been attacked in this litigation 15 because of the levels at which the thresholds are set.
16 Have you had an opportunity to consider the reasonableness 17 or achievability of the thresholds either from an 18 electoral standpoint or a petitioning standpoint?

19 A. Yes, I have.

20 Q. And what conclusion have you reached in regard to 21 the -- and the threshold, for the record, I think are 22 known to be 10 percent, 15 percent for one-third, 23 two-third grants, and then 20 percent for a full grant.
24 Do you understand that?

279

1 Q. And what is your opinion concerning the 2 reasonableness and the achievability of those thresholds?

3 A. Well, there are two issues here. Reasonableness on 4 the one hand, achievability on the other. Let me speak 5 first to the question of reasonableness.

6 There's a strong policy interest in making the 7 thresholds high enough to prevent two kinds of adverse 8 consequences. One would be nonserious candidates running 9 in ways that -- and spending public money in ways that 10 embarrass the public financing system and prevent it from 11 maintaining the degree of legislative support that would 12 be necessary in order to sustain funding at reasonable 13 levels.

14 But, more importantly perhaps, there's a strong 15 public interest in preventing stalking horse candidates, 16 candidates who run under minor party labels because minor 17 parties typically do not have primaries. They typically 18 appeal to a kind of vetting system that would strain out 19 such candidates, run what are effectively major party 20 campaigns under minor party labels in the hope of dividing 21 major party support.

22 And so, while the CEP is sometimes construed as, for 23 example, by one of the plaintiff's expert witnesses, 24 Mr. Gillespie, as being a kind of, the expression is that 25 of a major party duopoly, in fact, that provision, the 10

1 percent, 15 percent, 20 percent logic is really guided by 2 the sense that major, that each major party has that the 3 other major party is the subject of suspicion. They are

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
4 much more worried about major parties behaving as a 5 stalking horse candidate in the guise of a major party 6 candidate than the major parties themselves.

7 That's my sense as an observer of politics and a
8 reader of the statute. So, that that's the reasonableness 9 side of the question.

10 With respect to the practicality side of the 11 question, my view is that when you look at the powerful 12 financial incentives that the CEP offers candidates and 13 you think about the market for consulting services, on the 14 one hand, or the ability to use those financial resources 15 to develop on-the-ground campaign efforts, I think, and 16 you consider the, that even at ten percent the threshold
17 in absolute empirical terms is very, very minimal, I don't 18 see any practical problems.

19 Let me just kind of talk aloud about the math here.
20 If I were running for state senate in this state, I would 21 be eligible to get $85,000 grant if I could raise $15,000
22 in qualifying contributions, and if I were to achieve a 23 20 percent petitioning threshold. Now, 20 percent 24 petitioning threshold is not very much. Petitions, it's 25 less than 10,000 petitions. In fact, it's in typical 1 districts less than say 7,500 or even 5,000 in some cases.

2 So, let's suppose I were to set about raising $15,000
3 and getting, say, a comfortable margin of 15,000 petitions
4 on the grounds that I want to be extra-conservative.

5 Well, I effectively have $85,000 to do plus the $15,000
6 that I raised through qualifying contributions. So, 7 $100,000 is my, is the pot of money that I have to, to 8 either hire a consultant or hire a team of activists, pay 9 my supporters, who are volunteers or paid professionals to 10 achieve this goal. And it seems as though, viewed from 11 that standpoint, even if those people are somewhat risk 12 averse, it couldn't possibly be so averse that they would 13 be willing to have that for $50,000, then I would have 14 $50,000 that I wouldn't otherwise have.

15 So, it seems like a fantastically good deal from the 16 standpoint of minor party candidates, which I think the 17 record would show have seldom had access to appreciable 18 campaign finance.

19 Q. So, are you saying that your belief is that the 20 effect of this scheme, the statutory scheme, will be to 21 increase the amount of resources available to minor 22 parties and minor party candidates?

23 A. Yes, dramatically, and I know that once the law's 24 upheld, there will be a cottage industry of consultants, 25 activists whose main role will be to facilitate these

1 kinds of qualifying campaigns.

2 Q. Let me return for a minute to the issue of the 3 thresholds. Are you aware generally of thresholds that 4 have been set in Connecticut and elsewhere for ballot 5 access?

6 A. Yes, I am.

7 Q. And are you aware that it's the case that the 8 thresholds in the CEP are 10 or 15 times higher than the 9 thresholds for ballot access? I think it's 1 percent for 10 ballot access and 10, 10 or 20 percent for campaign 11 financing. Are you aware of that?

12 A. That is correct. And I think that ballot access 13 provision also says that it can't be higher than 7,500 14 signatures regardless.

15 Q. Well, in light of that relationship, does that have 16 an impact on your view of whether the thresholds for 17 campaign finance are reasonable or, put another way, could 18 you explain the difference to the Court between the, what 19 you consider the criteria for ballot access thresholds and 20 campaign finance thresholds?

21 A. Yes, I can explain it, and I would say that the two 22 kinds of activities, ballot access on the one hand, 23 campaign finance on the other, have very different kinds 24 of public policy rationales.

25 In the case of ballot access, one wants to at very

1 low cost provide the public, provide the public with the 2 widest array of choices. There is effectively no down
3 side to having multiple candidates on ballot. I suppose 4 that someone could complain about ballot clutter but that 5 seems to be a minor disadvantage.

6 On the other hand, with respect to something like the 7 Citizen Election Program, you have a, you have a system
8 that is inherently fragile, as are all public financing 9 programs. They rely on legislative authorizations. They 10 rely on public trust. And to the extent that you have 11 candidates who are seen to be abusing the system by 12 running joke candidacies, by running simply to advertise
13 their realty agency, doing the kinds of things with public
14 money that might be, strictly speaking, allowed by the CEP 15 but would nevertheless run counter to the spirit of 16 running the kind of vigorous Democratic, small Democratic 17 electorate system, one jeopardizes the entire structure.

18 And so, for that reason I could well understand why 19 it is that a legislature would want to make the threshold 20 substantially higher in the case of a public financing

21 system.

22 Q. Within, within -- is there a range of what might be 23 considered to be reasonable in terms of the tension that's 24 created there?

25 A. Yes. I don't think that, you know, one can say

284

1 ex ante that ten percent is the true minimum or maximum 2 threshold. I think it could be 9, it could be 11. I 3 think there's a certain degree of ambiguity. But I would 4 say that 10 percent from an absolute standard of, say, 5 political science is considered an overwhelming defeat and 6 to be able to do no better than 10 percent is not saying 7 much.

8 Q. So, are you saying that a politically viable 9 organization and a politically viable candidate should be 10 expected to achieve more than that?

11 A. Yes, substantially more. I would think that a 12 candidate who could not show that he or she could garner 13 25, 35 percent of the vote would not achieve the 14 intermediate objectives of electability either, either by 15 unseating an incumbent or by creating the impression that 16 he or she were sufficiently viable, so when the seat 17 becomes open when the incumbent retires, he or she would 18 be the presumptive favorite in that district. And so I 19 think that 20 percent is a very low threshold in the sense 20 of an outward expression of electability.

21 Q. You yourself have described as "safe seats" seats 22 where an incumbent has won an election by 20 percent or 23 more. Is that generally your definition?

24 A. Yes, it's the typical definition when people talk 25 about safe versus marginal sense in political science.

1 Q. So, if you have a candidate who runs against a 2 candidate in a safe seat, so that I am the challenger who 3 has lost by 20 percent, is there a material difference in 4 your view whether I got 30 percent of the vote, 40 percent 5 of the vote or 14 percent the vote?

6 A. Yes. Yes, substantially for the reason I just 7 mentioned. If you lose dismally with 14 percent of the 8 vote, as you just mentioned, you probably do not signal 9 that you are enough of a credible threat to the incumbent 10 that the incumbent ought to amend his or her ways in the 11 spirit of democratic accountability; nor do you signal to 12 the incumbent that he or she might be better off retiring 13 rather than running a vigorous reelection campaign; nor do 14 you signal to your potential opponents as would be 15 challengers that you are the presumptive candidate should 16 the seat become open.

17 Q. So, are you saying that even if you lose to someone 18 in a safe seat, you lose by a margin of more than 19 20 percent, you could nonetheless signal all those things 20 by running a credible race and achieving a certain level 21 of votes?

22 A. That is correct. And it's subject to the usual 23 caveats about the national tides and whether it's a good 24 year for your party and that sort of thing. But all 25 things being equal, that is correct.

1 Q. Now, Professor, the plaintiffs in this case have 2 claimed that the CEP discriminated unfairly in a number of 3 ways in favor of entrenched major parties. Are you aware 4 of those claims?

5 A. Yes.

6 Q. One such example is that minor parties but not the 7 major parties are required to make a specific showing in 8 each district before their candidates qualify.

9 A. Yes.

10 Q. Do you consider that to be a reasonable distinction 11 or do you understand a basis for that distinction?

12 A. Yes, I do.

13 Q. And could you explain the rationale for that as you 14 understand it?

15 A. Well, there's a fundamental distinction between major 16 parties on the one hand and minor parties on the other, 17 and I think the Connecticut rules recognize that 18 distinction when they say that you either have to achieve 19 20 percent of voter registration with a political party or 20 you have to achieve 20 percent in a gubernatorial contest.

21 The distinctions between major and minor parties are 22 really quite considerable. When one thinks about major 23 parties vis-a-vis minor parties, one is talking about 24 fundamentally different levels of party activists. The 25 depth of the organization is radically different. The

1 range of the donor network is vastly more extensive in the 2 context of a major party. But, more importantly, or at 3 least as importantly, major parties enjoy the difference
4 of wide spread identification among voters.

5 So I've written extensively about something called 6 "party identification" which is an age old topic in 7 political science. It refers to the longstanding 8 attachment that voters feel toward one of the political 9 parties. It's not simply an American phenomenon or even a 10 cross-nationality phenomenon, it's a historic phenomenon

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
11 as well, and those kind of attachments run very deep.

12 They are necessarily reflected purely in terms of 13 registrations. It could be a person who thinks of 14 themselves as a Democrat or a Republican or even a Green 15 without necessarily registering for those parties, but, 16 nevertheless, those kinds of attachments manifest
17 themselves in election after election.

18 And one of the things that fundamentally 19 differentiates the two current major parties, the 20 Democratic and the Republican parties, from any of the 21 current minor parties is that the level of the party 22 attachment is fundamentally different. It's vastly 23 greater among major parties. And this has the important 24 implication of -- that when we're talking about lopsidedly 25 partisan districts, districts in which one party enjoys an

1 overwhelming registration edge over the other, we have to 2 remember that even though the incumbent tends to win by 3 overwhelming majorities, there often is much greater 4 latent support, latent or underlying support for the 5 lesser of the two major parties than there is for any 6 minor party.

7 In fact, it's very often a massive difference and one 8 sees that difference most vividly when those same voters
9 are asked to vote for a given candidate such as a 10 gubernatorial candidate or a presidential candidate, a 11 senatorial candidate, and you very often find that the 12 level of support for, say, a Jodi Rell or a Bill Clinton 13 is far greater than what you would surmise you simply 14 could account for as the division of partisan votes in a, 15 say, State House contest. Why? Because a few different 16 things are going on in the context of the State House

17 context.

18 The major party candidate, often the lesser of the 19 two major party candidates, think strategically about 20 whether it's in their career's interest as politicians to 21 run in that district and very often they will not run and 22 that will tend to overstate the amount of partisan support 23 for the incumbent's party.

24 Q. Now, it appears to be a fact in Connecticut that 25 party registrations are declining in terms of total

289

1 numbers, that more and more people are registering
2 unaffiliated. Are you aware of that?

3 A. Yes.

4 Q. And do you think that that is indicative of a 5 lessening of what you describe as party attachment or 6 reason to question whether there is sufficient party
7 attachment to justify the presumption of threshold 8 qualification for the major parties regardless of their 9 actual performance in the state election?

10 A. I think party registration can be quite misleading as 11 a gauge of party attachments, and one sees that, for 12 example, when one compares the distribution of the party
13 attachments as measured in opinion policy, quite reputable 14 opinion policy in Connecticut over time, as opposed to the 15 distribution of party registration categories which 16 include decline to state. There are many reasons why a 17 person in this day and age might decline to state, 18 including, not the least of which is the desire to duck 19 the torrent of direct mail, the onslaught of unsolicited 20 phone calls and the other sorts of things that attach to 21 party registration.

22 Q. Well, there are legislative districts in this state 23 where the registration of the lesser of the major parties, 24 generally the Republican party, is less than 20 percent.
25 Are you aware of that?

290

1 A. Yes.

2 Q. And in some such districts, in some districts, in 3 such districts, the Republican party has also not on 4 occasion been able to garner 20 percent of the vote in a 5 legislative election. Are you aware of that?

6 A. Yes, although it is a fairly rare phenomenon.

7 Q. And is it your view that nonetheless, even in such 8 districts it's reasonable for the legislature to presume a 9 sufficient level of interest and credibility for the major 10 parties do not require them to meet the same requirements 11 as the minor parties?

12 A. Yes, because the Republican party in this instance as 13 part of its party's strength has two enormous resources
14 that its minor party counterparts do not enjoy. One, a 15 state and indeed nationwide network of donors and 16 activists who might be called upon to work for a 17 candidate, and the other is latent levels of party 18 identification. In the electorate there are 19 correspondingly lower levels of recognition of the Green 20 Party and the Working Group Party and the whatever.

21 So, if someone thinks about those instances where, 22 for example, in the neighborhood near me in New Haven, if 23 it were the case that a well qualified and thoughtful,
24 say, African American Republican were to run a credible 25 campaign in a district that was, that in terms of

1 registration were overwhelmingly Democrat, he or she might

2 perform quite well and far better perhaps than that same 3 candidate would under the label of the Green Party or some 4 other party, in part because he or she would be able to 5 draw on these extensive party resources.

6 Q. Now, when a minor party runs in a race and there is 7 no second major party candidate, if there's only the minor 8 party candidate and the incumbent, an entrenched 9 incumbent, it appears from some of the data that the minor 10 party will do better than if it runs against two major 11 party candidates. Are you aware of that?

12 A. Yes.

13 Q. What accounts for that phenomenon in your view?

14 A. Well, there a few things. One is party 15 identification and the other would be Duverger's Law. To 16 the extent that a voter is, say, a Republican in an 17 overwhelming Democratic district and the choices are 18 between a Democrat and, say, a Green Party candidate, that 19 Republican may feel more inclined to vote for the Green 20 Party candidate simply because he or she does not identify 21 with the Democrats. On the other hand, if a Republican 22 were to run in that same district, that Republican would 23 receive this voter's vote.

24 So, it's not a mystery, it's not even the slightest 25 bit surprising that kind of dynamic should play out when

1 one looks at a succession of elections in which one moves
2 from a major party candidate versus a minor party 3 candidate through a three way contest which includes both 4 minor party candidates and major party candidates.

5 Q. So, you're saying that the vote that the minor party 6 candidate gets in the two way race is not necessarily

7 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
8 indicative of the support alone for the minor party 9 candidate but is indicative of other things as well?
10 A. Correct.

11 MR. DUNN: I don't think I have anything more,
12 Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: All right. Cross?

14 CROSS EXAMINATION

15 BY MR. LOPEZ:

16 Q. Hi. Nice to see you again.

17 A. Nice to see you. It's a pleasure to be here.

18 Q. Professor Green, do you still have your report in 19 front of you?

20 A. Yes, I do.

21 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, do you have a copy of 22 the report?

23 THE COURT: I do.

24 BY MR. LOPEZ:

25 Q. Now, Professor Green, have you ever been elected to public office?

1 A. No.

2 Q. And how long have you been teaching?

3 A. Twenty years.

4 Q. And during that time have you always worked 5 full-time?

6 A. Yes.

7 Q. And have you ever taken a sabbatical?

8 A. Yes.

9 Q. And during any of those sabbaticals, did you ever 10 work on a political campaign?

11 A. I often work with political campaigns but never on a 12 political campaign. I don't work for money with -- I

13 don't work as a consultant for political campaigns. I 14 have on many occasions, including sabbaticals, worked in 15 collaboration with campaigns doing scientific research on 16 their outreach persuasions, political mobilization
17 efforts.

18 Q. Have you ever run for office?

19 A. No.

20 Q. Now, have you ever acted as a campaign manager?

21 A. No.

22 Q. Have you ever otherwise worked in a senior capacity, 23 a paid capacity, on a political campaign?

24 A. No. As I say, I never take money for the work that I 25 do with political campaigns.

294

1 Q. Have you ever helped raise money for a political 2 campaign?

3 A. Well, again, I've worked with campaigns that have 4 engaged in fund raising efforts doing scientific studies
5 of the ways in which different kinds of outreach efforts 6 lead to different levels of donor response. So, in that 7 sense I guess it's kind of a halfway yes and halfway no.

8 Again, I don't do it for money but I have worked in 9 a, I guess, a quasi consulting capacity insofar as I've 10 worked with actual fund raising in drafting their direct 11 mail appeals, drafting their phone appeals and engaging in 12 the statistical effectiveness of their different outreach
13 efforts.

14 Q. Well, let me ask you it differently. Have you ever 15 been hired or retained for the express purpose or explicit 16 purpose of raising money for a political campaign or 17 political party?

A. No.

Q. Now, the work that you've done in connection with -- the work that you've just described, help formulating fundraising strategies, was that done as an academic exercise or as a consulting service to the campaign to assist them in raising money?

A. Well, again, I'm extremely careful not to work as a campaign consultant because I do, I try to do scientific research with members of both parties or all parties. And so the case that I'm thinking of is a case of a Republican incumbent governor who's running for reelection and I was working with the reelection campaign, again not for money, but simply experimenting with different ways in which they were packaging their fundraising campaign in terms of direct mail, in terms of phone calls, in terms of events, and examining it scientifically, using a randomized experimental design, which kinds of efforts were most remunerative.

Q. When you were doing this, you were doing this on behalf of which governor?

A. This is Rick Perry in Texas. This was the 2006 reelection campaign.

Q. And were you doing that from Yale?

A. Well, in the sense that I would shuttle back and forth to Austin, yes.

Q. Were you doing this in your official capacity as the director of the institute that you work with?

A. Well, again, I'm not sure how to describe what, whether research counts as an officiality. This work did eventuate in academic papers as a certain part of my, the kind of things that I present when I'm, when I'm at Yale.

24 So I think the answer is yes.

25 Q. What I'm trying to get at is the difference between

296

1 your academic work and professional fund raising work and

2 I'm -- I don't know the answer.

3 A. I'm not trying to be cagey or obtuse. I'm just 4 saying in my particular case and the case of many of the 5 students with whom I work, many of the colleagues with 6 whom I work, we study political campaigns on the ground.

7 We work with political campaigns we help and randomize

8 their outreach, their voter mobilization efforts and then

9 we conduct surveys or look at voter turnout rates or look

10 at the number of dollars that come in by way of donations

11 in order to gauge their effectiveness. So we're not paid

12 political consultants but we're working, you know, at the 13 desk next to a paid political consultant.

14 Q. Who pays for this? Do you receive a grant? Do you 15 receive remuneration of any sort?

16 A. No.

17 Q. And how do you pick which candidates you are going to 18 do this on behalf of?

19 A. They invite us. And so in the case of the Rick Perry

20 for Governor campaign, I received a phone call one day,

21 would you like to come and work with us and study our 22 campaign. I was happy to do it.

23 Q. And what year was that campaign?

24 A. It was 2006.

297

1 Q. When did you complete that study?

2 A. At the end of 2006.

3 Q. Have you done any similar work on behalf of any of 4 the gubernatorial candidates in Connecticut?

5 A. No.

6 Q. Have you done any similar work on behalf of any of 7 the other candidates who have sought political office in 8 Connecticut?

9 A. Yes.

10 Q. And who would that be, who and how often?

11 A. I've worked with Bill Asgota (ph) in his 2004
12 reelection campaign, I think also in his 2000 election 13 campaign. I helped randomize his phone call campaign in 14 order to gauge the effectiveness on the voters in his 15 district. Did it affect their support for him, did it 16 affect their voter turnout. He also ran a multi wave 17 direct mail campaign and I helped direct a study of that.

18 Q. And you published your findings in this case?

19 A. Yes.

20 Q. Any other Connecticut, any other candidates of 21 statewide office you can think of that you provided this 22 service for?

23 A. No.

24 Q. Were there -- how about legislative candidates --

25 A. Well --

298

1 Q. -- in Connecticut, sir?

2 A. Bill Anapskovitch (ph) was a --

3 Q. What was his name?

4 A. Bill Anapskovitch.

5 Q. That's the state senator who was seated?

6 A. Exactly.

7 Well, we worked with a Maryland candidate but not 8 the, not a state legislative candidate.

9 Q. Do you or have you ever -- do you currently or have 10 you ever held a position in the Democratic or Republican 11 party in Connecticut?

12 A. No.

13 Q. Have you done any of this type of research that you 14 just described on behalf of any minor party candidates?

15 A. Yes, actually I think the, that the 2001 -- we worked 16 with Acorn in collaboration, I believe, I believe it was 17 with the minor party. I think it was the Working Group 18 Party. My memory is a little murky but it was in 19 Bridgeport. It was here. It was a local voter outreach 20 campaign. We examined the effects of Acorn's voter 21 mobilization efforts on voter turnout in the low income 22 community.

23 Q. I'm a little -- it's still vague in my mind. Are 24 there restrictions on your political activities when you 25 are in your capacity as the, as the head of the department

1 you're in, the institute that you're running?

2 A. Well, I'm part of a 51(c)(3) organization and as part
3 of that organization I do not use anything like university 4 funds or university resources to advance a candidate or a 5 cause. And, indeed, you could argue that what I'm doing 6 is not advancing the candidate or cause since this is my 7 role, is to take out, to extract a control group from the 8 people whom they would otherwise target. So, whether I'm 9 helping or hurting the campaign is a matter of some 10 disagreement.

11 Q. Is it correct to say that under the, that the IRS 12 rules that govern 501(c)(3) and that govern your grant or 13 your funding or your department, that you're prohibited

14 from providing direct -- from engaging in direct 15 political activities on behalf of candidates?
16 A. That's right.
17 Q. And your testimony is that you don't?
18 A. Exactly, I don't.
19 Q. And would that be true with respect to activities on 20 behalf of political parties and political committees as 21 well?
22 A. Yes.
23 Q. And your testimony is that you have not --
24 A. Correct.
25 Q. -- engaged in political activities?

300

1 A. That is right. By political activities, I mean -- I
2 assuming you mean income contributions and not making 3 income contributions to the campaigns.
4 Q. Understood. Have you ever helped -- well, can I
5 assume -- withdrawn.
6 Can I assume you've never helped qualify a candidate 7 for the ballot in your personal capacity?
8 A. That is correct.
9 Q. Or professional capacity?
10 A. Correct.
11 Q. Have you ever helped qualify a referendum or question 12 for the ballot?
13 A. No.
14 Q. Have you ever written any articles or other 15 publications about the process of petitioning for the 16 ballot?
17 A. No.
18 Q. Have you written any articles or other publications 19 about the process of qualifying an issue or a referendum

20 for the ballot?

21 A. No, although, you know, again the kinds of things 22 that I have studied extensively look very much like the 23 outreach efforts that they can use in the context of a 24 petitioning campaign or qualifying campaign, door-to-door 25 canvassing, political events, direct mail solicitations,

301

1 phone call campaigns --

2 Q. Thank you.

3 A. -- radio, TV.

4 Q. Thank you. Now, if I can refer you to your report
5 I'm going to be asking you questions from your report, 6 sir.

7 Is it your opinion -- or let me rephrase that. Is it
8 your opinion, Professor, that the CEP will provide 9 resources to major party candidates in less competitive 10 districts?

11 A. In all districts, yes.

12 Q. And it's also your opinion that the CEP does create a 13 significant incentive for major party candidates to 14 challenge what would otherwise be uncontested incumbents?

15 A. Yes.

16 Q. And I take it from your writings that you see that as 17 a positive?

18 A. Yes, I think that Democratic accountability is the 19 cornerstone of our system of government, and so to the 20 extent that one encourages credible candidates to step 21 forward and challenge incumbents in what would otherwise 22 be an uncontested race, there's a positive benefit for 23 government outputs and the legitimacy of our system of 24 government.

25

Q. And is it, is it a theme in your writing that the 302

1 government has a legitimate interest in leveling the 2 resources of candidates to achieve the goals that you just 3 described?

4 A. Yes. Although, you know, whether it amounts to 5 leveling, I notice when you made the leveling gesture, you
6 were bringing down one hand and raising up another. I 7 think most of my work is oriented toward raising up the 8 lower of the two hands.

9 Q. I'm just -- and I'll try to quickly jump to the chase
10 here. There's a theme in your testimony that minor 11 parties, that the increased competition between major and 12 minor parties will only have a negligible, or actually 13 you wouldn't be able to detect any impact on the relevant 14 strength of minor parties.

15 A. Sorry, as a result of what?

16 Q. As a result of increasing the competition between 17 major parties --

18 A. I see. Well, let me put it this way. I've studied 19 the last five or six election cycles and during that time, 20 the number of minor party candidates who have been elected 21 is exactly as you thought, the number of minor party 22 candidates who have been elected to legislative office is 23 zero. The number of minor party candidates who have 24 achieved 40 percent of the vote is exactly zero also. So 25 it's hard in that context where not even a single

303

1 candidate wins or even runs what we would consider to be a 2 close campaign, it's hard to imagine a worse situation for 3 minor party candidates.

4 Q. But is it your opinion that a major party candidate

5 in a, running in a district in which he's the inferior, 6 running in a party dominant district and he's the inferior 7 major party candidate, is it your opinion that that 8 candidate will benefit from public financing?

9 A. The lesser of the two?

10 Q. Yes.

11 A. Yes, sir, absolutely. Because he or she will have 12 access to public funding.

13 Q. And do you think that will translate into a, into a 14 different vote total?

15 A. Yes.

16 Q. An increased vote total?

17 A. Well, do you mean overall voter turnout total or an 18 increase vote total for the lesser of the two major 19 parties?

20 Q. An increased vote total for the inferior major party 21 candidate.

22 A. Yes, on average I expect these election outcomes to 23 be more competitive in the sense that the lesser of the 24 two major major parties will on average do better under 25 the CEP.

1 Q. Well, isn't it fair to conclude that a minor party
2 candidate who receives full public funding will also see 3 their vote total increase?

4 A. Yes.

5 Q. And how significantly would you expect it to 6 increase? Do you think full public funding would, would 7 perhaps make the difference in whether or not a minor 8 party candidate graduates to major party status?

9 A. In the sense of getting more than 20 percent of the 10 vote?

11 Q. Right.

12 A. Yes, very often. I think that it will, it will help 13 minor party candidates. I think that there will be a 14 ceiling beyond which minor party candidates cannot go, so 15 that, on the one hand, minor party candidates benefit 16 enormously from the fact these resources, this money will 17 enable them, these candidates who have very, very low 18 levels of name recognition, to achieve a modicum of name 19 recognition, which seems to be the biggest hurdle they 20 face when running for office.

21 On the other hand, the fact that they are saddled 22 with minor party status means that when voters see their 23 names on the ballot and see that they are associated with 24 a minor party and see that, you know, the voters typically 25 do not have a view toward minor parties, that there will

305

1 be an upper limit to how much they can achieve on that 2 ballot process.

3 Q. So, when you say that the impact of increased major 4 party candidate competition, when you say that the 5 increase of the increased major party competition on minor 6 parties would be negligible, what you're really saying is 7 it would be negligible only if the minor party did not 8 receive public financing, is that correct?

9 A. If they did not receive -- let me think. I think I 10 interpret your question to be would the CEP help minor 11 parties -- my view is yes, because it provides those minor
12 parties with access to financing resources. Your question 13 is if it also provides access to the lesser of the two 14 major parties, might minor parties be worse off? And my 15 view is probably not on balance because they are, on the 16 one hand, getting the benefit of these financial resources 17 to which they would not otherwise have access and these 18 enormous, enormous advantages.

19 On the other hand, with more candidates in the race, 20 there are fewer, you know, fewer votes perhaps floating 21 around for the minor party to get because of the major,
22 lesser of the two major party partisans now have a 23 candidate to vote for, they now have their own parties' 24 candidate to vote for, so those floating votes are less up 25 for grabs.

1 In some sense my view is there will be more robust 2 competition and many minor parties will be able to 3 participate actively in that system of robust competition 4 because they will have the financial resources that will 5 enable them to do the kinds of things that credible 6 campaigns can do.

7 Q. But that assumes, so we can agree -- first of all,
8 that assumes, if I'm correct, that they qualify for public 9 financing.

10 A. Yes, I think the qualification threshold is just de 11 minimus. It's very, very easy to surmount, especially 12 since the state is effectively subsidizing it.

13 Q. Now, you testified on direct, and it's also in your 14 report, that when a major party candidate doesn't compete
15 in a district, and I quote, "it's not a sign of weakness"?

16 A. Right.

17 Q. Do you stand by that statement?

18 A. Yes. Well --

19 Q. Would you agree --

20 A. Let me make sure, when we say it's a sign of 21 weakness, it's obviously not a sign of strength. It's no 22 great achievement not to compete in that arena. However, 23 it's a question of relative weakness materially at issue

24 here. When a major party candidate does not compete in a 25 lopsidedly partisan district, that is not necessarily a

307

1 sign that a corresponding minor party candidate could do 2 as well, if not better. In fact, it's almost always the 3 opposite.

4 Q. Well, that certainly wasn't my question. My question
5 was whether or not you stood by your statement that when a 6 minor party candidate -- it's paragraph 36, when a major 7 party candidate decides not to run -- that would be your 8 declaration, paragraph 36. Let me begin over.

9 I just want to examine you on your statement that 10 when a major party candidate decides not to run in a 11 district, it's not a sign of weakness. And I would ask 12 you, is it possible that it's a sign that that decision is 13 made for very practical reasons, like prior vote totals, a 14 significant gap in the Democrat and Republican 15 registration numbers, or, more to the point, the inability 16 to raise the amount of money that's necessary to run a 17 campaign that's going to yield results?

18 MR. DUNN: Objection. Could we separate that 19 out, Your Honor? I think there are three questions in 20 what Mr. Lopez just asked.

21 THE COURT: Sure. Why don't you rephrase it.

22 MR. LOPEZ: All right.

23 BY MR. LOPEZ:

24 Q. When -- isn't it correct, Professor Green, when a 25 major party candidate chooses not to run in a particular

1 district, isn't it correct that one of the considerations 2 may be that that candidate doesn't run because he cannot 3 raise the amount of money necessary to run a competitive
4 campaign?

5 A. Well, I think to some extent that is true, although 6 if the CEP mitigates that enormously, I mean essentially 7 the CEP makes it such that a major party candidate or a 8 minor party qualifying candidate has access to resources 9 that are quite substantial by historic standards, and so 10 that candidate should be able to run without fear of not 11 having adequate resources. But he or she may still not 12 run because if he or she is a clear minded politician, the 13 thought of losing so badly to an entrenched incumbent 14 would do nothing to burnish his or her image as a likely 15 successor in that district or likely candidate for some 16 other office.

17 And so, my point in paragraph 36 was that major party
18 candidates are strategic in their choices. They are not 19 running to be sacrificial candidates. They are running 20 because they want to advance their career interest as 21 politicians and party activists.

22 Q. So, if I understood you correctly, it's your view 23 that some major party candidates choose not to run 24 because they know they are going to in effect lose by a 25 landslide margin?

1 A. That is right.

2 Q. And it's also your testimony that the CEP provides a 3 powerful incentive for those candidates to run?

4 A. Well, it does provide an incentive if they thought 5 that with the money they could surmount the obstacles that

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
6 would otherwise prevent them from running a credible race.

7 So, if a career oriented major party candidate were to 8 look at the district and think, well, I might not be able 9 to win but I might be able to win enough, win say 35, 10 45 percent so that I will be in contention for some 11 subsequent election, they might go ahead and do it with 12 CEP funding.

13 Q. So, I take it then your testimony is that the CEP 14 would serve a purpose, besides funding that election, they 15 provide the candidate with, with branding and the type of, 16 with the type of branding that's necessary to go forward 17 in the next election?

18 A. That is correct, and that's true not only for major 19 party candidates but minor party candidates as well. I 20 think it's probably arguably even more important for minor 21 party candidates.

22 Q. Your opinion continues to assume that the minor party
23 candidates are going to participate at the same level -- 24 excuse me, at the same rate as major party candidates. Do 25 you know what the participation rates were for major party

1 candidates this cycle?

2 A. No.

3 Q. Okay. Well, they are in the 75 to 85 percent
4 range, sir, I'll represent.

5 Depending on what is going on, whether it's the House
6 or the Senate, do you know what the participation rates 7 were for the minor party?

8 A. No, I was under the impression we weren't going to 9 talk about 2008, although I look forward to doing so in 10 March.

11 Q. Can I gather from your testimony you see it as 12 positive that -- let me take that back.

13 Your testimony indicates that minor party -- this CEP 14 is in effect going to open opportunities for minor party 15 candidates?

16 A. Absolutely, yes.

17 Q. Can I infer from your testimony that that is a 18 positive thing?

19 A. You know, I don't really have a kind of normative 20 viewpoint on the desirability of having minor party 21 candidates run in greater abundance. My sense is that to 22 the extent that minor party candidates increase democratic 23 accountability by presenting credible opponents to 24 incumbents, there probably is some small democratic 25 benefit.

1 Q. So, can I infer from that statement that you would 2 support the efforts of the Working Family Group Party, for 3 instance, and the Green Party, for instance, to 4 participate, to take advantage of the public financing 5 system?

6 A. I support it in the sense that I'm all for democratic 7 accountability. If they are the agent of democratic 8 accountability, so much the better.

9 Q. Okay. Well, where I'm going with this, sir, is I'm 10 asking, would those -- would democratic accountability, 11 would that interest be served better, sir, if the 12 qualifying criteria were set at a 5 percent level for a 13 full grant instead of at a 20 percent level for full 14 grant?

15 A. It all depends on the kind of policy considerations 16 that I mentioned earlier. If you have these two 17 overwhelming policy considerations, the sustainability of 18 the CEP, and the interest in not providing easy access to 19 stalking horse candidates, well, then you want to think 20 carefully about, on the one hand, lowering the threshold 21 so that you encourage more candidates to step forward, 22 without lowering it so much that they can make it very 23 easy for major parties to subvert the system.

24 Q. Do you have any empirical basis or any other basis to 25 believe that lowering the standard to 5 percent, the

1 qualifying standard to 5 percent prior vote total or a
2 5 percent petition requirement would threaten the public 3 fisc or the integrity of elections, sir?

4 A. When a political scientists who's been studying many 5 campaigns and elections all his adult life is asked do you 6 have empirical evidence of such a thing when it's kind of 7 a fairly obvious and widespread concern, everybody who 8 talks about public financing is immediately drawn to these 9 two considerations:

10 Will the levels of public financing be sustainable 11 given the possibility of embarrassment and will the, will 12 the system itself be sustainable given, again, the 13 possibility of embarrassment in the face of stalking horse
14 candidates.

15 It's not, it's not for no reason there clearly are 16 anecdotes about those kinds of instances, but quite apart 17 from the anecdote, even if all the anecdotes were false, 18 remember that our basic philosophy in this society since 19 the founders has been to design our institutions so that 20 they are resilient in the face of quite clear hypothetical 21 depositions. So we build our system with checks and 22 balances. We build our system with all kinds of 23 redundancy. We guard against all kinds of hypothetical 24 concerns precisely because we don't want to have the 25 situation subverted by, by something that everybody could

313

1 imagine actually happening.

2 A major party comes in, encourages a minor party or 3 former major party person to run for office in the hope of 4 dividing the vote for the other major party, and in so 5 doing, sneaks their preferred major party candidate into 6 office.

7 Q. With respect, sir, that just doesn't sound right to 8 my clients. That sounds patronizing. You're going to 9 take steps to protect my clients from abuse by the major 10 parties; am I misunderstanding you?

11 A. It's not really -- I suppose that one could have 12 taken the normative view they want to protect minor 13 parties from the predation of major parties but that's 14 really not at issue. Whether major parties can, can sneak 15 into office, it's not -- again, it's not about protecting 16 the minor party candidate, it's about having major party 17 candidates use minor party candidates as a ruse in order 18 to win election for the major party candidate.

19 Again, even if no minor party candidates were ever 20 adversely affected by this kind of thinking, there would 21 still be policy concerns about having candidates --

22 Q. And those concerns, if I understood you correctly, 23 are based on hypothetical worst case scenarios?

24 A. Well, also a reading of the loose institutional 25 structure of those minor parties themselves, these minor

314

1 parties do not necessarily have sufficiently dense

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
2 institutional structure to create caucuses in every 3 district, primaries in every district. In fact, far from 4 it, and so they are in some sense this open sieve that 5 could easily be exploited by major parties.

6 Q. But Professor Green, the legislature wasn't writing 7 on a clean slate and you're not testifying today on a 8 clean slate. We don't have to deal with hypotheticals.
9 Don't we have public financing systems in other states?

10 A. Yes.

11 Q. Are you familiar with the clean election models in 12 Maine and Arizona?

13 A. You know, I'm not an expert on those systems. I know 14 a little bit about them but I don't necessarily have a 15 great deal of expertise.

16 Q. Would your opinion change about the, about the 17 hypothetical concerns you identified, would your opinion
18 change if you knew that in Maine they don't have a 19 petitioning or prior vote total requirement and that 20 public financing is available to all candidate regardless 21 of party affiliation, and that there has not been a 22 proliferation of minor party participation and there has 23 been no threat to the integrity of the program or the 24 public fisc?

25 Now that I've made that representation to you -- and

315

1 I'll make the same representation about Arizona -- does 2 your opinion, does your opinion change about the necessity 3 of setting the prior vote total at 20 percent versus 4 5 percent?

5 A. You know, what's strange about the representations -- 6 first of all, I don't believe it, but supposing I did 7 believe it, it would nevertheless not change my view about

8 how we should legislate going forward. You don't want to 9 create institutions that have these gaping problems, 10 gaping loopholes. Even if other places have yet to 11 experience problems in part because when you think about 12 the way in which campaign finance has evolved at the 13 federal level, for example, there have been many years 14 where loopholes were not exploited, but then a torrent of 15 reflection breaks forth, and a classic case would be soft 16 money at the federal level. The provisions didn't 17 necessarily change, it was just eventual campaign 18 consultants and political parties became more inventive, 19 in much the same way you wouldn't want to create a system 20 that has these potential for problems, this potential for 21 problems for fear that eventual campaign consultants and 22 political parties will find a way to get around the 23 problem.

24 Q. Okay, sir, let's move on to the question of your 25 expertise in the area of petitioning and in the area of 316

1 raising qualifying contributions.

2 Do you know right now how many valid signatures a 3 petitioning party candidate would have to collect to 4 qualify for full grant in the 2010 gubernatorial 5 elections?

6 MR. DUNN: I'm sorry, I didn't hear.

7 THE COURT: 2010 gubernatorial elections.

8 BY THE WITNESS:

9 A. I do not know offhand. It would be a very easy thing 10 to calculate in five minutes.

11 Q. Well, to qualify for a full grant based on a 1.1 12 million voter turnout in '06, I will represent that the

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
13 candidate would have to collect 220,000 signatures.

14 A. Yes.

15 Q. Based on my representation, do you agree that you 16 would have to collect 220,000 signatures?

17 A. Yes.

18 Q. Now, you do understand that those signatures have to 19 be collected and submitted by, by the first week of August 20 of the election year?

21 A. Yes, and they have to start I believe in January.

22 Q. And you understand that major party candidates don't 23 have to collect petitions and they have until the second 24 week of October to, to qualify for public financing?

25 A. Yes.

1 Q. Now, can you tell me what your understanding -- I 2 think you testified on direct and maybe you were just 3 being colloquial, but I think your testimony was that a 4 candidate who wants to collect X number of valid
5 signatures as a cushion would want to collect two X. Do 6 you stand by that testimony?

7 A. Experts say I get an extra one-third, get an extra 8 25, get an extra 50 percent. So I thought I would allay
9 all doubt about the calculation and double it. But I 10 don't think that, strictly speaking, one needs to double 11 it.

12 Q. In fact, that's the practice in the industry, isn't 13 it?

14 A. I don't agree with that representation.

15 Q. Well --

16 A. I doubled it myself.

17 Q. On direct examination --

18 A. Yes, but that was for rhetorical effect.

19 Q. And did you have a chance when you were preparing 20 your report to consult with Harold Hubschman, for 21 instance?

22 A. No.

23 Q. Do you know who he is?

24 A. No.

25 Q. He's the other expert in this case hired by the 318

1 defendants who also has a cushion, testified that you
2 would collect twice as many raw as you would valid.

3 A. I had no interaction with him.

4 Q. Do you think he was wrong?

5 MR. DUNN: Objection. What basis would he have 6 for an opinion of Mr. Hubschman's opinion?

7 THE COURT: Well, the question is does he 8 disagree with it. I'll allow that.

9 MR. LOPEZ: Thank you.

10 MR. DUNN: Also mischaracterizes Mr. Hubschman's 11 report.

12 THE COURT: That's fine. You can bring that 13 out.

14 BY THE WITNESS:

15 A. Let me put it this way. When campaign consultants 16 are selling services, they have an incentive to sell a lot 17 of services. So if, for example, a campaign consultant is 18 being paid by the number of signatures he or she is 19 gathering, he or she has a financial incentive to tell you 20 to get quite a few extra signatures. Whether such 21 additional signatures are, strictly speaking, needed
22 depends on the quality of the petition drive. If someone 23 has a fairly strong list and a competent and high

24 integrity group or team doing the drive, one presumably 25 would not need such a high cushion.

319

1 Q. All right. I'm just -- maybe I missed it when we 2 were talking about your qualifications but did you testify
3 you had any experience in this area?

4 A. I have never conducted a petition drive but when it 5 comes to conducting door-to-door involving campaigns, I've 6 done plenty. It's just that the reason that I highlight a 7 direct distinction between the two, they have many of the 8 same dynamics. You are in some sense -- you in some sense 9 have an easier time of it when you're doing petition 10 drives because you don't necessarily have to go door to 11 door. You can do it in public places. The key thing that 12 you are risking when you don't go to door to door, you 13 won't know for sure whether the person is a registered 14 voter at a given address.

15 Q. You, sir, made some reference earlier that you had 16 worked with Acorn?

17 A. Yes.

18 Q. And is one of the services that Acorn provides is to 19 engage for a fee petitioning?

20 A. Yes, I believe, although I have never engaged them in 21 that kind of activity.

22 Q. How do you know that?

23 A. Because you just represented it, and I also suspect 24 that it's true.

25 Q. Do you know if Acorn has a relationship with the

1 Working Families Party?

2 A. I suspect that they do based on somewhat dated 3 information going back to 2001, although, again, I don't 4 keep tabs on that connection.

5 Q. Well, do you know what Acorn charges per signature?

6 A. No, I don't.

7 Q. Okay. Do you know if they have a subcorporation 8 writing down which entity within Acorn, if any, engages in 9 petition services?

10 A. No.

11 Q. Or provides petitioning services?

12 A. No.

13 Q. Now, in your deposition you think that petitioning 14 services generally go, I think you said, for $1.50 or 15 $2.00, is that correct?

16 A. Yes.

17 Q. All right. And that's in your declaration?

18 A. Yes.

19 Q. And what basis do you have for that?

20 A. I think that that's more or less the going rate.
21 It's not something that I researched but I also think you
22 could back it out of a canvassing calculation. If you 23 think you're going to contact roughly 12 people an hour, 24 if you think some proportion of those people are actually 25 going to actually sign your petition, you're thinking

321

1 about how much you've going to pay your canvassers to do
2 that kind of work, it seems quite profitable at $1.50.

3 Q. Or $2.00?

4 A. Or $2.00.

5 Q. Or the range is $1.50 to $2.00?

6 A. Yes.

7 Q. And I take it you in your professional reading and 8 your -- well, let me put it this way. Are you familiar

9 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
with situations where, where petitioning firms can charge 10 as much as $4.00?

11 A. No.

12 Q. If I represented to you that Harold Hubschman's firm, 13 who is a witness for the defendants, for the defendants
14 and the intervenors, in fact, their standard rate is $4.00
15 per signature, would that surprise you?

16 MR. DUNN: Objection. That's a 17 mischaracterization of Mr. Hubschman's declaration and his 18 deposition testimony.

19 THE COURT: Well, all right. It may be but I'll 20 allow this question.

21 MR. LOPEZ: Thank you, sir.

22 BY THE WITNESS:

23 A. When I hear someone say it might be $4.00 a 24 signature, my suspicion is that there were extenuating 25 circumstances whereby someone has charged $4.00, such as,

322

1 for example, Joe Lieberman's drive to get onto the ballot 2 as a minor party candidate and his defeat in the 3 Democratic race, he needed to get a whole lot of 4 signatures in only a matter of a few days, and so for that 5 one might expect to pay a premium. On the other hand, if 6 someone can do it at the leisurely pace required under the 7 CEP, from January 1 until August, one can afford to take 8 one's time.

9 Q. All right. Let's use your number, okay? Just for 10 the sake of this examination. Let's use the round number, 11 if you don't mind, using $2.00?

12 A. Okay.

13 Q. And I want to return to how many signatures you need 14 if you want to qualify for a full grant if you're

15 governor, and I think we agreed that you would need a base 16 or 220 valid and possibly as many as 400,000 or all of 17 350,000 raw, if we just do the math on that --

18 A. It's $700,000.

19 Q. That's right. And do you know how much money a 20 candidate is allowed to spend during the qualifying period 21 to raise, to pay for that petition drive?

22 A. Not offhand for governor, I don't know, or the other, 23 for the other offices.

24 Q. Would your assessment of the reasonableness of that 25 criteria change if I told you that Governor Weicker, for 323

1 instance, would be limited to spending $250,000 during the 2 qualifying period to pay for that petition drive?

3 A. No, not at all, because a firm would be quite happy, 4 I'm sure, to do it on spec. Their expected value is the 5 probability that they'll meet the requirements times the 6 number of dollars that they'll receive should they meet 7 the requirement minus the risk associated with not getting 8 paid.

9 Q. And would your opinion change if you were told you're 10 not allowed to do it on spec?

11 A. I would be shocked if you could not do it on spec.

12 Q. Would your opinion change if you were told you're not 13 allowed to do it on spec?

14 A. Yes, it would, but I would find it hard to believe.

15 THE COURT: Mr. Lopez, how much more do you 16 have?

17 MR. LOPEZ: I don't know. I think I made my 18 points. I can probably go on for another hour.

19 THE COURT: I don't doubt that.

20 MR. LOPEZ: Yes. If I could just take a minute 21 and --

22 THE COURT: Why don't we do this. Why don't we 23 take our morning break. Let's take 15 minutes, come back 24 at 11:35, and you can finish up what you have. I have a 25 few questions and we can hear any redirect and recross,

324

1 okay? All right, thank you. We'll stand in recess.

2 THE WITNESS: May I --

3 THE COURT: Sure. You should not discuss your 4 testimony with counsel during the break. Thank you.

5 (Whereupon a recess was taken from 11:20 6 o'clock, a. m. to 11:35 o'clock, a. m.)

7 THE COURT: Mr. Lopez?

8 MR. LOPEZ: Right.

9 BY MR. LOPEZ:

10 Q. Sir, I was -- before we broke we were talking about 11 the cost of petitioning and the possibility that the cost 12 would actually exceed the amount of money you're allowed 13 to raise and spend during the qualifying period. And we 14 were talking about constitutional office, so the numbers
15 were quite large. So I want to take you through the same 16 math for legislature. I have offers where the numbers are 17 much more modest but as a real number, as a percentage, 18 actually they are similar, I'll represent.

19 But -- excuse me. So I think your testimony was that 20 the Senate districts, the candidate would have to, if he 21 wanted to petition, qualify for the petition process, he 22 would have to collect and receive a full grant, he would 23 have to collect between 5- and 10,000 signatures, is that 24 correct?

25 A. That is correct.

1 Q. And allowing for a cushion, he might collect 2 somewhere between 10- and $20,000, is that correct?
3 Depending on the district?

4 A. Yes, some more, some less.

5 Q. And using our formula at $2.00 or $1.75 a signature, 6 can we agree that, that just as a mathematical matter, the 7 cost would exceed the amount of money that you are allowed 8 to spend during the petitioning process?

9 A. Again, I think that that's true but somewhat 10 misleading, because you can always do something and bill 11 for it later as a firm. And so, to the extent that they 12 would charge you, say, $20,000 to conduct this campaign, 13 or $15,000 to conduct the campaign and bill you after 14 you've gotten your CEP grant, you would be, you would be 15 well to look in terms of that transaction.

16 Q. And if that option you just described was, in fact, 17 illegal, you would, your testimony -- your opinion would 18 change about the reasonableness of the qualifying 19 criteria?

20 A. Yes, if it were, but I do not believe that it is.

21 Q. Let me return to the subject. Let me just stay on 22 the issue of --

23 A. Can I just add one thing? It is true that we are 24 imagining this scenario whereby all of this, all of these 25 transactions are done through campaign consultants, they

1 are getting the petitions for you and doing everything 2 without you having to lift a finger, but as I said in my 3 reports and as I will say again now, there's absolutely no
4 reason that these, these requirements present anything

5 like a series of impediments to any kind of campaign, any 6 kind of challenger candidate of any party, the minor party 7 in this case who seeks to run a credible campaign, because 8 they are going to have to do these kinds of door to door 9 canvassing efforts anyway in order to have any chance at 10 achieving name recognition or win voter approval.

11 Q. The Working Family Party, you're familiar with their 12 issues?

13 A. Yes.

14 Q. And sort of their constituency?

15 A. Yes.

16 Q. Would you consider them the type of minor party that 17 might be able to mobilize a large group of supporters and 18 canvassers and to go out and collect signatures without 19 spending a lot of money?

20 A. Your question is might they be able to do so, and I 21 certainly can't argue with the notion that they might be 22 able to do so.

23 Q. Is it your opinion that they are the type of minor 24 party, because of their organizational support, that could 25 indeed meet the petitioning requirements at the

327

1 legislative level by relying on their organizational 2 structure?

3 A. Yes, they could.

4 Q. Would it surprise you to know, sir, would it -- can 5 you explain, can you -- let me represent to you, sir, that 6 the Working Family Party candidates that did qualify this 7 time, and there were two of them, both went out and hired 8 petitioning firms. Can you think of any reason, sir, why 9 they would have done that?

10 A. To make it easier for themselves. Perhaps they

11 I lacked the kind of organizational capacity and activist
12 support necessary to run a credible campaign.

13 Q. So, can I infer from your testimony that even 14 candidates from the Working Families Party who have a much 15 stronger organizational base than the Green and 16 Libertarian parties in this state, would reasonably avail 17 themselves of the services of a petitioning firm?

18 A. Well, I think that they might reasonably avail 19 themselves of the services, but whether they absolutely 20 must is really a matter of particularities. I'd have to 21 see some specific examples. We'd also have to see some, 22 something more about the depth of support for those 23 parties in those areas. I don't think that it is in the 24 spirit of the CEP to facilitate the candidacies of 25 campaigns that have, that whereby the candidate has no

328

1 support and no activist base. This is not supposed to be 2 a cash transfer from the state to a petition service such 3 that these kind of candidates need not do anything in 4 order to receive public funding.

5 We want candidates to have an incentive to build some 6 depth, some capacity, some enduring presence in their 7 constituencies in our districts.

8 Q. And I think you, sir, you said that petitioning 9 provides an opportunity for candidates to go door to door, 10 is that right?

11 A. Yes, not only candidates but candidate supporters.

12 Q. And how many contacts an hour do you think some -- a 13 candidate could make in a door to door operation?

14 A. Well, obviously it depends on how chatty they are and 15 how geographically dispersed the housing is in their 16 district, but I think 12 is a good number.

17 Q. What if they are there to persuade the voter to do 18 more than sign a petition but they -- but to also maybe 19 make a qualifying contribution and/or just to win the 20 voter's support. Is it fair to say that there might be 21 only four contacts in an hour?

22 A. It could be -- again, it depends on chattiness, but 23 what one hopes for in that particular case where one does 24 have a high quality authentic conversation with voters, is 25 that the outreach and the communication is such that when

329

1 you succeed, you not only get that person's signature and 2 that person's contribution, but, indeed, the signatures 3 and contributions of people in that person's social 4 network, so you hit the jackpot with this intensive four 5 an hour kind of canvassing when you are able to tap into 6 church groups, social groups of all sorts and have 7 multiple employer effect.

8 Q. Of the different venues you talked about that people 9 might go to to collect signatures, you talk about downtown 10 and you talk about going door to door, but the second 11 thing that you listed was group homes and I was wondering 12 if I'm missing something. Are you talking about group 13 homes --

14 A. Yes. I don't, I don't recall mentioning group homes 15 but I'm happy to talk about group homes. That's one of 16 the great reservoirs of voter activity. Very high turnout 17 group, very high levels of voter registration, lots of 18 qualified voters and an attentive audience eager for 19 interaction.

20 Q. How many people live in group homes? Do you live in 21 New Haven?

22 A. Yes.

23 Q. How many people live in group homes in New Haven?

24 A. I don't know offhand. I could consult the census, I 25 suppose.

1 Q. All right. So, sir, you live in New Haven. Do you
2 know who Allen Grison (ph) is?

3 A. No.

4 Q. All right. He was elected to the City Council of New 5 Haven last cycle.

6 A. Wonderful. Not familiar with my work --

7 Q. He might be, but he's a Green Party candidate and I 8 raise this given your testimony on both the record and 9 your report that Green Party candidates have had no 10 success in this state.

11 A. He had no success in any state legislative race, not 12 in the State House and not in the State Senate. Zero 13 success there.

14 Q. And do you think that -- do you know who elicited 15 Horton Sheff or Jean de Smet?

16 A. No.

17 Q. They hold City Council positions in Hartford and in 18 Windham.

19 A. Well, then I stand by my claim. No victories in the 20 State House or the State Senate, and those elections are 21 quite significant and the fact that not one victory has 22 occurred in the time that I've been studying is very 23 dispositive.

24 Q. There was one victory, right, it was 1992, and that 25 was Governor Weiacker and then in the ensuing year --

331

1 A. It's not a legislative election.

2 Q. But on the statewide level there was one victory, and 3 that was in 1992, right?

4 A. Well, although I'm puzzled by the adage, that's the 5 exception that proves the rule, I would say if that adage
6 were applicable, it would be applicable here. Here's a 7 governor who's a gubernatorial candidate, who's well known 8 and has developed an entire political career as a well 9 known, prominent member of a major political party who 10 switches gears and runs as a minor party candidate, does 11 very little to develop the institutional depth of a 12 Connecticut party, that party disappears immediately after 13 he disappears from the scene. They do not run a slate, a 14 well organized slate of legislative candidates, and so 15 that is a classic instance of which there are many 16 incidents in politics of specific candidates building a 17 party around them that really isn't a party in the 18 conventional sense and it doesn't have any of the usual 19 functions of a political party, and one eloquent testimony 20 to how little it resembles a political party is how 21 rapidly it disappears without this one individual.

22 Q. But the CEP isn't about financing parties, it's about 23 financing candidates, am I wrong about that?

24 A. I think that that is a fairly superficial view of the 25 CEP, that to the extent that the CEP makes it possible for

332

1 candidates to have access to resources they would 2 otherwise not have access to, it basically subsidizes the 3 institutional development of minor parties. So, minor 4 parties right now have very little organizational capacity 5 and they have very -- well, prior to the CEP they have 6 very little organizational capacity and very little

7 incentive to develop enduring capacity in any particular 8 legislative district, for example, but now they have that 9 incentive and indeed the state in some sense subsidizes 10 the development of that capacity.

11 Q. That's equally true about major party candidates 12 trying to qualify for a public financing program to the 13 extent that the subsidies seeking a Senate candidate could 14 raise funds privately.

15 A. Your earlier question was to what extent does the CEP
16 develop or work to the benefit of political parties and I
17 answered that question. And then you said, well, major 18 parties too, and I think all parties.

19 Q. So, I will take it from your testimony that you're 20 asking the court -- this is what your report implies -- to 21 discount the significance of the fact that Governor 22 Weicker won as an independent candidate, is that a fair 23 assessment?

24 A. Discount, give it no heed whatsoever. It's one of 25 those features of our plurality rule system that enable,

333

1 it enables an independent candidate to run very often in a 2 way that splits the ideological spectrum of voter and 3 enables that one candidate to get a plurality, but it's 4 not a sustainable, it's not an ascertainable situation
5 and, indeed, it has very little to do with minor parties 6 as such. These candidates such as Governor Weicker or 7 such as Senator Lieberman really did very, very little to 8 institutionalize the parties that they created.

9 Q. Well, maybe you can tell the Court the other states 10 in the last 20 years where minor party candidates have won 11 statewide office, minor party or independent candidate?

12 A. I think Vermont would be one. I don't know, this is 13 the kind of, you know, Almanac consulting activity one 14 does with the help of the internet.

15 Q. Do you recall perhaps in Maine there was a two term 16 independent?

17 A. Yes.

18 Q. Angus King?

19 A. Yes.

20 Q. And in Vermont we have Bernie Sanders?

21 A. Yes.

22 Q. And in Vermont we have a Progressive/Green that is 23 ballot qualified and runs and gets a significant 24 percentage of the vote in the last two cycles?

25 A. Yes.

334

1 Q. Right. And Anthony Pollina?

2 A. Yes.

3 Q. And in Minnesota in the last ten years we had an 4 Independent?

5 A. Yes, sir. Jesse Ventura.

6 Q. And in Alaska?

7 A. Don't know.

8 Q. We did. Am I leaving anything out?

9 A. Only the rational for the line of questions.

10 Q. Well, that's all fine and well. It's just that you 11 have said that minor and independent party candidates are 12 unelectable and the fact is that we just went through a 13 list of minor and independent party candidates, including 14 most perform too, in this state that have won statewide 15 office, all in the last 20 years.

16 And in view of that, I'm wondering if you want to in 17 any way -- and I don't expect you will, but do you want to 18 change your opinion at all about the viability of minor 19 party and independent candidates?

20 A. No, and in fact in some way that amplifies it because 21 in every one of the incidents, at least the ones I can 22 think of offhand, you have candidates that are basically 23 running on their own personal attributes, their own 24 personal cache with voters. They are often, they often 25 have their own sort of retinue of support that has nothing

335

1 to do with the fact that they are associated with a minor
2 party. As a result, they are able to accumulate enough 3 votes so that Duverger's Law does not apply to them. They 4 are able to move to one of the top two vote-getting 5 candidates.

6 Once they do that, they siphon off votes from the 7 other candidates. The classic case would be Jesse Ventura
8 who runs as a kind of candidate that splits the difference
9 between the Democrat and Republican competitors. Now, 10 they are terrible at institutionalizing minor parties so 11 it's as though they are simply running as celebrities and 12 in some ways they are celebrities but once they are gone, 13 in some sense the system goes right back to the way it 14 used to be. There aren't any new minor party registrants.
15 There aren't any new minor party identifiers. The 16 institutional structure of the minor parties they create 17 remains feeble and underdeveloped, and so it has all the 18 usual properties of minor party disarray.

19 Q. So, it's all in your report and you said it on direct 20 but what I'm asking, is it your opinion that this 21 justifies the adoption of a law that makes it harder for 22 minor and independent party candidates to compete on the

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
23 same terms that their major party opponents compete?

24 A. My view is the CEP makes it easier for minor parties 25 because it provides them with financial incentives.

1 THE COURT: Abraham Lincoln did a little bit 2 better job of making the minor party stick around.

3 THE WITNESS: That's right. He did a wonderful 4 job, and one of the things about Lincoln that should be 5 kept in mind as we think about minor parties is that, you
6 know, the Connecticut system is not labeled any particular 7 party, as major or minor. It doesn't consign particular 8 parties to a system of any kind of verbiage. If we had 9 minor party people running on slavery, I submit that they 10 would do fairly well in the legislative elections and they 11 would not have a record of these elections, but part of 12 what we're talking about as the infirmities of minor 13 parties is they tend to have very little appeal to voters.

14 THE COURT: Well, under the CEP the definition 15 of a major party is essentially based upon 20 percent of 16 the vote in the last gubernatorial election.

17 THE WITNESS: Yes, and 20 percent of the 18 registrant's longevity.

19 THE COURT: Fair enough. Isn't 20 percent the 20 magic number that Republicans and Democrats virtually 21 always hit and a minor party virtually never hits?

22 THE WITNESS: Well, there aren't very many 23 instances in American history where the two parties have 24 been upset by the third party by creating a kind of 25 template, at least enduring realignment of voter affinity.

337

1 So there are instances where the Wig Party gave way, there 2 are instances where the Progressive Party made its

3 inroads, but by and large, the two parties we have have 4 been around for a long time. I don't think though that 5 it's a kind of artificial number. I think the 20 percent 6 actually does represent more or less the minimum that any 7 credible candidate could get and still limp along and 8 expect to do, you know, credibly in the next election.
9 It's -- 20 percent is a disastrous defeat, maybe not in a 10 four-way but in a two or three-way competition, you've 11 lost decisively, where anybody who has career aspirations 12 would call it quits at that point.

13 THE COURT: Okay, but doesn't that overlook the 14 other values of running? If you're in a current minor 15 party, presumably you have some interest, don't you, in 16 running for a reason other than actually winning; you want 17 to get your message across?

18 THE WITNESS: Yes.

19 THE COURT: Or you want to develop a party name.
20 You want to build toward becoming a viable party.

21 THE WITNESS: Yes, and I think all those things 22 are valid policy objectives in getting parties to get 23 their message out, to educate voters about their party
24 platforms and that sort of thing. However, I would say 25 that the CEP is justified in requiring of the minor

338

1 parties that they show some, you know, minimal level of 2 committee to voter outreach, so asking them to have a few 3 petitions signed is really a very small number when you
4 talk about the time they have to gather those petitions --

5 THE COURT: Let me actually press you on this -- 6 and I'm sorry to interrupt but I've got some questions and 7 if you don't mind, I'm --

MR. LOPEZ: Can I sit down?

THE COURT: Sure.

You talked about petitions and in your initial testimony you talked about getting 16,000 signatures in order to have 700 valid and you seem to generally buy the idea that a petitioner would give twice the required number.

THE WITNESS: Certainly more than the minimum number, that's for sure.

THE COURT: All right. If we use twice, in order to qualify for a full CEP grant a petitioning candidate would have to obtain 40 percent, signatures from 40 percent of the voters who have voted in the last election, right?

THE WITNESS: Right, under that logic.

THE COURT: Under that logic. So, has any petition drive in America for any state, federal or referendum ever achieved 40 percent of the voting public?

339

THE WITNESS: I don't believe I can think of one offhand, but certainly there are petition drives that are able to be done with remarkable acridity over very constrained time period. You think Connecticut for Lieberman as a classic case.

THE COURT: I wanted to ask you that, too. Is it easier or harder for a minor party candidate to get signatures on a petition than for a major party candidate, even if they are quickly changing their affiliation?

THE WITNESS: Yes -- well, I guess this is a kind of question to which I don't know the answer. I think in some ways my suspicion is that if you said to a voter, look, we want to make sure that on November's

14 ballot you have the widest array of choice and we want to 15 have all candidates get an equal chance to have their 16 voices heard. We're asking you to sign a petition but you 17 don't have to if you don't want to. It's for, say, the 18 Green Party candidate or Libertarian candidate. If you 19 want to make a $5.00 qualifying contribution for that 20 person, we'd love to have it. I think if you were to do 21 that kind of outreach effort in a nonpushy way, you could 22 probably be very successful. It might not attract the 23 same amount of enthusiasm if you're trying to get 24 petitions for the Nazi Party or the Communist Party, but I 25 think that within the range of minor parties that are on

340

1 record as benign by major party adherence, you probably 2 could do okay.

3 THE COURT: But doesn't that assume that voters
4 are indifferent between the two major parties? If I'm 5 presented with a petition and I'm a staunch Republican and 6 I know that my candidate is going to face a tough race, I
7 don't want to create the possibility that another 8 candidate's going to siphon off my candidate's votes. A 9 three-way race, if you look at history, especially the 10 presidential elections, you know, Clinton gets in in a 11 three-way race, Bush gets in in a three-way race -- I mean 12 real three-way races.

13 THE WITNESS: Right, but which party are you 14 supporting, an incumbent or a challenger? Because if 15 you're supporting a Republican --

16 THE COURT: That's my point. If I have -- half 17 the voters are going to say I don't want to sign this 18 petition because it's going to siphon off votes from my

19 guy. If I think that the petitioning party is closer 20 ideologically to my party, I'm not going to sign. Why?
21 Because it will slight my side's votes. So, when you're a 22 minor party petitioning, don't you face the prospect of 23 getting 40, needing 40 percent of the signatures from 24 50 percent -- it's virtually impossible to get 40 percent 25 of the people who voted when really only 50 percent are

341

1 eligible to vote and realistically are going to sign your 2 petition.

3 THE WITNESS: I think that logic is, some of it
4 is counterbalanced by ideological affinity and that's one
5 that people, major parties might feel toward other minor
6 parties. So, for example, you have Democrats who don't 7 look down their noses at the Working Family Party, they 8 like their goals, they might not be so driven to think 9 strategically about whether they're undermining their 10 preferred platform, so they might not sign the petition 11 for the Working Family Party. I think, I think it's -- if 12 it's the Green Party or Libertarian Party, there isn't 13 diffused support, latent support for those parties, but 14 that's not really a problem. It's not the fault of the 15 CEP, that's a fact about where those parties have 16 positioned themselves ideologically.

17 THE COURT: But it's also, isn't it, it's an 18 issue about how districts are drawn in Connecticut.
19 There's not a lot of support for the Republican party in 20 the City of Bridgeport, for example. Why? Because of 21 where the lines are drawn. You have in the City of 22 Bridgeport a very urban population that has historically 23 been extremely strong Democratic and there may be no more 24 support for Republican party candidates in Bridgeport than 25 there are for Green Party candidates in Bridgeport.

342

1 THE WITNESS: Yes.

2 THE COURT: Let me switch over because I wanted
3 to press you a little bit. It seems to me there is an 4 inherent inconsistency in your testimony on this issue.
5 You've said a number of times that the 10, 15, 20 percent 6 threshold are remarkably easy to achieve.

7 THE WITNESS: Yes.

8 THE COURT: And you've also expressed a concern 9 that those levels need to be set where they will prevent 10 stalking horse candidates.

11 THE WITNESS: Yes.

12 THE COURT: If they are extremely easy to 13 achieve, then they don't preclude or prevent or inhibit 14 stalking horse candidates. What is to prevent the 15 Republican Party from going out and saying we have a new 16 Republican Party and we're going to run a candidate and 17 get a Democrat to be our candidate and we're going to very 18 easily qualify that person for full CEP funding and siphon
19 off the Democratic purpose.

20 THE WITNESS: Well, I think it's certainly a 21 logical possibility, and I don't think that the law
22 prevents it, but I think that by making the requirements 23 what they are makes it more difficult, and so --

24 THE COURT: Well, that's the problem because 25 this also makes it more difficult for the minor parties.

343

1 You can't have it both ways. You can't have it remarkably 2 easy to qualify for minor parties and sufficiently 3 difficult to prevent a stalking horse. It just doesn't work. The choice has to be one or the other, doesn't it?

4 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt

5 THE WITNESS: I don't know that it has to be one
6 or the other. I think of it more as a balancing act. You 7 have these two competing considerations and you strike a 8 happy medium.

9 THE COURT: Okay. Are you aware of another 10 public financing system that uses the thresholds as high 11 as Connecticut does?

12 THE WITNESS: You know, I really haven't, you 13 know, developed expertise on other campaign finance 14 systems and I apologize for that.

15 THE COURT: You testified that there's incentive
16 under the CEP for voters to vote for minor party
17 candidates. Again, doesn't that assume that the voters 18 are largely indifferent between the major parties? So the 19 petitioning example I used a moment ago, if you look at 20 Florida in 2000, you had Gore, Bush, Nader, and there was 21 a big push by Nader to get 5 percent because he wanted to 22 qualify for federal funding.

23 THE WITNESS: Right.

24 THE COURT: Do you realistically think that 25 voters were saying, well, I'm indifferent between Bush and 344

1 Gore, I'm going to go ahead and vote for Nader and make 2 sure he gets the 5 percent. We have a little less 3 democratic system here.

4 THE WITNESS: But, in 2000 they were thinking
5 that and that's part of why Nader did well in places like 6 New Hampshire where he proved to be decisive. He was 7 decisive in Florida as well. Now, he did fall short of 8 that five percent threshold in many bases but I think that 9 a consideration for voters, it's basically creating an

10 intermediate goal for voters in campaigns, that, you know, 11 would otherwise be faced with this kind of win or take all 12 logic with nothing else besides a victory to show for it.

13 So the fact that you can say, look, I'm trying 14 to get to the ten percent threshold so that I can qualify 15 next time, gives people who are relatively indifferent or 16 who might like the personal attributes of the candidate 17 running for the party, those people might be inclined to 18 vote for the minor party candidate.

19 THE COURT: You testified that the CEP has great 20 advantages for the minor parties because it effectively 21 funds their efforts to establish themselves. Doesn't that 22 testimony assume that the minor parties can easily qualify
23 for funding? In other words, are there advantages to a 24 minor party candidate who is unable, for whatever reason, 25 to qualify for CEP funding from the fact that both major

345

1 parties automatically qualify for CEP funding?

2 THE WITNESS: Not obvious advantages. I think 3 that the advantages that go to minor party candidates grew 4 when they qualify, and so in some sense the duty of the 5 CEP is that it provides a relatively clear structure for 6 minor party candidates to focus their efforts on doing the 7 things necessary to win elections, or at least win enough 8 electoral support so they can qualify the next time 9 around. I think under the status quo, they had no such 10 incentives and then were in complete disarray. I think 11 that time will show that the CEP greatly helps the minor 12 parties get their acts together.

13 THE COURT: All right.

14 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, I've got three more

15 minutes?

16 THE COURT: All right, let me suggest this. I
17 just basically interrupted. Why don't we get any redirect 18 that we want to have and then we'll do yours in one shot.

19 MR. DUNN: Could I have 30 seconds, Your Honor?

20 THE COURT: Sure.

21 (Pause)

22 THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I'm thinking of the 23 answer that I gave very quickly to something you said and 24 I just wanted to qualify it a little bit. You mentioned 25 that in Bridgeport you thought that the Republicans had

346

1 less support than Greens.

2 THE COURT: Well, I don't know, they might. I
3 have no idea.

4 THE WITNESS: Because I was thinking that if we 5 were to inspect that proposition carefully, I think we 6 might find the opposite is true, that when you take a 7 close look at votes for popular Republican candidates, 8 Jodi Rell, for example, you might find there's no latent 9 support for Republicans. It's just that the kind of 10 Republicans who often stay out of lopsided local races, 11 that the Republican expression of support for Republicans 12 is very, very minimal in Bridgeport. They just don't have 13 any candidate to vote for. But when they are given a 14 candidate that's reasonably popular, that candidate is 15 probably more viable in voters' eyes than the Green Party
16 would be. So I guess --

17 THE COURT: That's very possible, but the point
18 of my question is really this. In a legislative election 19 in Bridgeport, where history is likely to show -- I 20 haven't studied it but it wouldn't surprise me if the 21 Republicans who either haven't run or have run trail

22 poorly. Why is the Republican candidate treated 23 differently than a minor party candidate in terms of 24 qualifying? Why shouldn't -- this is, I know, irrelevant 25 to our lawsuit because I'm asking your opinion about what

347

1 the law might be and it isn't, but from a theoretical 2 point of view, why shouldn't the Republican have to 3 qualify under those circumstances as much as minor party
4 would? There's no history of support, electoral support
5 for the Republican candidate in Bridgeport.

6 THE WITNESS: Except that there really probably 7 is more potential electoral support in that area than 8 there is for minor party candidates and more than meets 9 the eye, and the way you see that is every once in a while 10 some well-heeled Republican will run in those 11 constituencies and do far better than any of the minor 12 party counterparts. Some parties are run even though they 13 are only facing a major party opponent. If a candidate 14 were to run in a way that's kind of ideologically proximal 15 to the dominant major party, he or she would do fairly 16 well, but those candidates don't grow on trees because 17 their chance of outright victory are fairly low.

18 So, for example, you think of a Republican
19 African American candidate, well connected candidate, well 20 connected enough with the rest of the Republican party so 21 they could draw on activists and draw on donors. They 22 would almost certainly do better than their Green Party or 23 Libertarian or whatever counterparts do in those 24 districts. It's just that, you know, those are fairly 25 rare candidates because those candidates have already

348

1 determined that their time would be better spent running 2 for other offices.

5 REDIRECT EXAMINATION

6 BY MR. DUNN:

7 Q. Professor Green, Judge Underhill just asked you a 8 question a few minutes ago about whether the, in effect
9 when the rising tide raises the votes, whether the minor 10 parties are benefited because major parties participate 11 under the CEP. I want to ask a little variant on that.
12 Are they hurt if, if you have CEP funding participation 13 for major party candidates and you have a minor party
14 candidate who runs but doesn't qualify, are the interests 15 of that minor party candidate hurt by the CEP funding 16 scheme?

17 A. Not necessarily. To the extent that minor party 18 candidate is just going to get fewer votes because the two 19 major party candidates are going to gobble up more votes, 20 well, yes. But to the extent that the minor party 21 candidates are committed to get the word out about the 22 incumbent, to get the word out about the issues associated 23 with that minor party, it could well be that having two 24 major party contestants actually making the district
25 competitive will engage voter interest. A typical voter

1 is only minimally interested in uncontested legislative 2 districts. Those that actually are hard fought might peak 3 voter interest.

4 Q. So, you're saying the effect of the CEP is to induce 5 the non-entrenched major party to run a candidate that

6 doesn't necessarily hurt the interests of the minor party 7 participant, even assuming they don't -- if they don't get 8 funding?

9 A. That is correct.

10 Q. Obviously if they get funding, then the CEP 11 benefits both them and the major party significantly, is 12 that the case?

13 A. Yes.

14 Q. Suppose --

15 THE COURT: But what's the theory? You have two 16 funded candidates and you've got the Green Party. Now 17 what's the theory that the Green Party's not hurt?

18 THE WITNESS: The idea is the Green Party under 19 that kind of counterfactual scenario is not getting any 20 money because they are not part of the CEP. Now, under 21 the CEP they are still not getting any money because they 22 didn't qualify.

23 THE COURT: But now they are running, there's 24 two instead of one, so the question is they get fewer 25 votes? Is that what happens?

350

1 THE WITNESS: They get fewer votes. However,
2 now that there are two candidates to campaign, to apply 3 for funding, they are engaging voter interest in this 4 election. You have an actual contested election. Voters 5 are thinking this is actually an election to pay some 6 attention to and in particular I'm hearing some things 7 that make me question whether we should reelect the 8 incumbent. That in my view would be the entree for a 9 minor party candidate to make some inroads.

10 THE COURT: Can you back that up with empirical

11 evidence?

12 THE WITNESS: Well, you know --

13 THE COURT: In other words, it seems more 14 intuitive to me when you have a very crowded field and a 15 well funded Republican and well funded Democrat, you know, 16 how is a minor party going to get any attention in there?

17 THE WITNESS: Well, one theory is you just 18 measure it by the amount of attention they are getting, 19 but another theory is you ask whether the message that 20 they are spreading about the incumbent is getting, is 21 coming into wider currency, and I think that to the extent 22 that part of what a candidate does who's challenging an 23 incumbent is to say stop reelecting this incumbent, take a 24 hard look at what he or she has done in office, they join 25 the chorus of people who are saying that and I think that

351

1 because the electorate is more interested in the campaign 2 because it's more of an actual contested election, they 3 are less likely to, you know, express that to their fears.

4 THE COURT: But if the goal is to vote out the 5 incumbent, isn't the typical voter going to say, wow, you 6 know, the major party opponent to the incumbent has a much 7 better chance of actually winning than the Green Party so 8 I wouldn't vote for the Green Party, but you know what?
9 Since the Republicans decided to run this year, I'm voting 10 for them because they have a chance of actually unseating 11 this Democrat incumbent.

12 THE WITNESS: In some respects, that is 13 Duverger's Law. However, the question was what about 14 getting the message out and I think to the extent that the 15 message is going to voters who regard this seat as 16 something that is in play, the message is more likely than 17 not to get out.

18 THE COURT: Okay, but if they would get X votes
19 and they are now going to get X minus 37 votes or half X 20 votes, isn't their reputation as a party harmed? In other 21 words, I'm not going to vote for these people, they only 22 got 3 percent last time, whereas if there's not full 23 funding and they are the only opponent then and they get 7 24 or 8 percent, they start showing up on people's radar.

25 THE WITNESS: I think that there's some truth in 352

1 that, but presumably that creates incentives for minor 2 parties to do a better job of attracting voters or 3 attracting voter support. You know, we think of what 4 would happen if Abraham Lincoln were running, Abraham 5 Lincoln would be running on anti-slavery and that would be 6 getting, that would be propelling the incipient Republican
7 Party into that second position. Right now the minor 8 parties are in the third position. They can't get in the 9 second position because their policy views are out of the 10 mainstream.

11 THE COURT: All right. Let me ask you this. To 12 what extent are your opinions today based upon political 13 science theory versus hard data about election results?
14 In other words, your arguments seem to be more theoretical 15 to me. And you're taking a position and I'm playing 16 Devil's advocate and neither of us has any data to back it 17 up, is my sense.

18 THE WITNESS: Well, I think that in some of the 19 cases like, you know, how does a petition drive work or 20 how could you construct the financial incentives to make 21 it over the thresholds, that's fairly empirical. I

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
22 haven't conducted controlled studies but I have a sense of 23 what things look like on the ground there. When we're 24 talking about the nature of say party attachments, that's 25 also empirical. I feel as though I'm well grounded in 353

1 terms of whether, you know, people have party attachments, 2 whether they are fairly weak for minor parties and that 3 sort of thing. When we're talking about moving from one 4 regime, one policy regime to another, well, you know, the 5 data are just now coming in for 2008, it's only in a few 6 months that we get a sense of how things have actually 7 changed on the ground, and we shifted from one policy to 8 another.

9 THE COURT: Right, but, for example, are your 10 opinions based on an analysis of what happened in other 11 states when they moved to a public financing system?

12 THE WITNESS: No.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 THE WITNESS: It's not empirical in that sense.

15 MR. DUNN: I have just one more question.

16 BY MR. DUNN:

17 Q. We just talked about the situation where the effect
18 of the CEP is to bring an otherwise nonparticipating major 19 party candidate into a party dominant district. What 20 about the situation in which that doesn't happen, where 21 you have a party dominant district, you've got an 22 entrenched incumbent, he or she chooses to participate in 23 it and obtain CEP funding. You have a minor party 24 candidate. I think we talked about the benefits the minor 25 party candidate can achieve if they do qualify for

354

1 benefits under the CEP. But suppose they don't? Are

2 their interests hurt or does it matter to them if the 3 major party candidate is a participant or a nonparticipant
4 or are there ways in which the interests of the minor 5 party candidate in an entrenched district are injured or 6 impaired by participation of their opponent?

7 A. I would say that on balance it's probably going to be 8 a wash because we have to ask what would their entrenched
9 incumbent do in the absence of the CEP. The entrenched 10 incumbent might raise more money and might raise money
11 that would be from different sources. So the conjecture 12 of those two things might make it worse for the minor 13 party in the status quo arena, it's hard to say, but I
14 would just say on average you would expect that the, I 15 would say that the minor party candidate is in somebody's 16 advantage just by virtue of the fact that the incumbent 17 party's resources are now a known quantity under the CEP, 18 whereas one of the biggest hurdles that challengers face 19 in all legislative elections, state or federal, is the 20 uncertainty of how deep the incumbent's pockets are. When 21 you're challenging and your incumbent can tap into a vast 22 network, you can get crushed unexpectedly.

23 Q. And, in any event, in that situation you have the 24 latent, if you will, advantage from the CEP of the 25 potential for the minor party candidate to achieve the 355

1 levels of voter turnout or voter participation necessary
2 for funding in the next campaign?

3 A. That is right, that is right. It does give the -- 4 the CEP gives the minor party candidate some intermediate 5 objectives that would create some advantages for 6 subsequent candidates.

RE CROSS EXAMINATION

BY MR. LOPEZ:

Q. Sir, on the same point the judge was asking you questions on and Mr. Dunn was asking you questions on, if I understood you correctly, your view is that in a situation where a Republican enters, a Republican publicly financed candidate enters a Democratic dominant district that previously involved only the Dem and the minor party, your testimony is that there's no measurable injury on the minor party candidate in that situation?

A. Well, the minor party candidate is likely to receive fewer votes but the questions evolved around whether they were impaired in their ability to get their message out, and I don't think the answer is yes to that.

Q. But isn't there some significance to the fact, and think this through, isn't there some significance to the fact they got, they might and most likely will, I think we can agree, receive fewer votes?

A. I'm not sure, the question is --

Q. I mean can we agree there's some significance to the fact that they might and almost certainly will receive fewer votes?

A. I guess you can't disagree with the question is there some significance. There's some significance, but whether a minor party candidate under the old system, a candidate under the old system loses by 388 to 12 or 93 to 7 is not of great significance, even though it's now of significance under the CEP.

Q. That's precisely my point. There is a significance under the CEP, isn't there? Isn't there a difference

13 between losing by 11.7 percent, as Mr. DeRosa did in 2004, 14 and losing by 66 percent as he did this year when there 15 was a third -- when there was a second major party 16 candidate in the race cycle?

17 A. You say "lose by," you mean that's his vote total?

18 Q. That is correct, sir.

19 A. Not the margin, but yes, there is a difference under 20 the CEP under those two scenarios.

21 Q. And what is the difference, what's your 22 understanding?

23 A. Well, the difference is that now Mr. DeRosa would be 24 forced to petition if he wants to qualify next time 25 around.

1 Q. There's another type of difference also when a second
2 major party candidate qualifies for public funding in a
3 briefly abandoned or noncompetitive district, isn't there?

4 A. I'm not sure what you're driving at.

5 Q. The other -- isn't it correct that providing full 6 public funding for the second major party candidate 7 increases the relative financial advantage that major 8 party candidate has over the minor party candidate?

9 A. Still I'm not quite getting what you're driving at.
10 Are you saying that the cumulative resources associated 11 with the major parties is now greater?

12 Q. Yes, sir.

13 A. Yes, although I think in the context of actual 14 political competition, that, if anything, renounces the 15 benefit of the minor parties because these major party 16 candidates will spend the money, you know, trying to 17 convince voters about why the other is a bad candidate,

18 poor candidate, doesn't serve the public trust, et cetera, 19 et cetera.

20 Q. I want to ask you to try to explain that. Maybe the 21 judge will --

22 A. Well, I'll say it again.

23 Q. Okay.

24 A. You have two major parties who are contesting
25 vigorously. They will do everything they can to increase

358

1 their standing relative to their major party opponent.
2 They are not terribly concerned about their minor party
3 opponent. Their minor party opponent only can attract 4 votes if he or she can take them away from the incumbent's 5 lopsided ante vote total. And so, in that sense, having 6 another major party candidate criticize the incumbent 7 actually helps the minor party.

8 Q. I understand your point that the increased 9 competition provides a greater incentive to work, to work
10 harder if you're a minor party candidate, but aren't you 11 in fact competing in a, not only a more expensive district 12 now but a more competitive enforcement, a more difficult 13 environment where it's harder to be heard, where maybe 14 it's harder to get invited to debates, where maybe you get 15 less media coverage. Isn't this all very predictable?

16 A. You know, in terms of getting invited to debates, I 17 don't know. I've seen it go both ways. In terms of the 18 cost of actually engaging in campaigns, probably there's 19 no effect because the kinds of campaign controls who are 20 likely to work for each of the three candidates are likely 21 to be very different and not overlapping.

22 But in terms of getting votes, it's going to be hard 23 and the reason is that the partisans who support the 24 lesser of the two major parties are going to more likely 25 vote for their own party's candidate and less likely to

359

1 vote for you. But whether that, that attempt in some 2 sense harms the standing of the minor party all depends on 3 the gullibility of the observer, because any observer who 4 sees a minor party candidate get trounced, say, 88 to 12, 5 would surely know that that 12 is a mirage, that 12 is 6 more like a 3 if that candidate, that major party 7 candidate actually had a major party opponent.

8 Q. This is at the conclusion, so let me just ask you a 9 little bit about the qualifying criteria. You talked 10 about petitions but there's a second component to 11 qualifying and it concerns raising seed money or 12 qualifying contributions.

13 A. Yes.

14 Q. You understand how the system works; if you're 15 running for statewide you have to raise $250,000 in $100 16 units or less?

17 A. Yes.

18 Q. Do you have any experience that would, that you 19 could, that could -- withdrawn.

20 Based on the work you've done in helping crafting 21 fund raising strategies, your academic work you've done 22 doing that, what's involved in raising that amount of 23 money in units like that, that small?

24 A. Well, you need a -- you need to take a few different 25 factors into consideration. First, you would need a

360

1 target donor list. You would probably have to have some 2 sense of what kind of outreach strategy you are likely to

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
3 pursue. Would this be through direct mail solicitation, 4 through phone calls, would this be based on events, would 5 you be doing this door to door. You know, all of those 6 kinds of things tend to be money losing propositions for 7 professional fundraisers. It's only when they have a 8 relatively well worked list of continual donors that it
9 tends to be profitable. However, remember that the CEP 10 does not require this kind of fundraising effort to be 11 profitable. If you spent $50,000 on a group of people who 12 are going to help you raise 15,000, for example, for a 13 state senate office, you would nevertheless qualify. So I 14 think that to the extent that even a badly run fundraising 15 campaign can be successful, you have the wherewithal for 16 the relatively easy path to qualify.

17 Q. Well, the example you just gave us, let's just talk 18 about that. You said 50,000 to raise 15,000. Again, 19 those are your words but is that, is that your opinion 20 about what it would cost to raise the 15,000? That seems 21 a little -- seems a little unreasonable to me but maybe 22 you want to qualify that.

23 A. Again, to use the very, very large number, using the 24 hypothetical that I gave before where you're basically 25 hiring a firm to raise your qualifying contributions, say

1 a firm cost $50,000, you now will get an $85,000 grant 2 plus the $15,000 they raised, so that's $100,000. They 3 are giving them half. So it's easy to do the math, it's 4 so overwhelming --

5 Q. Is it your opinion if you did hire a firm it could 6 cost you 50,000 to raise 5,000?

7 A. No.

8 Q. What is your opinion?

9 A. The typical unworked list, it loses money on the 10 order of like 20 percent, so it might end up costing you 11 20 percent over and above the 15,000 to raise the 15,000.
12 You know, essentially my point is simply that it doesn't 13 matter. The details don't matter. The thing that matters 14 is that there will be a market that will make it 15 profitable for groups to assist in the raising of 16 qualified contributions.

17 Although I do take Your Honor's point about not 18 making it such an easy go that there's essentially no 19 deterrence for stalking horse candidates. And perhaps the 20 way to prevent stalking horse candidates in this context 21 is to make the threshold sufficiently large so that it's 22 not so easy but also to have the watch dog organizations 23 cull out the stalking horse candidates so they can't get 24 away with it.

25 Q. So, your testimony is then, at least going through

362

1 the firm route, it would cost you at least 17,000 to raise 2 15,000?

3 A. Yes.

4 Q. And that's based on a 20 percent?

5 A. Yes. You're doing the math -- assuming your math is 6 right.

7 Q. Well, I would come to a higher number. I would get 8 to 18,000 based on a 20 percent loss rate.

9 A. That's fine. What's $500 between friends?

10 Q. Now, I'm going to talk about millions of dollars 11 because we're going to talk about statewide office. Is it 12 fair to say it would cost to raise $250,000 necessary to 13 qualify for --

THE COURT: Governor.

Q. -- for Governor, you would have to raise the cost of, that would be $300,000. Can we agree on that?

MR. DUNN: Objection. Are we still talking about a fund raising consultant working with an untested list? Those are the assumptions that you want Professor Green to keep?

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. DUNN:

Q. Professor Green, if you had a finite group list or a tested list, would you expect that fundraising could be accomplished in which you raised more money than it cost you to raise the money?

A. Yes, particularly over time because as a list develops, in subsequent election cycles it would become more efficient to raise money from that group.

Q. So, if you had a party that had an existing list, they worked with a list of contributors who contributed before, presumably you could perform that fundraising function on a probable basis so it wouldn't cost you as much as you would raise?

A. Yes.

20 Q. So you aren't suggesting that the minor party could 21 expect to experience what Mr. Lopez just suggested, 22 what --

23 A. That's right. I'm thinking more in terms of how you 24 perform in your first election campaign.

25 Q. Also, is it the case that the internet is a resource

364

1 available in today's day and age for statewide or national 2 fundraisers?

3 A. Yes. When successful, it greatly increases the 4 profit amount of those kinds of funding efforts, provided 5 they are sufficiently well known to the district, 6 potential donors in the district.

7 Q. Is the cost incrementally small compared to what you 8 could potentially raise?

9 A. Yes.

10 MR. DUNN: Nothing further.

especially academic expert witnesses to talk about

18 hypothetical examples and political theory, and that was very valuable, but what I think I'm going to focus on in 20 my presentation is, instead, a more factual analysis of 21

19

what is the plaintiff's burden in this proceeding and have 22 they shown it. And specifically I think what, you know, the question that needs to be answered is what evidence of 24 actual harm have the plaintiffs put forward that would

23

25 justify ruling this statute unconstitutional, especially on a facial challenge.

And we listened to Mr. Lopez's presentation yesterday and, you know, at the end of the day it was my feeling that nothing the plaintiffs had put forward would

5 satisfy that burden.

6 In terms of the nature of the harms that 7 plaintiffs were alleging, I think that there were really 8 four categories of harm, which I mean address in turn as 9 an introduction.

10 The first was, initially they had alleged in an 11 earlier phase in this proceeding that the CEP will 12 virtually compel major party competition in party dominant 13 districts. I think that we will, you know, going forward 14 with the 2008 election results in March, we will proffer
15 that there was in fact no net increase in contestedness
16 that was demonstrated after the enactment of the CEP.
17 There was one additional House District that was 18 contested. That was it. There simply is not any basis 19 for this court to draw an inference that the CEP virtually 20 compels major party, virtually compels major party 21 competition, especially in a way that would disadvantage
22 minor party candidates.

23 The second area of harm that the plaintiffs have 24 sought to demonstrate is that major parties will not be 25 able to qualify for CEP funding, and we think that we will 367

1 be able to demonstrate both under the prior vote threshold
2 and under the petitioning analysis that, you know, as a 3 matter of legislative inch hills, the legislature 4 specifically took into account evidence that shows that 5 minor parties would participate. And we will point Your 6 Honor to those places in the legislative history where the 7 legislature had before it evidence showing that 13 percent
8 of minor party candidates would be automatically eligible 9 for some level of CEP funding under the thresholds that

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
10 were set. And secondly, again, out of our proffer for 11 2008, we will be able to show you in March that five minor 12 party candidates did, in fact, qualify for CEP funding, 13 one through the far view threshold and four through the 14 petitioning route.

15 Thirdly, and this really goes to the motion for 16 reconsidering the matching fund analysis, under those 17 particular provisions, plaintiffs have alleged that they 18 will be chilled in a future course of action. Now, we 19 will, when I get to that part we will demonstrate that the 20 evidence is that plaintiffs have never before come close 21 to engaging in this type of behavior and, as a matter of 22 law, an affidavit of bare intent to engage in some future
23 pattern of behavior that plaintiffs have never before 24 engaged in is not sufficient at the trial stage for 25 standing.

368

1 And, finally, Your Honor, toward the end
2 yesterday, Mr. Lopez said, well, we didn't really have to 3 allege harm to minor parties; instead, all we have to 4 prove is a benefit to major parties in order to prevail, 5 and I would submit to the court that that is a, that that 6 is simply wrong as a matter of constitutional law. That 7 would require that all public financing systems are unable 8 to set qualification thresholds, period, much less on the 9 basis of public support. If the mere --

10 THE COURT: Let me interrupt there because I
11 understood his point to be in order to satisfy a standing 12 requirement by showing a benefit to the major parties, 13 there is sufficient implied or necessary harm to the minor 14 parties to confer standing that wouldn't prevent states 15 from enacting whatever they wanted to enact, but it would 16 permit minor parties in effect to challenge the 17 constitutionality of the provisions.

18 MS. YOUN: Yes, I'm afraid I was unclear there 19 when I was talking about his analysis at the end of the 20 day. I wasn't referring to the standing argument, I was 21 referring to an overall analysis which is the CEP 22 unconstitutional because it confers benefits to major 23 parties that it's not conferred upon some minor party 24 candidates, and I would submit that as a matter of 25 constitutional law, that is not constitutional injury.

369

1 And I wanted to, first of all, to talk in an 2 oral argument mode about this question of competition, 3 because a consistent theme of the plaintiff's arguments
4 have been that the CEP will increase competition and that 5 this itself is a basis for this court to find this statute
6 unconstitutional, and I would say that is a radical 7 revision of what constitutional law tells us. And I want 8 to kind of play this out by thinking about some analogous 9 example, which is term limits.

10 Now, it's very true that in many jurisdictions, 11 without term limits there is an entrenched incumbent in 12 seats and minor party candidates running against this 13 incumbent might consistently get a certain percentage of 14 the vote and that vote would be a protest vote. Now, if a 15 legislature or, you know, whatever the term in that 16 jurisdiction, were to enact a term limit law that had the 17 effect of, you know, loosening that entrenched incumbent, 18 that race would become an open seat. It is far more 19 likely that a major party candidate would contest that 20 open seat. That minor party candidate in that district

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
21 that had formally been entrenched might see that, their 22 share of the vote, the share that represented only a 23 protest vote go down. That is not a basis for holding 24 that term limits are unconstitutional. The mere fact that 25 a statute has an effect of increasing electoral competition

370

1 is not constitutional injury.

2 And the term limits example is specifically
3 discussed, was specifically considered by the Sixth 4 Circuit in Citizens for Legislative Choice v. Miller. The 5 cite for that is 144 F.3d at 916, where they stated that 6 the state, they upheld term limits law where the state's 7 interest was that, quote, "lifetime term limits will 8 foster electoral competition by reducing the advantages 9 incumbency and encouraging new candidates. The mere fact 10 that a statute increases competition is not a sufficient 11 basis to hold that unconstitutional."

12 I would also say another example that would work 13 the same way is if one relaxed the ballot qualification 14 threshold. For example, a jurisdiction that currently had 15 a 5 percent ballot qualification threshold, they were to 16 knock that down to a 1 percent threshold. The Green Party 17 candidate might find themselves in competition with 18 another minor party candidate. This might decrease the 19 Green Party candidate share of the vote because of this 20 increased competition. That is not, again, a reason to 21 hold that, you know, that statute had the effect of 22 encouraging competition unconstitutionally.

23 THE COURT: Let me just interrupt and find out, 24 because I really didn't understand Mr. Lopez to be raising 25 this other than in the standing context. Is it your

371

1 argument that, you're arguing that the statute's 2 unconstitutional because it increases competition,
3 electoral competition?

4 MR. LOPEZ: No, Your Honor. The argument is 5 that under the statute, candidates, major party candidates 6 are given a benefit that increases their electoral 7 opportunities and it's a benefit that is denied to minor
8 party candidates. It's true about the trigger provisions 9 as well, and the standing argument is limited to trigger
10 provisions. As I understand it, they are not challenging 11 our standing to challenge this overall --

12 THE COURT: Right.

13 MR. LOPEZ: -- but the guts of our case, and it 14 is firmly supported by the case law, is that you can't 15 give benefits to major party candidates and deny them to 16 minor party candidates, and the reason this court, and the 17 reason we distinguish Buckley is because in Buckley, a 18 benefit wasn't at issue because there was no benefit.
19 That was the conclusion of the court. The public funding 20 in that context provided no advantage.

21 THE COURT: Okay, yes, I don't need a full 22 argument. I wanted to qualify your position.

23 MR. LOPEZ: Okay. Is that clear?

24 THE COURT: That's helpful, that's helpful.

25 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, could I make a

372

1 brief point? And I think it goes to Your Honor's question
2 and to the last part of the testimony from Professor 3 Green, there has been a suggestion throughout that the CEP
4 incentivizes additional major party candidates who come 5 into races previously contested by one major party and 6 minor parties, and that will have the effect of reducing 7 the historic votes achieved by minor parties. I think 8 that's been suggested as a constitutional harm, and we 9 would take very strong issue with the notion there is some 10 constitutional entitlement to maintain a historic level of 11 vote percentage.

12 We do believe there's a constitutional
13 entitlement to maintain historic political opportunities 14 to go out and seek as many votes and as you can attract.
15 It's going to be our argument, it is our argument that the 16 CEP doesn't take away any opportunity to go out and seek a 17 particular however many votes you can get, but it's not a 18 constitutional harm if there is increased competition and 19 because of that you end up getting fewer votes.

20 THE COURT: No, but I think the argument is the 21 CEP does not treat equally the opportunity to obtain the 22 benefit of public financing between major parties and 23 minor parties. And so if a major party is automatically 24 given the right to come into a district, not competitive 25 and without getting petitions and without getting

373

1 contributions or showing the last election cycle you ran 2 in, that disparity I think what is what's being 3 challenged.

4 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Yes, and we would, of 5 course, suggest that the distinction in the treatment is 6 justified by, you know, the basic distinctions between the 7 parties. But we'd also say that the real analysis for the 8 court, Your Honor, is to look at whether the CEP as a 9 result perhaps of having, you know, more major parties 10 that participate leaves the minor parties in a worse 11 position than they were historically based more on their

12 political opportunities, and we would say even if they 13 can't participate, they still have the same opportunities.

14 Valid access, cross endorsement, generous
15 petitioning periods, all of these things they can starkly
16 enjoy. The CEP doesn't take away any of those things.
17 Those are political opportunities. It's not a results
18 analysis. In other words, the political opportunities 19 they had, they previously got X percentage of the vote.
20 What we're looking at is under state law, can they do the 21 same thing by way of political opportunities that they 22 previously were able to do. That's how we view the 23 appropriate test under Buckley.

24 We're going to have a lot of discussion, I 25 think, and we have had a lot of discussion about whether 374

1 there is a reduction in political opportunities. We think 2 it's clear on the face of the statute, particularly at 3 this stage there's not any political opportunities in the 4 sense that the ability to get on the ballot, the ability
5 to privately raise funds, the ability to do all the kinds 6 of things previously they were able to do, we don't think 7 anything's been taken away by the CEP.

8 MS. YOUN: I think that going forward from that 9 analysis, I would say that in March at the applied stage 10 of the proceedings, we are prepared to offer evidence that 11 shows that, in fact, minor parties have seen an increase 12 in political opportunity after the CEP. And, indeed, an 13 increase in political strength, which is a different 14 concept but one which results in the product liability
15 litigation. As I already mentioned, there has been no 16 increase in contestedness. Minor parties have actually

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
17 seen an increase in percentage vote totals. In the 2008 18 election, the minor party candidates averaged about 19 8.5 percent of the vote. Previously the best they had 20 been able to do was approximately 6.5 percent of the vote 21 on average.

22 THE COURT: I don't want to get ahead of 23 ourselves. I know I basically pushed off this argument 24 until tomorrow about the 2008 results, but aren't any 25 2008 data that aren't going to change sufficiently final

375

1 or reliable that I can consider them? For example, the 2 number of candidates who enter the race, that's not going 3 to change. We all know what that number is. The number 4 of candidates who qualified for a grant, however much that 5 grant may turn out to be, that's not going to change. And 6 aren't those appropriate on a facial challenge, whereas an 7 applied challenge, we're not looking at minor parties, 8 we're looking at the plaintiffs. Mr. DeRosa, the Green 9 Party of Connecticut. Was the statute unconstitutional as 10 applied to Mr. DeRosa. That's what March is about, isn't 11 it?

12 MS. YOUN: I will let --

13 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: You know, I think really the 14 appropriate scope of the facial challenge is, is really 15 for the court to look at the face of the statute, its 16 requirements, you know, the administrative gloss on how it 17 would be applied, and determine whether there are any 18 obvious constitutional harms caused by any of those 19 provisions. And so it's not -- the question, when we say 20 we ought not consider the 2008 data, it's not that -- I 21 mean we have several problems, but with respect to this 22 particular question, our concern isn't that some of that's 23 not final. Some of it is final. We just don't think it's 24 relevant in this stage because we think you ought to be 25 looking at this and saying here's the law as it existed

376

1 with respect to minor parties' political opportunities
2 before. Here's the CEP. Can you look at those two,
3 examine those two and see there's a net loss for minor
4 parties' political opportunities? We say no.

5 You know, and then in March, what we're going to 6 show you is that, okay, now let's look at how it was 7 applied to these plaintiffs and we can see that they are 8 in no worse position than they were before.

9 THE COURT: Right. But at the facial challenge 10 stage, the appropriate -- I believe, and if you've got 11 case law that says otherwise, let me know, but it's 12 appropriate to look at what was the reality before the law 13 and what is the reality now that the law has had an 14 election cycle to run. In other words, we're not, we're 15 not deciding on a facial challenge in the abstract. Does 16 the law say minor parties shall never be permitted to run 17 for election in Connecticut? The only people who can run 18 for election are Democrats and Republicans? Obviously 19 that's going to fail as a facial matter but that's not all 20 that a facial challenge looks at is did the legislature 21 expressly discriminate in an illegal manner against some 22 person or class of persons. We have to look at the way 23 the statute operates in the general sense when deciding 24 even a facial challenge, don't we?

25 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: I think we do have to look 377

1 at the way the statute operated really to that basic

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
2 question of what the statute requires. So, you know, for 3 example -- and I think in this case that means the 4 statutory language, the declaratory rulings and the 5 position of the SEEC, as to what individual provisions 6 mean and how they ought to be applied.

7 I guess my rhetorical question would be for what 8 purpose would we be looking at that sort of external 9 election data other than to determine whether it's had 10 some effect on the plaintiffs. I think that's an as 11 applied question.

12 And I think we also have to remember this is a 13 facial challenge in the context of a campaign financing 14 system, so we're really guided by the question, the harm 15 that we're looking for is identified in Buckley. Was 16 there a reduction of political opportunity.

17 On a facial challenge, I think in this case we 18 wouldn't look to the 2008 data about how many candidates 19 qualified, how much they -- you know, what the results 20 were, et cetera, because that doesn't tell us whether the 21 statute took away on its face any opportunities under 22 Connecticut law that minor parties previously enjoyed.

23 THE COURT: Let me give you an example, and I'm 24 not trying to tie this to actual data at all, but let's 25 assume there were 150 minor party candidates that ran in 378

1 2006, and then in 2008 the act is in effect and there were 2 17 that ran. Now, that is pretty strong evidence that 3 somebody has been chilled. It's not conclusive but isn't 4 it relevant, to use your term?

5 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: I think that's a very good 6 example, Your Honor, because I would say that that may 7 be -- there's nothing -- we would look first to the face

8 of the statute and say is there anything in the statute 9 that mandates a reduction of minor party participation in 10 elections. We would say no, clearly that's not the case.
11 If, for example, the statute said, you know, because this 12 is going to have some fiscal effects on the constituents
13 of Connecticut, we're going to make public financing 14 available but we're going to kick up the ballot access to 15 3 or 4 percent to reduce some of the other costs and 16 administrative burdens on the state, we would be able to 17 look at that statute and say clearly that on its face has 18 an effect on minor parties' political opportunities 19 because they previously had a political opportunity to 20 have ballot access of 1 percent. Now they have a 21 political opportunity only at 3 percent. That is a 22 reduction in political opportunities.

23 But I would say to Your Honor if the question is 24 why did fewer minor party participants participate, that 25 is clearly an as applied challenge because the claim then

379

1 would be --

2 THE COURT: No, it has nothing to do with 3 Mr. DeRosa. If there's 150 minor party candidates of all 4 different parties and now there's 17, Mr. DeRosa, he can't 5 say, wait, look at this big decrease that doesn't have 6 anything to do with him. His challenge is I had 7 11.7 percent of the vote and now I've got 6 percent of the 8 vote.

9 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Then I would say, Your 10 Honor, it's not a facial challenge because it doesn't, 11 there's nothing on the face of the statute that mandates a 12 reduction to minor party participation.

effect on other minor parties, it's not relevant to -- he doesn't have standing to raise that claim.

THE COURT: But your argument is the only way a statute can fail facially is if it expressly violates the Constitution, if it expressly violates it.

MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: No, my argument -- I think the test is a very high one because it's fundamentally a dangerous proposition in a democracy to look at a statute on its face and conclude that it cannot be applied constitutionally. In fact, the opposite presumption is required, that if there's a conceivable scenario in which it can be applied constitutionally, it ought to be

1 permitted to operate and it can't be struck down on its 2 face.

3 I would say to Your Honor you can draw no facial 4 constitutional conclusions from the fact that fewer minor
5 party participants were in an election after the CEP's 6 enactment or effective date than before. I think there's 7 nothing, unless that is somehow mandated by the terms of 8 the statute --

9 THE COURT: I need authority for that because in 10 looking at the cases, my strong sense is that on a facial 11 challenge the scope of the evidence, what actually 12 happened before and after the statute, is broader than 13 with an as applied challenge because with the as applied 14 challenge, you're looking at the actual plaintiff, what 15 happened to the actual plaintiff or plaintiffs. Now, 16 maybe I'm wrong about that but I'm going to need your 17 help. If your argument is that 2008 is completely 18 irrelevant to a facial challenge, because my understanding

19 is the court in a facial challenge is permitted to look at 20 the landscape before and after the statute and it's not, 21 it's not limited to the express words of the statute that 22 is -- that, you know, says minor parties are not permitted 23 to express their opinion.

24 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: No, I agree that the court
25 can look at effect but I think they have to be effects

381

1 that are sort of mandated or flow sort of naturally or 2 obviously from the face of the statute.

3 THE COURT: Fair enough, but now we're into 4 arguing what, what inferences can be drawn from the 2008 5 experience.

6 MS. YOUN: And, Your Honor --

7 THE COURT: And so I guess my suggestion, I 8 don't want to take too long on this and interrupt your 9 case, but my suggestion would be don't proffer what 2008
10 is. If we have hard numbers on 2008 and we have five 11 people who qualified, at least say that, without 12 prejudice --

13 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: We can do that, Your Honor, 14 and I think, for example, you know, I mean part of the 15 confusion here is typically I think courts would prefer to 16 take up the smaller question of the as applied before 17 taking up the larger question of the facial challenge.
18 And so that you -- because I think there's a natural 19 aversion to wanting to -- I think the law sort of counsels 20 an aversion to making that sort of judgment on the facial 21 basis of the statute.

22 THE COURT: Right.

23 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: You know, and so there's a

24 little bit of a fiction here in some respects, that we're 25 sort of pretending that 2008 didn't exist because we're 382

1 looking at the facial, at the face of the statute and 2 determining whether that's on its face unconstitutional.
3 There are certain things that, you know, no one's going to 4 dispute. We'll tell you that five people participated, 5 they'll tell you that five people participated, and I 6 think maybe the court can look at that because part of 7 the, part of the, you know, the analysis on a facial 8 challenge is is it conceivable that it could be applied 9 constitutionally, and if the claim is minor parties can't 10 participate, can't qualify, we'll say obviously that's not 11 the case.

12 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, I think that in addition 13 to the facial challenge analysis, there is a separate 14 and prudential reason for not considering the 2008
15 election data in a piecemeal fashion. Buckley counsels us 16 to look at the entirety of the political landscape when we 17 would say that such factors as expenditures are not 18 available to us at the time and have a major impact on how 19 they interplay with other indicia of minor party political 20 opportunity. I don't think that you can pull out one and 21 make a ruling on that basis and then go back.

22 THE COURT: And if I understand you, agreeing
23 with you, then I'll hold my decision and we'll issue a 24 decision in March, but my only point for today's 25 proceeding is I don't think you need to damages around the 383

1 hard numbers from 2008. You're not waiving anything in my 2 view. You can still argue that they are irrelevant but 3 it's helpful to me to know what's disputed and what isn't,

4 frankly.

5 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Yes, I think fairly my 6 point, Your Honor, is some numbers you may want to look at 7 with respect to 2008 but, you know, we think the numbers 8 in the areas that we have identified are still in flux and 9 so we ought to be able to address those in March and that, 10 I think, was one of the purposes for bifurcating this 11 proceeding.

12 But what I'm concerned about is the example 13 for -- the example that you raised, which is a pretty 14 central and significant fact, about minor party
15 participation decrease. And we would say you should not 16 look at that at this stage because that's a number that 17 you can't on the face of the statute make the necessary 18 causal connection. We would say, we would absolutely 19 dispute that there's anything naturally in the language of 20 the statute that mandates that reduction in participation.
21 There's nothing to suggest that it would, you know, 22 because, in fact, to the contrary, it is the case that 23 minor parties enjoy ballot access, the right to privately 24 raise funds, the generous definition of minor party, long 25 petitioning periods. All those things which historically

384

1 have been very generous to minor parties still are very 2 generous to minor parties and are unaffected by the CEP in 3 any way that you can naturally look at this and say 4 there's a clear and obvious causal connection.

5 THE COURT: I understand your argument, but the 6 only point is some of the 2008 data is hard data and, you
7 know, if we know how many people participated, we know 8 what, how many people petitioned, et cetera, et cetera,

Let's not dance around it.

MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Okay.

THE COURT: It's in, you've got your arguments, and if at the end of the day I agree with you, either I should consider it or it's too premature or whatever, I won't.

MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Some data we just don't have.

THE COURT: Fair enough, fair enough. If there's critical data that we don't have, I'm not sure what that is except perhaps the amount of refunds of the grants.

MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Organizational expenditures.

THE COURT: All right, whatever.

MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: We can identify those areas but we also do have an, I think a general relevance objection to any of those numbers because, you know, I don't think they, they really assist Your Honor in deciding the facial constitutionality of that.

THE COURT: You may be right but, again, this is a bench trial. You know, let me take it in. If I agree that it's irrelevant or it should be given no weight, then I'll let it roll off my back.

MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: All right. I just want the record to be clear that we do have that relevance objection.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, if your Honor please, I didn't get a chance to argue the merits yesterday, I didn't get a chance to argue on this issue. I would just point out to the court that what I think Perry is saying

15 is that the court should consider this a facially neutral
16 statute. It's not a facially neutral statute, it's a 17 statute that discriminates on its face.

18 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: That's clearly what I'm not 19 saying; it clearly does make distinctions between major 20 and minor, that is obvious and that is on the face of the 21 statute. You don't need any information from the statute
22 to make that determination. We would say that Buckley 23 counsels that that's clearly not enough to show facial --

24 MR. LOPEZ: But the burden flows from that, Your 25 Honor, and it's completely relevant to talk about what

386

1 that burden is. My colleague tries to limit the burden
2 to -- and so does Ms. Youn -- to a reduction in political 3 strength and that's actually not the standard. The burden 4 is -- doesn't say a reduction in the strength of the 5 political parties. It says does this statute burden the 6 political opportunities. We would submit on its face, if 7 you just read the statute, it's apparent from the face of 8 the statute it imposes a higher burden. But now that 9 we've had an election cycle we see how it burdens it
10 primarily, Your Honor, by increasing the money that major 11 party candidates have to run elections with.

12 THE COURT: Since we're basically fully 13 interrupted, let me take up --

14 MS. YOUN: Okay.

15 THE COURT: -- the matter of Robert Lange v.
16 Gilbert Bach, et al. It's not necessary for counsel to 17 vacate. Why don't you come on forward. Counsel can stay 18 where they are. I'm going to have a short proceeding up 19 here in front.

p. m. to 2:05 o'clock, p. m.)

THE COURT: Are counsel prepared to proceed?

MS. YOUN: Absolutely, Your Honor.

Well, Your Honor, you ended the last phase by saying don't be shy about giving me the hard facts with the 2008 election. Here they are. There was no net increase in contested victories. There was only one more contested, there was only one net House district that was contested in the case.

387

Secondly, instead of seeing a decrease in vote totals, the minor party candidates who participated in the election saw their, saw their vote percentage totals go up on average by a fairly significant jump, from 6.5 percent in 2006, which was the average vote percentage obtained, to 8.5 percent in 2008.

As you, as Your Honor's already aware, five minor parties, candidates, received CEP grants, and for the coming 2010 election, 14 nonmajor party candidates will be automatically eligible for some level of CEP funding, four of them for a full grant based on their percentage showing in this election.

So I would say that in terms of the indications that plaintiffs, the indicia of political strength the plaintiffs have submitted are most important to them, all of those, they have nothing whatsoever to base an inference that the CEP has in any way diminished the political strength of minor parties.

Now, moving back to my outline and the question of whether the CEP is unconstitutional because it discriminates on its face between major and minor parties.

1 Now, obviously it is constitutional for a public funding
2 statute to treat major and minor parties differently.
3 Buckley tells us that and, in fact, the public financing 4 system here in the CEP is less onerous in its treatment of 5 minor parties than the one upheld in Buckley for the 6 following reason. In Buckley, if you look at the statute 7 there, it was only a prior vote's threshold that was 8 available to the minor party candidate. That means that 9 the minor party candidate is essentially unable to escape
10 the burden of what had happened in the past election. No 11 matter what the minor party candidate did, they could not 12 qualify for a full grant.

13 Instead, the statute at issue there, which was 14 26 USC 9008(b)(2), dictated that the minor party candidate 15 would receive a portion of the major party entitlement 16 determined by the ratio of the votes received by the 17 party's candidate in the last election to the average of 18 the votes received by the major party's candidate. So 19 that means in the previous election, if the major party 20 candidates had outperformed the minor party candidates by 21 four to one, then the minor party candidate in this race
22 would not be able to get more than a 25 percent grant no 23 matter what that candidate did.

24 And I would submit that the CEP by opening a 25 route for minor parties to obtain full funding, and we

389

1 have seen minor parties obtain full funding under this 2 statute, in fact increases rather than decreases the 3 political strength of, of nonmajor parties.

4 Now, there was a little bit of a colloquy about

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
5 what the exact wording of the test in Buckley was, so we 6 took the opportunity to look it up over the break. This 7 is a pin cite 98 to 99 in Buckley. The holding there was 8 that "Appellants have made no showing that the election 9 funding plan disadvantages nonmajor parties by operating 10 to reduce their strength below that attained without any 11 public financing."

12 So, contrary to plaintiff's representation,
13 Buckley did not hold that any burden placed on a minor 14 party candidate by the operation of a public financing 15 system would be a basis to hold the statute 16 unconstitutional.

17 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, Buckley considered 18 several factors how public funding there affected the 19 relative positions of the party. That was one 20 articulation of the issue. There are actually half a 21 dozen. One of them I have committed to memory is how 22 public funding in that case did not increase the ability 23 of major parties to purchase scarce electric communication 24 resources.

25 But I would also raise the additional 390

1 objection -- and I'm sorry to do this because I don't 2 really want to interfere with their presentation; it 3 happened to me all day yesterday -- but if they are going 4 to talk about what, how the presidential systems work, then 5 they have to give a complete picture. The fact that you 6 only qualify in Buckley based on your last electoral 7 result was offset by the fact they were eligible for a 8 post election grant if you did well in the current 9 election, which is not true about the CEP.

10 THE COURT: I'm familiar with the statute.

MR. LOPEZ: Yes.

THE COURT: But let me do encourage you to limit your interruptions because I think what we're going to do is come back tomorrow and everybody can have their day on the argument.

MS. YOUN: Now, it's true that it's not, you know, a statute cannot say only major parties get special treatment based on some discriminatory measure, but the question that's before us today, as it was in Buckley, is can the, can the state constitutionally distribute public financing on the basis of a showing of public support. And I would submit that Buckley dictates there that the answer has to be yes.

So the question for this court to determine is a question of levels, at what levels can thresholds constitutionally be set, and I think that the court has already focused in on that question.

But I think that, you know, I wanted to address one hypothetical that was brought up by the court in its discussion with Professor Green, which was if a minor party candidate is knocking on doors in Bridgeport and is trying to get petition funding, and a Republican answers the door and says I don't want to support your candidacy because I think of you as a Nader-type figure or because, because of this sort of thing, yes, it is difficult for that minor party candidate to get a signature, but does that -- is that relevant from a constitutional perspective? Because if the minor party candidate lacks the public support that is indicated by the position, if the public does not support the candidate enough to sign

16 the petition, then we would submit that that candidate 17 does not have an entitlement to public funding supplied by 18 the state.

19 THE COURT: Sure, but the issue is at what level 20 it be set.

21 MS. YOUN: Exactly.

22 THE COURT: If the legislature said no one can 23 get public funding unless they get signatures from 24 51 percent of the eligible voters in the district --

25 MS. YOUN: Then that would be a problem.

392

1 THE COURT: -- that would be a problem. So if 2 they said 40 percent, that would probably be a problem.
3 So the question is is 10, 15, 20 percent a problem; that's 4 really what we're talking about.

5 MS. YOUN: Let me go directly to that question
6 and let me just find my place in the argument.

7 Because the 2nd Circuit has already addressed
8 the question of at what level do petitioning thresholds
9 become unconstitutionally difficult, and the 2nd Circuit 10 did that in the context of the ballot access, which is 11 LaRouche v. Kezer, and this analysis is a little bit 12 involved and it is discussed in our Opposition to Summary 13 Judgment brief on pages 65 to 68, but essentially what the 14 court dictates is you can't just compare percentage. You 15 can't just say 20 percent is higher than ten percent; 16 therefore, this petitioning requirement is 17 unconstitutional. What the court recognizes is that, 18 instead, the constitutional measure of petitioning 19 threshold is determined by basically the intersection of 20 two factors. Yes, the percentage requirement but also the 21 time period at issue.

22 The court engaged in a lengthy analysis and we 23 engaged in a lengthy analysis in our brief that paralleled 24 the court's analysis in LaRouche but essentially the 25 upshot of that analysis is if you take into account

393

1 Connecticut's extremely generous -- I think the seven 2 months' petitioning period and the number of signatures a 3 day that would be required to get the applicable
4 threshold, then even the gubernatorial maximum grant
5 petitioning threshold under the, under the CEP, is more 6 easily satisfied than petitioning requirements that had 7 previously been upheld in the ballot access context in 8 both LaRouche and also in the Supreme Court's decision in 9 Jenness v. Fortson, and we further refer to those pages in 10 our brief.

11 THE COURT: What evidence did the Legislature 12 have before it in determining how difficult would it be to 13 obtain 10, 15, 20 percent petitioning signatures?

14 MS. YOUN: The evidence that the Legislature had 15 before it were basically three reports commissioned I 16 think for this purpose from the Office of Legislative 17 Research. And in those -- first of all, to answer your 18 question, the Legislature did not specifically, I do not 19 think, look at statistics regarding petitioning. What 20 they did instead is look at the 10, 15 and 20 percent 21 threshold level for the purposes of both the prior vote 22 requirement and the petitioning requirement because both 23 of those are measures by which minor parties can 24 demonstrate popular support. Now --

25 THE COURT: Where did they come from? What 394

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
1 evidence do we have about why the legislature chose those 2 levels?

3 MS. YOUN: Sure. Let me just flip to that page 4 in my outline.

5 So if you look at Garfield declaration 2,
6 Exhibit 18, which is the Office of Legislative Research 7 Report that I'm referring to --

8 THE COURT: I'm sorry, Exhibit 2?

9 MS. YOUN: It's an exhibit in Garfield, second 10 declaration, and it is Exhibit Number 18.

11 THE COURT: Can you give me a date or docket 12 number?

13 MS. YOUN: The date -- the particular report is 14 Docket 236-35. The date is July 10, 2008, for the 15 declaration date.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MS. YOUN: So, if you look down on the first 18 page of that, and going through to the second page, now 19 this is where the, this is -- to put this in context for 20 the Court, this is when the legislature was considering 21 whether or not the thresholds were too high and were 22 listening to the testimony of Jeffrey Garfield that the 23 plaintiffs have discussed extensively in their 24 presentation.

25 Now, so you'll see on the second page of this,

395

1 the first full paragraph, they break down the various vote
2 totals obtained by minor party and petitioning candidates 3 and you'll see that they do it at various levels. So they 4 say that 12 minor party candidates -- I'm looking at the 5 second to the last point of that paragraph, received 6 between 10 and 14.99 percent, six between 15 and 19.99 and

7 four received over 20 percent of the vote. So if you add 8 up those figures, you get 22 out of 168 minor and 9 petitioning candidates in the last three elections 10 received over 10 percent of the vote. And if you do the 11 math on that, that works out to 13 percent of minor party
12 candidates.

13 So the legislature, you know, the finding the 14 court can make is that the legislature specifically 15 considered evidence showing that 13 percent of minor party 16 candidates would receive funding under the -- would 17 automatically receive funding under the prior, prior 18 loophole.

19 MR. LOPEZ: You'll notice this report is 20 dated -- it's a 2006 report. This was obviously not 21 considered by the legislature until after the law was 22 passed.

23 MS. YOUN: Yes, and I would submit that the same 24 is true about the Garfield testimony that Mr. --

25 THE COURT: You said the legislature could find

396

1 that 13 percent would automatically be received funding.

2 MS. YOUN: Yes.

3 THE COURT: The problem I have with that is 4 we're looking at three different legislative years, and so 5 only if all of the qualifying minor party candidates 6 qualified in the final year would you say that they could 7 automatically qualify -- you're saying had the law been in 8 effect at the time?

9 MS. YOUN: Had the law been in effect at the 10 time, then --

11 THE COURT: Okay. How many of those are repeat

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
12 candidates? In other words, of the 13 percent, how many 13 represent repeat qualifiers?

14 MS. YOUN: I'm not sure that that, that that 15 information is broken out and that certainly isn't 16 information that the legislature had broken out for it. I 17 can have my research associate try to compile that 18 information while we're sitting here and see if we can 19 come up with an answer, if that would be helpful to the 20 Court.

21 THE COURT: Okay, I'd just be curious.

22 MS. YOUN: And I would say that we have --

23 THE COURT: Actually I can probably figure it 24 out. It looks like it's set forth in Tables 6, 7 and 8.

25 (Pause)

397

1 MS. YOUN: Sorry, and just to remind the court, 2 in the 2010 election we see coincidentally an identical 3 result which is that 14 candidates in that, in that 4 election will be automatically eligible for CEP financing
5 and four of those were full grant based on the percentage 6 that they obtained.

7 I think another argument is, or another question 8 is where is the legislature getting this 20 percent number 9 and why did they pick 20 percent. And I've heard the 10 plaintiff suggest that the fact that 20 major parties
11 always hit 20 percent and minor parties almost never hit 12 20 percent signifies that the legislature intended to 13 exclude minor parties in picking a 20 percent threshold, 14 and I would say that the evidence this court has just 15 considered shows that not to be the case. The legislature 16 understood that viable minor party candidates would 17 receive, would be able to make -- would be able to hit the 18 threshold.

19 Instead, the 20 percent was picked as a 20 viability threshold, and the fact that major parties 21 always hit 20 percent and minor parties seldom do reflects 22 nothing more than the commonplace observation that major 23 parties tend to run more viable candidates than minor 24 parties have historically done in Connecticut.

25 But I would also say that the 20 percent

398

1 threshold was not developed specifically for the purposes
2 of the CEP. Instead, it was developed from a longstanding 3 definition of major party which has been in the 4 Connecticut statute books for sometime, for decades at 5 least, and that that major party definition is used for a 6 variety of categories of differential treatment, 7 including, for example, placement on the ballot and 8 differential nomination procedures.

9 I would further submit to the court, and this is 10 contained within our briefs again, that six states, 11 including Connecticut, use a 20 percent threshold to 12 define a political party in a way that creates a 13 differentiation in electoral treatment.

14 And I would also say that in the case Jeness v.
15 Fortson, which is again discussed in our brief, Supreme 16 Court case, a 20 percent threshold -- I'm sorry, a 17 challenged ballot access regulation that made a 18 differential treatment based on a 20 percent showing of, I 19 think in the most recent gubernatorial election, was 20 upheld by the Supreme Court and I would say that similar 21 results were also reached in the case of Swanson v. Worley
22 and Gelman v. FEC.

23
24 Honor, and the 10 and 15 percent incremental thresholds 25 are very important from a party building analysis and

399

1 show, I think, that the legislature's intent was not to 2 exclude minor parties but to encourage minor parties.
3 Basically the legislature, I think it's fair to draw an 4 inference, recognized that if major parties are at 5 20 percent and minor parties have traditionally been 6 around here, then rather than saying you're going to have 7 to make this entire jump, we're going to give you some 8 incremental steps to build upon until you can reach this 9 level, until you can reach the 20 percent level.
10 Therefore, we're going to give you financing at the ten 11 percent level and the 15 percent level and that financing 12 is going to be a lot more generous than anything you've 13 been able to achieve through your private fundraising 14 attempts.

15 THE COURT: Is there legislative history that 16 suggests the levels were set where they were in order to 17 entrench the Republican and Democrat parties, the two 18 major parties?

19 MS. YOUN: There's no -- I certainly have never 20 seen anything in the legislative history to suggest that.
21 I don't think that -- I mean the suggestion that the major 22 party candidates were trying to defend themselves against 23 minor party candidates just doesn't hold as a matter of 24 logic. The major parties are not worried about candidates 25 who historically have not been able to reach the

400

1 20 percent threshold. The major parties are worried about 2 other major parties. This idea that they are working

3 together to perpetuate a duopoly is I think a fiction, and 4 one that, further, there's no support in the record for.

5 So, I got a little bit off my outline here so if 6 I can just go back --

7 THE COURT: Let me just follow up quickly.
8 Looking at Garfield Exhibit 18, it appears to me that in 9 legislature races, for the 2004 races, one petitioning 10 minor party candidate hit the 20 percent threshold, two 11 did so in 2002 and one did so in 2000. Is that consistent 12 with your understanding?

13 MS. YOUN: This is consistent with my 14 understanding, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: All right.

16 MS. YOUN: But I think that the way the 17 legislature broke out the figures, it was I think the 18 legislature's understanding that four candidates had hit 19 the 20 percent threshold over the past three elections and 20 that was the way they were thinking about it.

21 Just to finish up on the topic of the difficulty 22 of petitioning, and this kind of goes to the larger 23 question, are nonmajor party candidates facially barred 24 from participating in the CEP or is there anything 25 inherent in the CEP that would dictate that outcome, and,

401

1 you know, we just discussed the prior thresholds and to 2 discuss the petitioning thresholds, I think it's first of 3 all important to put the petitioning thresholds in a 4 context. The petitioning thresholds are for candidates 5 who have already failed to meet the prior vote thresholds, 6 so there's already been one route for minor party
7 candidates. They missed that chance and they are now

8 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
9 given another opportunity, unlike Buckley which, for 10 example, said that prior votes were the end of the story.
11 If you don't have that demonstration, you could never 12 qualify.

13 Instead the petitioning routes gives minor 14 parties yet another route to qualify for funds and we've 15 seen, you know, we've seen what the actual petitioning 16 threshold amounts are and there has been quite a bit of, 17 there's been quite a bit of back and forth on exactly how 18 many signatures are needed. And if the court would like 19 to have in front of it exactly what the average 20 petitioning requirements would be for, for the House and 21 Senate races, then that is available in chart form at the 22 Foster declaration, paragraph 18.

23 What that does suggest is the lowest turnout
24 districts in the state rep district, you could receive a 25 10 percent grant by collecting 125 signatures. You could 26 get a 20 percent grant by collecting 251 valid petition

402

1 signatures and that's going to give you $25,000 in 2 funding. I would suggest that that's a pretty significant 3 incentive and also a subsidy to the minor party candidates 4 for whom an alternative has been made available.

5 In the state senate districts, of course, we're 6 talking about $85,000 worth of funding, so the petitioning
7 requirements are correspondingly higher. In the lowest 8 turnout districts you can get a full grant for 2,000
9 petition signatures, and in the highest turnout districts, 10 you can get a full grant for 5,400 signatures. And, of 11 course --

12 THE COURT: Plus the contributions.

13 MS. YOUN: Plus the contributions, yes. And if

14 you -- and in terms of the incentivizing, the point that 15 Professor Green referred to earlier, if you think about 16 what the return on investment is for minor parties in 17 investing to get those thresholds and how an average 18 investment is $21 per signature at this level, I would say 19 to you if I'm a volunteer to your group and I understand 20 that after a certain threshold for every signature I 21 collect for my candidate, my candidate is going to receive 22 $21 in state funds, I'm going to get out there and I'm 23 going to start knocking on some doors. This gives a minor 24 party an ability to access substantial amounts of state 25 money that have never been available to them before.

403

1 THE COURT: What was the purpose of including 2 both petition requirement and a contribution requirement?

3 MS. YOUN: Sure. I think that they, I think
4 that they demonstrate different things. The petition 5 requirement is a -- you know, you have support for the 6 idea of your candidacy. The public considers you a 7 sufficiently credible candidate to decide to sign a 8 petition that says that you should get a share of public 9 funding.

10 The qualifying contributions requirement is 11 different, is targeted toward a different thing which is 12 not just latent public support but the CEP is intended as 13 a substitute rather than a subsidy. The CEP is intended 14 for those candidates who have demonstrated adequate 15 private fund raising capability, that it's okay for the 16 state to replace that private fund raising contribution 17 with a grant of public funds.

18 THE COURT: Did the Legislature have before it

19 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
evidence about what percentage of petitioning minor 20 party legislative candidates had historically been able to 21 raise the qualifying -- an amount of money equal to the 22 qualifying funds?

23 MS. YOUN: I'm not aware what the legislature 24 had before it. Basically the LLR reports I think that are 25 most relevant to this court's consideration are in the

404

1 Garfield declaration we were looking at, Exhibits 18, 19, 2 20 -- okay, sorry, 17, 18 -- and 19. No, sorry, 18, 19
3 and 20. And you'll see that 19 is the OLR report on 4 statewide candidate expenditures.

5 And I think that at the time the legislature was 6 considering, there hadn't been a minor party who had run
7 for state elections since Eunice Groark for the minor 8 parties -- doesn't show up on that sheet.

9 And they did consider in the next exhibit, which 10 is Docket 236-37, the report on campaign expenditures, 11 they considered campaign expenditures of all candidates in 12 legislative races, and I'm going to turn to specifically 13 what they considered and how that corresponded to his 14 exact expenditures when we talk about the issue of whether 15 the, whether the CEP grant can inflate expenditures for 16 various categories of campaign limits.

17 THE COURT: I'm less worried about that for the 18 moment than getting a sense whether it is a burden or not, 19 so I'm looking at page 4 of 16 of Document 236-37, which 20 is Exhibit 20 to the Garfield declaration. And on the 21 first page I see, excuse me -- on page four under Table 5, 22 state senate candidates, the first minor party I see is 23 Mr. DeRosa. "G" I take it is the Green Party, and his 24 expenditures were $150.08. Do we -- let me put it this 25 way. Did any minor or petitioning candidate for state

405

1 senate set forth in this exhibit spend an amount equal to 2 or greater than the qualifying contributions set forth in 3 the CEP?

4 MS. YOUN: I'm not aware of that off the top of 5 my head, Your Honor, but what I would say again is the CEP 6 is intended as a substitute for private funds from 7 candidates who had demonstrated an ability to raise 8 private funds. The CEP is not required to give funds to 9 candidates with no capacity for private fundraising.

10 THE COURT: Fair enough, but I'm just trying to 11 figure out what did the legislature know when it passed 12 this. If it knew that no candidate from a minor party had 13 ever raised $15,000, that may be interesting information.

14 MS. YOUN: Yes.

15 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, just -- and this 16 is in the record, but prior to the enactment of the CEP, 17 there was very little incentive for minor parties who 18 didn't have as a primary goal winning, but whose candidate 19 system served sort of secondary goals, message
20 development, party building. There wasn't really 21 incentive to raise particular sums. Now there is an 22 incentive. What the record suggests is a lot of minor 23 parties intentionally kept their fundraising under $1,000 24 to relieve themselves of the administrative burdens of 25 having to report, submit a lot of reports with regard to

406

1 expenditures. So there was an issue of a lack of 2 expenditure and an issue of a practical reality for minor 3 parties about trying to actually keep their fundraising

4 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
down. Most minor party candidates have, in fact, filed 5 these, I think they're 10-B reports, SEC reports, 6 indicating that they don't intend to raise more than 7 $1,000 and, therefore, relieving themselves of the 8 obligation at that point --

9 THE COURT: They are exempt.

10 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Exempt, right.

11 THE COURT: But it's interesting, it's 12 interesting that the qualifying contribution for the 13 lowest level of funding under the CEP is some relatively 14 high multiple of the exempt threshold.

15 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Yes, it is, but I think the 16 point that Attorney Youn makes is what the legislature was 17 trying to do is have individual candidates demonstrate 18 they had the commitment and capability to raise 19 significant numbers of contributions, not amounts of 20 contributions but numbers of contributions. And that's 21 why, and that's why I think this was sort of a -- that was 22 the demonstration they were looking for.

23 MR. FEINBERG: If I could add one point, Your 24 Honor, if you are concerned about the possibility of 25 reaching this, raising that amount of money --

407

1 THE COURT: I'm not.

2 MR. FEINBERG: -- five people just did it this 3 past year.

4 THE COURT: I don't think the argument from 5 plaintiffs is that it's impossible. I think the argument 6 is that it's burdensome in a constitutional sense.

7 MR. FEINBERG: And it's still true, five people 8 were able to do it readily last year.

9 THE COURT: That is right.

10 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, I think this is an 11 appropriate time to interject a consideration we didn't 12 emphasize yesterday, but it's apparent from the face of 13 the statute not only do our folks have to go out and raise 14 the $5,000 and the legislature knew that that would impose 15 a substantial burden, or a burden, but they would only 16 qualify for a third of the funding instead of a full 17 grant. I mean our position is if they are to go out and 18 impose what we see as a significant burden, they should 19 qualify for the same funding as their major party 20 opponents.

21 MS. YOUN: And, Your Honor, I would also turn 22 you -- I think relevant to your determination here is 23 Proulx declaration dated -- which is Docket Number 260-2 24 which is dated September 5, 2008, to a chart contained at 25 paragraph 17 of that declaration.

408

1 THE COURT: I think I have the declaration but I
2 don't see any charts. I may not have the exhibits here.

3 MS. YOUN: It's not a -- it's a chart that's 4 contained within the text of the declaration at paragraph 5 seven.

6 THE COURT: Got it.

7 MS. YOUN: Sorry, not paragraph seven, at 8 paragraph 17, page seven.

9 THE COURT: Right.

10 MS. YOUN: And the point here is that the 11 qualifying contribution thresholds were intended to change
12 fund raising behavior, which is the point of the CEP 13 period. The point of the CEP is that they wanted to 14 reduce, they wanted to reduce contributions that had the

15 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
16 potential of being corrupting, obviously large dollar 17 contributions, and thus they required smaller 18 contributions from a larger number of contributors.

19 Now, to the extent this is a burden, this is a 20 burden for the major parties as well as the minor parties 21 because the major parties as well as the minor parties are 22 used to raising their funds in increments of larger than 23 $100, and from a few large dollar contributors rather than 24 multiple $100 contributors. And I think you can see that 25 looking at this chart, this was the contributions to the 2006 statewide candidates. A lot of these statewide

409

1 candidates would fail the qualifying contributions
2 threshold and, indeed, we find that the qualifying
3 contributions threshold is an effective way of weeding out 4 major party candidates who have not demonstrated the 5 capability of doing, of doing this kind of small dollar
6 widespread fundraising that the CEP had envisioned.

7 MR. LOPEZ: We raised the objection, Your Honor, 8 that that argument and that this testimony is refuted by 9 the defendants and they should be estopped from making 10 that argument. It's refuted by the defendant's testimony 11 of George Jepsen where he in a filing last week makes the 12 case this is not a burden on major party candidates at all 13 because of their ability to raise this kind of money in 14 small units attributable to their statewide, their 15 statewide party apparatus.

16 MS. YOUN: I would say that the plaintiffs keep 17 referring to the Jepsen declaration for the -- deposition 18 for the proposition that the qualifying contributions are 19 a mere formality for major party candidates. We looked at 20 that exhibit. I mean we combed through it last night, we

21 cannot find those words. And, in fact, what we find is a 22 representation from Mr. Jepsen that it's quite difficult.
23 And you see that in this, in this particular election 24 because of the candidate, of the major party candidates 25 who are less viable.

410

1 We're not going to pretend that the major
2 parties never run bad candidates. Occasionally bad major 3 party candidates run, but out of the three major party
4 candidates who fail to receive 20 percent of the vote -- 5 in this past election, one of, only one of them was able 6 to qualify for CEP funds, the rest were not, and we would 7 say that that qualifying contribution threshold is a good 8 way of barring, you know, nonviable major party candidates 9 as well as --

10 MR. LOPEZ: Objection, Your Honor. That 11 representation assumes that those major party candidates 12 sought public funding, and that fact hasn't been 13 established.

14 MS. YOUN: I was not assuming that, I was making 15 a statement and, you know, you're free to discuss the 16 weight of that.

17 I'm sorry, I was in the middle of a sentence --

18 THE COURT: You said, "And we would say that 19 that qualifying contribution threshold as a good way of 20 barring, you know, nonviable major party candidates as 21 well as --"

22 MS. YOUN: Nonviable other candidates. I guess
23 I'll leave that there.

24 THE COURT: Did the legislature have in front of 25 it the information set forth in this chart at pages seven

411

1 and eight of the Proulx declaration?

2 MS. YOUN: What I can say -- I'm not proposing 3 that's a legislature document. What I can say is the 4 legislature, these are all politicians. They can be 5 understood to have some knowledge of politics and, indeed, 6 when you read the legislative history and the Working 7 Group transcripts, there are a substantial discussion of 8 what, what levels of qualifying contributions thresholds 9 are reasonable and which can be met and what candidates.
10 And I can let that transcript speak for itself and that 11 transcript is before the court.

12 I think that the fact that the plaintiffs are 13 basing a claim on the qualifying contributions thresholds, 14 which are evenly applied to all candidates, kind of points
15 to a basic constitutional deficiency in their argument, 16 which is that an even-handed requirement could be 17 unconstitutional if minor parties would have a more 18 difficult time in reaching, in satisfying that 19 requirement. And I would submit to you that, as a 20 constitutional issue, that suggestion or that argument 21 would be wrong.

22 And, for example, the Supreme Court recently 23 said in the Lopez Torres decision, which is at 128 Supreme 24 Court 791, basically they were talking about whether or 25 not the candidate -- whether or not the plaintiff

412

1 candidate there had a fair shot at achieving the 2 nomination and this is what the court had to say there.
3 "Our cases invalidating ballot access requirements have 4 focused on the requirements themselves and not on the 5 manner in which political actions function or function

6 under those requirements."

7 The court then goes onto say, "It is hardly a 8 manageable constitutional question for judges, especially 9 judges in our legal system where the traditional electoral 10 practice gives no hint of even the existence, much less 11 the content of a constitutional requirement for a fair 12 shot at party nomination."

13 What this goes on to say is to the extent that 14 the minor parties' difficulty in reaching those thresholds 15 is a result of their own relative political weakness at 16 having a party infrastructure, at having engaged in 17 decades of party building activity and the candidates that 18 run and then their appeal to the public, that is not a 19 constitutional deficiency in the requirements. That is 20 simply a factor of preexisting political landscape, and 21 under Buckley those kinds of arguments should not give 22 rise to claim of constitutional injury.

23 THE COURT: Why shouldn't major parties who have 24 not had a history of success in a particular district not 25 face the same requirements as the minor parties who

413

1 haven't shown a history of success in that same district?

2 MS. YOUN: Yes, and I know that Your Honor
3 kind of teed up that question in your motion to dismiss 4 ruling when you were talking about the major party
5 definition which is predicated on a 20 percent statewide 6 showing of popular support, you know, by either party, in 7 the prior gubernatorial elections whether that can be 8 treated as a proxy for popular support on a district by 9 district basis for particularly new and major party 10 entrants into that district, and shouldn't we consider

11 those new major party entrants to be similarly situated to 12 minor party candidates so the differential treatment won't 13 give rise to an equal protection violation.

14 Now, we would say that factually the treatment 15 of major parties or the treatment of that statewide proxy 16 works in almost every case. There is no -- and if I can 17 just turn to that page of my outline -- and even in one 18 party dominant districts, the weaker major party 19 candidate, the major party loser almost always receives 20 the 20 percent showing that is the threshold for CEP
21 eligibility. They almost always make that, that showing.
22 That's true in, I think that's true across the board for 23 major party candidates in over 95 percent of the cases.

24 THE COURT: Right. There's about as many cases 25 where a major party doesn't hit 20 percent as there are

414

1 cases where minor parties do hit 20 percent.

2 MS. YOUN: Exactly.

3 THE COURT: It's the magic number.

4 MS. YOUN: It's the magic number. And I think 5 that the --

6 THE COURT: If the legislature wanted to 7 discriminate -- I'm not saying that they wanted to but if 8 they wanted to, they couldn't have found a better number 9 than 20 percent.

10 MS. YOUN: Well, Your Honor, I think that that, 11 you know, that argument is assuming that the 20 percent 12 number carries no significance or no constitutional or 13 valid significance of its own. But what we are saying is 14 that only goes to show that the major party candidates 15 have traditionally, you know, have historically run 16 viable, electorally viable candidates, and the non-major

17 party candidates have not.

18 That viability line could be drawn at a number 19 of levels and I can tell you it would still be -- it might 20 be 90 percent of major party candidates rather than 21 95 percent of major party candidates, but I can tell you 22 that the major party candidates are still going to be up 23 here and the minor party candidates are still going to be 24 down here, and the question of where you draw that line in 25 between is classically one for legislative discretion.

415

1 THE COURT: The question though is why draw the 2 line? If the Republicans either don't run or run at 3 15 percent in an urban district and the Green Party runs 4 at 11 percent in that same district, are they really -- 5 aren't they similarly situated with respect to that 6 district?

7 MS. YOUN: In the first place, I would say that 8 that district has never existed. I don't think that the 9 major party and the major party candidates have ever come 10 that close in a legislative history. But in the second --

11 THE COURT: Well, you're not counting where the 12 major party doesn't run, where they get zero and then 13 minor party runs and gets 5 or 8 or 10 percent.

14 MS. YOUN: But I would say that even in, even 15 in -- okay, where you have a district with an entrenched 16 incumbent and there has been no challenger from the 17 other party, when you have a new major party candidate 18 enter that race --

19 THE COURT: Shouldn't the statute say for all 20 the reasons you've been arguing that major parties are 21 required to show they can raise a lot of money from a lot

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
22 of different people and they can get a lot of petitions 23 signed and so forth? Why shouldn't the major party have 24 to go through --

25 MS. YOUN: The major party still has to show

416

1 that. It needs to raise a lot of money from a lot of 2 people. They have the same qualifying contribution 3 requirements to which the --

4 THE COURT: But they don't have to get a single 5 signature.

6 MS. YOUN: Well, neither do the minor parties
7 who have previously demonstrated prior vote support.

8 THE COURT: Right, but hypothetically we're 9 talking about a district where a major party hasn't run, 10 so their vote total is zero.

11 MS. YOUN: I would say that their vote total 12 should not be considered to be zero because if you look 13 historically at the record of even these new major party
14 entrants, even the subset of the weakest major party 15 candidate they are looking at, they still receive over 16 20 percent of the vote in over 85 percent of senate races 17 and over 90 percent of House races, and that's set out in 18 our Proposed Findings of Fact, paragraph 172. The record 19 is just not there on which to base the factual inference 20 that these candidates are similarly situated to minor
21 party candidates.

22 MR. FEINBERG: Your Honor, if I could add a word 23 here, the short answer to your question is, no, they are 24 not similarly situated and, no, the legislature didn't 25 have to require the major parties to go through the 417

1 exercise, the pointless exercise of gathering all those

2 signatures, but the legislature could properly presume 3 that the major parties had sufficient strength in any 4 district in this state to easily accomplish that 5 20 percent requirement.

6 That's the point of the affidavits submitted 7 from the heads of the major parties. That's the point of 8 the expert affidavits that we submitted from Professor 9 Green and his testimony today, that the major parties have 10 an infrastructure in every district in the state, that 11 they have a solid party establishment on the ground, that 12 they have a lot of fundamental base level of support, and 13 that they would be, they would be able to satisfy that 14 requirement.

15 And then, if they were forced to do so by the 16 statute, then the SEEC would have to verify all those 17 signatures and all of this the legislature could properly 18 conclude was a pointless exercise because of, because they 19 would be able to satisfy it and the qualifying 20 contribution limit was enough to make sure that the 21 particular candidate had the level of support necessary to 22 qualify its --

23 THE COURT: So as I understand the argument, 24 it's that the legislature could reasonably presume the 25 major parties are major parties, and could reasonably

418

1 presume that the minor parties will never be major parties
2 and that only --

3 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: No.

4 THE COURT: -- and that only major parties
5 should be funded.

6 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: 20 percent is a major party definition.
MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: It's a predictive judgment that major parties in almost all instances when they choose to run, wherever they choose to run, will perform like major parties, and the stats demonstrate that to be true.

THE COURT: And we're only going to fund fully major parties, 20 percent is the definition of a major party.

MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: It is the definition of a major party. It's a definition of a major party that exists in a lot of areas in state law, including, by the way, ballot access, statewide proxy. If I choose as a Republican to run in the first district in Hartford, I don't have to, I don't have to gather signatures because I'm presumed already to have that statewide proxy applied to me in that district. But it's not an exclusion, Your Honor, it's predictive judgment about what major parties will do. It almost always is accurate but it's not an exclusion because, as we know from this cycle, minor parties can also behave like major parties but typically they don't.

THE COURT: Right, but to get full funding under the act, you have to perform as a major party.

MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Yes -- I apologize, yes, because we have made a judgment that you don't have to be a major party but you have to perform at a certain level which we have defined as major party performance level. That's not an exclusion of minor parties, it doesn't sort of permanently enshrine some status for major parties or

13 minor parties, but it says that's the level at which we 14 take a statewide proxy, the demonstrations that are 15 sufficiently credible to deserve full funding, now minor 16 parties could also get there.

17 THE COURT: Would it matter if the legislature 18 were motivated to enshrine these two parties as the only 19 major parties, if the legislature said we're going to set 20 these levels at a point where the Republicans and the 21 Democrats get free elections and will always be the two 22 parties --

23 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: I'm not sure necessarily 24 that the motive would matter but if the effect was to 25 permanently enshrine and stratify the major versus minor

420

1 in party distinction, I think that would matter, and the 2 Supreme Court has said that.

3 MS. YOUN: In fact in Jenness v. Fortson where 4 they said, in that case they were upholding a 20 percent
5 definition of a political party that imposed differential 6 nominating petition requirements on candidates who had 7 made that showing and candidates who had not made that 8 showing based on the most recent gubernatorial or 9 presidential election, therein the court said the 10 20 percent definition for political party, quote, "in no 11 way freezes the status quo but implicitly recognizes the 12 potential fluidity of American political life." I'm still 13 quoting. "Thus, any political body that wins as much as 14 20 percent support at an election become a 'political 15 party' with its attendant ballot position rights and 16 primary election obligations, and any 'political party' 17 whose support falls below that figure reverts to the

18 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
19 status of a 'political body' with its attendant nominating 20 petition responsibilities and freedom from primary 21 election duties. We can find in this system nothing that 22 abridges the rights of free speech and association secured by the First and Fourteenth Amendments."

23 MR. LOPEZ: I would raise the objection that 24 counsel has more than once referenced the ballot access 25 cases. You'll recall in their motion to dismiss that they 421

1 took the position the ballot access cases are irrelevant
2 and I, respectfully, I don't think they can have it both 3 ways.

4 I would also point out, Your Honor, ballot
5 access is decided under a different and lower standard, a 6 standard they seem to have applied, than the standard that 7 governs the CEP which we say is governed by classic First 8 Amendment analysis from the Supreme Court's Campaign
9 Finance case.

10 I would like to address Mr. Zinn Rowthorn's, 11 well, whole discussion about how strong major parties 12 presumptively are. Just this last election cycle, April, 13 just looking particularly at the Senate data, three 14 Republicans, including one from Mr. DeRosa's district, all 15 upheld less than 20 percent despite their best efforts.

16 And, again, in reference to -- they can't find 17 the testimony -- in Mr. Jepsen's deposition about how easy 18 it is for major party candidates to qualify, the 19 qualifying contributions, there is an extended discussion 20 of, and I'm happy to provide the cites for that --

21 THE COURT: Why don't you do that. What's the 22 cite?

23 MR. LOPEZ: The discussion begins at the very

24 least, Your Honor, at page 87 and continues on through 93 25 and there may be more but I wanted to focus on what was

422

1 going on here.

2 THE COURT: Okay.

3 MS. YOUN: My point with respect to the Jepsen
4 declaration and I would -- deposition, and I would submit 5 to the Court that if the Court reads the relevant pages
6 the court will see that Mr. Jepsen is making the point 7 that it is quite difficult for major parties to meet the 8 qualifying contribution requirements, but also that the 9 mere formality language which is presented in defendant's 10 proposed findings of fact as a quote does not appear 11 before.

12 MR. LOPEZ: If I quoted that, that is a mistake.
13 Did I quote that, put that in quotation marks?

14 MS. YOUN: Yes.

15 MR. LOPEZ: Then I withdraw that.

16 MS. YOUN: Yes.

17 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, just briefly, 18 you know, just on this notion that permanent enshrinement,
19 the Weicker example is sui generis for a couple reasons, 20 as Professor Green discussed, but it does demonstrate that 21 in Connecticut there is nothing permanent or stratified
22 about major versus minor. The Connecticut party was a 23 major Connecticut party statewide in 1992 and 1994 as a 24 result of 1990.

25 THE COURT: Well, I'm not sure about '94.

423

1 Eunice Groark got less than 20 percent.

2 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Well, it wasn't in the

3 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
4 following one. It was, you know, as a result of Governor 5 Weicker's success the first two after.

6 THE COURT: Got you.

7 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: You know, and the other 8 point just with respect to, just to take an example, 9 Mr. Lopez cites the first editorial district. I think 10 it's interesting to note that district in 2002, there was 11 a Republican. There wasn't a Republican in 2000 or 1998.
12 That Republican got 23 percent. So there I think if you 13 were looking there, the predictive judgment would be 14 correct, if a Republican decided to contest that district, 15 the Republican would behave and perform like a major 16 party. You know, the Republican this time around without 17 the benefit of public financing got slightly under 18 20 percent but pretty close, I think within the realm 19 where we'd say the legislature was not far off.

20 Those are the only points I had in response.

21 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, I would say that the, the 22 quotation I read from Jepsen says that in order for -- the 23 legislature is not required to blind itself to the 24 existence of political parties and present only candidates 25 of parties that exist. We have set forth extensive evidence in Jepsen and in Krivda's declarations that the 424

1 major parties have town committees in every town in 2 Connecticut, et cetera, all of these other indicia of 3 decades of, the results of decades of party building 4 efforts. And we're saying that the legislature is 5 entitled to look at those and take those into account and 6 make their predictive judgments on funding.

7 But I would also say just as a clarification to 8 whether the minor parties have to perform like major

9 parties in order to, in order to meet, get full CEP 10 funding, they only have to perform like major parties in 11 terms of viability. They do not have to make the sort of 12 statewide showing that a major party candidate has to make 13 in order to maintain major party status. They don't have 14 to get 20 percent of the gubernatorial vote. They don't 15 have to get 20 percent of the vote in the state. All they 16 have to do is make a 20 percent viability showing.

17 And in that particular election, this was not 18 forcing a minor party to become major party candidates or 19 to act like them and to require them to meet some sort of 20 statewide level. All they are saying is they have to be 21 credible candidates in that district. And the Connecticut 22 legislature, as many other states have done before it, 23 have determined that 20 percent is an acceptable threshold 24 showing of viability.

25 THE COURT: Well, no other state has put 425

1 20 percent for a public funding requirement. The highest 2 I'm aware of anywhere else is 5 percent.

3 MS. YOUN: Yes, but we're not talking about an 4 enormous sample here, as Your Honor is aware.

5 THE COURT: Fair enough. The federal s use five,
6 Maine uses five, Arizona uses five. Who am I
7 forgetting -- Minnesota.

8 MS. YOUN: They are on a statewide system.

9 THE COURT: Fair enough. So at the time this 10 act was passed, the federal model and the two viable state 11 models were five percent for a full funding and 12 Connecticut chose 10 percent for one-third funding.

13 MS. YOUN: Well, I would say --

14 THE COURT: Do we have set forth anywhere the 15 rationale for that legislature decision?

16 MS. YOUN: First of all, I would say for the 17 presidential system, it was not five percent for full 18 funding, it was five percent for five percent funding in 19 the presidential system, as we have previously explained.

20 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, in Arizona it was, there 21 is no prior vote total requirement. You just have to 22 raise, if you want to run for governor, you just have to 23 raise, I think $16,020 respectively and it's not 5 percent 24 of the funding. I thought you said it was, earlier it was 25 25 percent of the funding.

426

1 MS. YOUN: It's whatever the ratio they have 2 been outspent, they had been out performed by in the prior 3 election. I'm sorry --

4 MR. LOPEZ: $85 million, 25 percent of 5 $85 million.

6 MS. YOUN: No, that's not true. That's only in 7 the very rare --

8 THE COURT: This is the point. The highest vote 9 total percentage required by the federal system is 10 five percent. That's the point.

11 MS. YOUN: As a starting point. And I would 12 also say that those, there is nothing in Buckley that says 13 that five percent has to be, I don't know if you would 14 call it a ceiling for acceptable regulation and, in 15 fact --

16 THE COURT: Agreed.

17 MS. YOUN: -- Buckley explicitly claims such a 18 suggestion. We don't have -- Maine and Arizona were not 19 passed by legislatures. We don't know what the 20 motivations behind those statutes were. We do have pretty 21 extensive testimony on what the motivation of the 22 Connecticut Legislature was. The motivation of the 23 Connecticut Legislature was not necessarily to massively 24 increase electoral opportunities across the board. What 25 the Connecticut Legislature was obsessed with was a

427

1 particular history of corruption and scandal that had 2 plagued this state in the years before the statute was 3 passed. That was what the state was thinking about and,
4 you know, there are volumes of legislative history about 5 this.

6 In doing so, the Connecticut Legislature enacted 7 a program that took out unprecedented sums of money. The 8 reason they had done that was because they wanted to root 9 out corruption among elected officials. So the money that 10 the Connecticut Legislature took for this purpose is only 11 being used to forward that anti-corruption objective to 12 the extent that it's going to candidates who are likely to 13 be elected.

14 So, the idea of raiding the public fisc is one 15 that I think has been, has been discussed quite a bit in 16 this forum but I would say that it's not that the CEP
17 would run out of money or that the State of Connecticut 18 would go bankrupt if it decided to fund minor party 19 candidates at the same terms. The question is is the 20 Legislature entitled to tailor a statute to achieve the 21 purposes for which these millions of dollars were set 22 aside from the State of Connecticut.

23 THE COURT: Minor parties aren't going to win so 24 we don't have to worry about corrupt contributions to

1 MS. YOUN: The legislature is not required to 2 address all evils at the same time. They are allowed to 3 enact particular statutes to address particular evils.

4 I would suggest that the entire legislative 5 history of the Connecticut statute leads the Court to the 6 conclusion that the overwhelming purpose was to root out
7 corruption among elected officials. This is largely a 8 statute that was enacted to achieve that goal. There are 9 other goals that it could have achieved. They weren't 10 necessarily trying to do that at the time. We don't know 11 that they were.

12 All right, let me move onto --

13 THE COURT: Should we take a short break?

14 MS. YOUN: Yes.

15 THE COURT: All right. Why didn't we do that.
16 Let's take 15 minutes and come back at 3:25. Stand in 17 recess.

18 (Whereupon a recess was taken from 3:15 o'clock, 19 p. m. to 3:30 o'clock, p. m.)

20 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, I think the last point I 21 made before the break, I might have given a somewhat 22 inaccurate picture of the demonstrated motives of the 23 Connecticut legislature. I was talking as a matter of 24 logic that if you are, if you are enacting a program to 25 weed out corruption among elected officials and also the

1 appearance of corruption, then logically the -- you know, 2 the well tailored way to do that would be to try to direct 3 money to those likely to be elected.

4 Now, in fact, and as I've already pointed out,

5 the Connecticut legislature was considerably more lenient
6 than that in actually setting these votes and, in fact, it 7 was more lenient in its treatment of minor parties.
8 Essentially the Connecticut legislature I've been 9 following had been following other state legislatures 10 before it, said, well, 20 percent is anyone with any kind 11 of shot at winning this then is a viable and credible
12 candidate. Now, we're not going to say that person 13 necessarily is going to win but they've got a shot and we 14 want to give those candidates the half shot access to 15 these funds, and even furnish that, to the extent that 16 minor parties that have not yet been able to build up 17 their way to that half-a-shot threshold, we're going to 18 give them steps that encourage party building that they 19 can use to get to that point, as we have seen happen in 20 this past election cycle.

21 I would also respond to a point in answer to 22 Your Honor's question, well, why shouldn't the legislature 23 impose the same requirements on new major party entrants
24 into a previously uncontested district as it does to minor 25 parties, minor party candidates, and I think we've

430

1 established factually that those aren't similarly 2 situated and that, therefore, the legislature is entitled 3 in figuring out how to distribute funds to say 4 historically we've seen that candidates who have gotten 5 the nomination of a major party, you know, a party that 6 has 20 percent of support statewide, we've seen that that 7 correlates with this kind of electoral showing and so 8 we're going to take that as a sufficient indication of 9 popular support.

10 11 support in three ways; in the statewide level, at the 12 district level or for candidates who aren't able to meet 13 that threshold through petition, but additional and 14 separate reasons why the state shouldn't impose that or 15 had a reason not to say, okay, we'll make your candidate 16 have to do the same thing, even though we know they are 17 going to be able to meet this.

18 It is the sheer administrative burden, and there 19 is some testimony in the Garfield declaration about 20 numbers of petition signatures gathered but, you know, I 21 would represent that it is a substantial burden to count 22 and verify petition signatures. It's something that the 23 Secretary of State is not -- it's not an insignificant 24 burden, and if you were going to have them count thousands 25 of petition signatures for major party entrants into new 431

1 races in order to demonstrate a level of popular support
2 that has already been shown by other means, we would say 3 that, you know, the administrative burden there would be 4 relatively pointless and that the Court at this stage is 5 not required to impose it.

6 THE COURT: So we're talking about in the last 7 election cycle five races or so where a major party ran in 8 a race where they hadn't run before?

9 MS. YOUN: No, I don't think so. I think the 10 way it works out, if I recall correctly, there was a 11 senate race so there were some districts where that became 12 newly contested and some that came newly uncontested, so I 13 think we're thinking about, to the best of my 14 recollection, more like 30.

15 MR. LOPEZ: There was five on the Senate, Your

16 Honor, and 32 on the House side.

17 THE COURT: I'm thinking the Senate. Okay.

18 MS. YOUN: So we're talking about tens, if not 19 hundreds of thousands of additional petition signatures 20 that you would require the Secretary of State to verify in 21 order to demonstrate popular support that we would submit 22 the CEP already provides for a showing of popular support 23 by a different means, and that showing has been shown to 24 correlate to, you know, has been shown to be a reasonable 25 showing. It's reasonable to assume that the, that the 432

1 major party candidates are going to be able to make a
2 showing in almost every case.

3 MR. LOPEZ: We would object, Your Honor. That 4 is an argument but there's certainly no -- unless I 5 misheard the summary, there's nothing in the record that 6 the legislature considered that in '05 or in '06 when they 7 took up the issue.

8 MS. YOUN: To the extent that's an evidentiary 9 objection, I would say it also goes to tailoring.

10 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, the legislature 11 was aware of the petitioning procedure which, it was the 12 same then as it is now, where a candidate gathered 13 petitions. Those are submitted typically to the Secretary 14 of State. The Secretary of State divides them into towns, 15 sends them out to the towns, registrars at the town
16 clerk's. The registrars at the town clerk's tabulate 17 them. They are sent back to the Secretary of State who 18 sort of aggregates the town's count. That's in multi 19 state districts. Certainly statewide that would be the 20 case. So that was the procedure then and it is now.

21
22 legislature could have concluded that that's a lot of, you 23 know, that's a lot to be done both at the state and local 24 level.

25 MS. YOUN: If Your Honor doesn't have any 433

1 further questions on those topics, I'm going to move on to 2 the question of whether the CEP could have been expected 3 to inflate historical expenditures and also whether the 4 2008 election figures show that it does so.

5 With respect to the latter topic, I would say 6 that we are not in a position at this point to, to assess 7 2008 expenditure data. The final expenditure reports have 8 not yet even been filed and will not be filed for -- and 9 certainly the SEEC has not had an opportunity to go 10 through that data. So we would submit that any 11 recommendations made by the plaintiffs at this point as to 12 whether the CEP has, in fact, inflated major party 13 spending either as an average or as an overall aggregate, 14 you know, we question the relevance but would say it's 15 certainly premature and should definitely wait until 16 March.

17 THE COURT: We have all but the last seven days, 18 don't we?

19 MS. YOUN: Yes, but usually the bulk of it, a 20 huge portion of expenditures are made in the last seven 21 days before an election, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: Aren't the current figures more 23 helpful to you if the expenditures will be lower on the 24 data that you have now than the data that would be 25 available?

434

1 MS. YOUN: They would be but also in terms --
2 we're looking at grant amounts. We have been hearing 3 anecdotally through the SEEC that candidates are returning 4 vast portions of the grants they were given. They wanted 5 to, you know, they wanted to try for that but then they 6 found it wasn't actually necessary and they didn't need to 7 expend that level of funds.

8 So to the extent that the plaintiffs allege harm 9 because their voices will be crowded out because of this 10 major party big money slugfest, we're saying that the data 11 as to whether that will actually happen, actually did 12 happen in 2008, is not yet ready to be considered.

13 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, just to clarify 14 the record, the last report was October 28 but that 15 covered the reporting period up to October 21st.

16 MS. YOUN: All right, but there is a question as 17 to what the legislature had in front of it in terms of 18 whether the CEP grant amounts constituted a subsidy to 19 participating candidates rather than a substitute for 20 previous function, because one of the assertions the 21 plaintiffs have been making in their brief is, well, a lot 22 of races are uncompetitive so what the CEP is going to do 23 is it's going -- and a lot of, in uncompetitive races 24 candidates are traditionally not necessarily spending so 25 much money as they would in the more competitive races,

435

1 and the CEP, by awarding grants based on the most 2 competitive races, is going to inflate expenditures of 3 participating candidates in a way we allege will result in 4 harm to the minor parties and we would submit that just as 5 a matter of fact that it's untrue and it's not borne out

6 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt by the, by the, by the way in which the grant is 7 structured.

8 Specifically, the plaintiffs have argued in 9 their findings, proposed findings of fact, paragraph 13, 10 that the Working Group found that the average cost for a 11 Senate race is 47- to $50,000, and the average cost of 12 House race is between 14- to $15,000, and we would say 13 that that sort of representation is irrelevant and 14 misleading because there is not one single CEP grant 15 amount. There is a CEP based grant amount, but to lump 16 together noncompetitive and competitive elections in the 17 same average is highly misleading because the CEP 18 reduces grant amounts by as much as 60 percent in 19 precisely those kinds of uncompetitive races.

20 And I think the best way to see that is to go to 21 the Foster declaration, paragraph 23 to 24. That's Docket 22 236-16. I'm sorry, that's not actually the --

23 (Pause)

24 MS. YOUN: I'm sorry, Your Honor. If Your Honor 25 will give me a moment.

436

1 (Pause)

2 MS. YOUN: It should be Docket 260-1 which we've 3 laid this out for you in the brief.

4 THE COURT: All right. I have a declaration of 5 Bethany Foster, is that what you want me to look at?

6 MS. YOUN: Actually no, actually if you could 7 turn to the 260-1.

8 THE COURT: What's that entitled?

9 MS. YOUN: That is the defendant's memorandum in 10 opposition to the motion for summary judgment.

11 THE COURT: I think I have it.

12 MS. YOUN: Yes, and it's at pages 50 through 51.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MS. YOUN: Okay. You should be looking at a 15 table or two tables which are entitled 2004 Average Senate 16 Candidate Expenditures? No.

17 THE COURT: I've got the wrong document then.

18 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, if you'll give us a 19 moment -- I'm sorry, it's on page 42 of that brief which 20 is page 51 of the Docket.

21 MR. LOPEZ: Is this the Foster declaration?

22 MS. YOUN: No, we're in the brief on page 42.

23 MR. LOPEZ: Is this the most recent brief?

24 MS. YOUN: No, this is the opposition to the 25 summary judgment. I'm happy to give you a copy of the 437

1 chart.

2 MR. LOPEZ: Yes.

3 (Hands Counsel.)

4 THE COURT: Got it.

5 MS. YOUN: Okay, great. So you should be 6 looking at two tables that correspond 2004 average, 7 average candidate expenditures versus the corresponding 8 CEP grant amounts, and the basis for those figures is set 9 forth in the Foster declaration, paragraphs 23 and 24.
10 And this just serves to demonstrate that to include 11 uncontested races and races with only one minor party 12 opponent and that average that the plaintiffs have cited 13 are inaccurate.

14 If you actually look at what the expenditures
15 were, then you can see that the Connecticut Legislature 16 relatively carefully tailored the grant amounts in the

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
17 30 percent reduction and in the 60 percent reduction in 18 the grant amounts that are given to various levels of 19 expenditures and races.

20 So, for example -- for example, you'll see that 21 going to the bottom of the second chart, a major party
22 House candidate facing a nonmajor party opponent, a minor 23 party opponent had historically spent an average of 24 $17,500 in 2004, and you'll see that the corresponding CEP 25 grant amount is, in fact, less than that amount at

1 $15,000.

2 And the Connecticut legislature, in fact, had 3 these figures in front of it and was looking at this 4 figure in exactly this breakdown. If you look at Docket
5 --

6 THE COURT: I'm sorry, not all of my documents
7 have docket numbers on them. What is that entitled?

8 MS. YOUN: That's the research report which is 9 ORL Research.

10 THE COURT: Which is Exhibit 17?

11 MS. YOUN: Yes, Exhibit 20 to the Garfield, to 12 Garfield's second declaration.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MS. YOUN: So, you can see as you page through 15 this, the legislature was concerned in breaking out 16 expenditures in races for different levels of 17 contestedness enough to make sure, just to make sure they 18 didn't, in fact, flood uncontested races or less contested 19 races with grant amounts that were appropriate only for 20 fully contested races.

21 THE COURT: Now, the chart on page 42 of the 22 opposition to summary judgment, I take it, doesn't account

23 for any triggers of additional funding.

24 MS. YOUN: Yes, it doesn't account for triggered 25 matching funds. If you, in fact, look to, if you continue

439

1 on in the OLR report that's in front of you now, in 2 addition to looking at less competitive races, the 3 legislature was also concerned to look to the most highly 4 competitive races, which are the only races logically 5 where matching funds are ever going to come into play and 6 where two candidates, ones where you have a candidate, a 7 non-participating candidate who's challenged who is 8 spending well in excess of historical norms or excess 9 expenditures, matching is going to come into play. So, 10 you'll see looking here, these also correspond to the 11 historical levels and we believe that this was what the 12 legislature used as its basis for these amounts.

13 So, if you look at, for example, you'll see 14 first, the first table they look at is campaign 15 expenditures in races with open seats, that is a 16 particularly contested type of election. In the Senate, 17 the high expenditure range goes as high as $200,000, so in 18 these most competitive races, historical expenditures were 19 $200,000. The maximum 100 percent that triggered excess 20 expenditure matching would be $170,000. That's twice 21 85,000.

22 Similarly, in the House you'll see that the high 23 range of races in these open seat districts, they spent as 24 much as $58,000. Once again the maximum excess 25 expenditure matching fund there is $50,000. So that's

440

1 again quite well tailored.

2 THE COURT: Is it your interpretation of the 3 statute that there are circumstances under which 4 participating candidates could have 300 times the maximum 5 grant?

6 MS. YOUN: Is that a question --

7 THE COURT: 300 percent, excuse me, 300 percent 8 of the maximum.

9 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: I think it is the case, and 10 I think it would be a rare case, but the original grant, 11 high spending opponent and independent expenditures.

12 THE COURT: Right.

13 MS. YOUN: I'm not aware that the legislature 14 specifically looked at that scenario, and I'm also not 15 aware of, I guess, any legislative finding with respect to 16 levels of independent expenditures in previous races and 17 whether --

18 (Pause)

19 Sorry, just trying to make sure that I hit 20 everything -- so I wanted to, I also wanted to talk about 21 statewide levels, which is in the previous exhibit in 22 front of Your Honor, which would be campaign, the OLR 23 report on campaign expenditures by statewide office
24 candidates.

25 THE COURT: I'm sorry, which exhibit?

441

1 MS. YOUN: That's Garfield's second declaration, 2 Exhibit 19, which is --

3 THE COURT: I have it.

4 MS. YOUN: Okay. Should be the previous 5 document. So, again, here the legislature once more is 6 also concerned with tailoring grants. They are finding 7 that the gubernatorial average in the past three elections

8 is $3.8 million but that expenditures there range as high 9 as over $6 million in both races run by Governor Rowland.
10 You'll also see that in the statewide elections there's a 11 much larger disparity. There are winning candidates who 12 were spending as much as $1 million in the Secretary of 13 State race or as high as close to $800,000 in the 14 lieutenant governor's race.

15 And you're seeing losing candidates who, who are 16 spending quite a bit less than that. And in setting the 17 statewide amounts for a non-gubernatorial candidate at 18 $750,000, I think this court can draw an inference that 19 what the legislature was trying to do is to incentivize 20 the successful statewide candidates to participate in the 21 program by giving them an adequate substitute for their 22 previous funding.

23 And you've also seen the declaration of Senator 24 Mayer who is somebody whose historical fund raising had 25 been well in excess of the CEP grant amounts. He 442

1 nonetheless decided to participate in the CEP but he had 2 said that with respect to the matching funds provision, 3 that matching funds provision was, was needed to 4 incentivize him to participate because in an ordinary 5 situation he had developed a sufficient network of 6 supporters and fundraising apparatus that he would be able 7 to use if he would have found himself targeted by, you 8 know, by a millionaire entrant into the race or by an 9 independent expenditure organization. He had that rescue 10 funds capability and he had said if the requirement for 11 entering the CEP -- "I would have been helpless to respond 12 to those sorts of attacks, then I would not have

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
13 participated or I would have been less likely to 14 participate."

15 MR. LOPEZ: We would just raise one objection to 16 the reference to the Mayer affidavit. I did have a chance 17 to look at this, the spending packet over the history, and 18 he did have one year and that's the year that he up-ended 19 the fellow we heard about this morning and it was a high 20 spending event, but since then it's a safe seat and he 21 hasn't had to raise the kind of money that's necessary.
22 He hasn't really had to raise money equivalent to the CEP 23 grant. Otherwise I have no objection to that.

24 MS. YOUN: Your Honor, I'm not sure what 25 information Mr. DeRosa is referring to but in paragraph

443

1 five of that declaration, we set forth that in 2006
2 Senator Mayer raised $120,000. In 2004 he raised nearly 3 $200,000 for his Senate campaign. So, unless he's 4 challenging those figures --

5 THE COURT: I think the distinction is raise 6 versus spent. I assume that's the distinction.

7 MR. LOPEZ: No, it's possible I misspoke. I did
8 look at this data before I came up here this week and I
9 thought I tracked a longer period. I'll go back and look 10 at that. I know that he spent $194,000 in the year that 11 he won. I stand corrected on what happened in '06, but -- 12 I won't object to it.

13 MS. YOUN: Any spent versus raise thing with 14 respect to the matching funds in the incentivization is 15 that distinction is not relevant because if you have the 16 fund raising capability to raise rescue funds if you're 17 targeted, you don't want to participate in the CEP if you 18 have to give up all possibility of responding to 19 unexpected attacks.

20 I also just wanted to talk to the existence of 21 what the plaintiff keeps calling loopholes in the CEP and 22 specifically with respect to the organizational 23 expenditures and coordinated expenditures, and as the 24 plaintiff argues, that these supposed loopholes renders 25 CEP expenditure limits meaningless because they provide

444

1 what I believe Attorney Lopez referred to as a back-door
2 way of getting funds into the system. And I would say, 3 first of all, the suggestion that the parties can just 4 write a check to the CEP participating candidate is, is 5 not the way the statute works at all.

6 The organizational expenditure provisions are 7 allowed for only five statutorily specified uses. Those 8 are, you know, to put out a listing of party candidates, 9 to give candidates party building materials such as voter 10 lists, to, you know, do a campaign event at which the 11 candidate is present, you know, to hire, to allow the 12 candidate to make use of the party's campaign consultants, 13 and also to allow the candidate to make use of the party's 14 offices.

15 THE COURT: The campaign can include a 16 fundraiser to permit the candidate to obtain --

17 MS. YOUN: Obtain qualifying contributions, that 18 is correct, and those are capped out at $3,500 for House 19 and $10,000 for Senate contributions. And I would submit 20 that, in response to the plaintiff's constitutional 21 argument based on these organizational expenditures, first 22 of all, these organizational expenditures would be equally 23 available to plaintiffs had plaintiffs built the kind of

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
24 party that were capable of making those organizational 25 expenditures. If they were generating voter lists, they

445

1 could then give them to their candidates. If they had 2 office space in multiple locations, they could share them 3 with their candidates. The fact that they are not able to 4 take advantage of those, you know, of those provisions is 5 not, is again not something that's specifically directed 6 at minor parties but is a symptom of the preexisting lack 7 of political strength of the minor parties.

8 And secondly, Attorney Lopez references the 9 Pelto declaration, which I believe is Plaintiff's 10 Exhibit 37 and 39, in which Mr. Pelto, I believe, 11 testifies that prior to the CEP state party committees, 12 previously raised hundreds of thousands of dollars that 13 were used to support party candidates, but that was the 14 status quo ante. We now under the CEP have limitations on 15 that money coming in and we think that those limitations 16 represent a benefit to minor party candidates under the 17 plaintiffs' logic, rather than otherwise.

18 Similarly, in the recently filed declaration of 19 Mr. Narain, he listed at Table 7, this is Docket three -- 20 Document 307-3 in the docket, which is the Narain
21 declaration, Plaintiff's A-10.

22 THE COURT: All right, okay.

23 MS. YOUN: I would put in the substantial caveat 24 that these figures are, again, not final and are only 25 based on the filings as of October 28. But still, you'll

446

1 see that, yes, the parties are still, you know, raising 2 monies in PACs but, according to the organizational 3 expenditures, those are quite a bit less than the parties'

4 fund raising capability. These organizational 5 expenditures are to be acting as a limit on the parties, 6 you know, on the parties being able to help out their 7 candidates. Political parties have always existed and 8 they have always performed functions such as sharing voter 9 lists with candidates, and the CEP did not entirely 10 eliminate that, but what the CEP did was to substantially 11 narrow these, these exceptions.

12 Finally, with respect to the exploratory
13 committee, you know, this is again a very hypothetical -- 14 this was the subject of the Rotman testimony that Attorney 15 Lopez discussed at some length yesterday about whether or 16 not the plaintiffs would be able to, whether major party 17 candidates would be able to linger indefinitely in 18 exploratory committee mode and raise funds in that 19 capacity and then only declare CEP participation at the 20 very last minute and be able to get both the benefit of 21 CEP funding and also the money that they raised during 22 their exploratory committee phase.

23 You know, first of all, this is a highly 24 theoretical loophole which I don't think that I've ever 25 seen any evidence that anyone anywhere has ever done.

447

1 But, second of all, the exploratory committee loophole is 2 itself substantially restricted by the operation of other 3 sections of Connecticut electoral law. For example,
4 Connecticut statute 9-604 says that once the candidate
5 makes any public announcement that he or she is running 6 for office, and I understand that that would include, for 7 example, telling the Hartford Courant I'm running for 8 office or printing a "Fonfara for Senate" bumper sticker,

9 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
10 et cetera, anything like that, you are required to dissolve 11 your exploratory committee and form the candidate
12 committee and that would be the point at which CEP
13 restrictions would kick in for participating candidates.

14 Also by law, the exploratory committee has to be 15 dissolved by the time the major party is nominated, the 16 major party nominating conventions or primaries take 17 place, and I know that the conventions also under 18 Connecticut law take place sometime in May.

19 So there's -- you know, the idea that they would 20 be able to wait until the absolute last minute and stay in 21 exploratory committee mode is, I think, without basis.

22 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, if I can just 23 add a couple more minor points with respect to that 24 exploratory committee, which would be characterized as a 25 loophole, first of all, it's available to any party or any 26 candidate. A minor party candidate can form an 448

1 exploratory committee and remain in that up until 15 days
2 after a public declaration that he or she is running for a 3 particular office.

4 The second point is there are some restrictions 5 on the amount of money that can be carried forward from 6 the exploratory committee to a candidate committee and 7 that's capped by the declaratory ruling of the SEEC at an 8 amount equal to the amount of the qualifying contribution 9 required for that office.

10 And there's also a possible danger in that 11 deficits from exploratory committees carry forward to 12 candidate committees, so it can actually cut both ways.

13 Thank you, Your Honor.

14 MS. YOUN: The point of both of those supposed
Page 173

15 Loopholes is neither of them allow the sort of end-run 16 around the statute that, that plaintiffs have been 17 concerned about.

18 And finally, I would just like to talk to the 19 evidentiary facts that we've submitted on standing. And 20 plaintiffs made an argument yesterday that essentially the 21 nature of the chill injury here is the same as was 22 asserted in Davis and that, therefore, under Davis 23 plaintiffs have standing to pursue this claim.

24 Now, I think that that argument logically would 25 swallow all standing. The sort of chill they are talking

449

1 about is some sort of future pattern of action that they 2 allege that they intend to engage in. Now, it, like 3 Davis, does not permit chill to swallow requirements of 4 standing this way. It does not say that allegations of 5 bare intent to pursue a course of action that you had not 6 previously pursued are sufficient to infer standing, 7 especially at the trial stage. Instead I would submit 8 that the relevant standard is still the one that had been 9 set forth in Lujan. I'm going to -- if I can ask the 10 Court -- to help me find this.

11 (Pause)

12 MS. YOUN: You know, for example, the plaintiffs 13 have cited in support of their position the analogy, an 14 analogy of this position of plaintiffs in Leak. Your 15 Honor very rightly asked the question, well, what the 16 procedural posture would be, and the procedural posture of 17 Leak was motion to dismiss. We're now at trial and I
18 think that the following quote from Lujan is still the law 19 and nothing in Davis did anything to change that.

20
21 allegations of injury resulting from the defendant's 22 conduct may suffice on a motion to dismiss. We presume 23 that general allegations embrace those specific facts that 24 are necessary to support the claim. In response to a 25 summary judgment motion, however, the plaintiff can no

450

1 longer rest on such mere allegations but must set forth by 2 affidavit or other evidence specific facts which for 3 purposes of the summary judgment motion will be taken to 4 be true and at the final stage, those facts, if 5 controverted, must be supported adequately by the evidence 6 adduced at trial." That is a quote from the Supreme 7 Court's decision in Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife.

8 So this -- and an affidavit such as the one 9 submitted by Mr. DeRosa, that is nothing more than an 10 expression of bare intent to engage in a course of 11 activity, does not infer standing at the trial stage and 12 is not sufficient evidence of standing at the trial stage 13 to confer jurisdiction on this court.

14 I would also state to the court that the, the 15 ways in which plaintiffs' prior behavior have fallen far 16 short of the pattern of behavior that would be necessary 17 to trigger either the excess expenditure or the 18 independent expenditure provisions of the, of the CEP are 19 set forth very simply in defendant's statement of 20 undisputed material fact under 561 that was filed as part 21 of our motion for summary judgment on standing. So that's 22 just a page or so of facts.

23 THE COURT: Let me ask you this. You're not 24 contesting standing with respect to Count One, is that 25 right?

1 MS. YOUN: I'm sorry, I didn't --

2 THE COURT: Are you conceding standing to 3 challenge, to make a claim in Count One?

4 MS. YOUN: I mean we're not conceding it. We 5 say it's part of the plaintiff's burden to establish 6 standing on that point as it's always the plaintiff's 7 burden to establish standing, but we are moving for 8 summary judgment based on the, based on plaintiff's --

9 THE COURT: Counts Two and Three.

10 MS. YOUN: -- Lack of standing with respect to 11 matching funds.

12 THE COURT: Okay, all right. Does the plaintiff
13 have to have, does a plaintiff challenging 14 constitutionality of a statute have to have each of the 15 standing requirements with respect to each claim that the 16 statute is unconstitutional?

17 MS. YOUN: Yes, I would submit that it does.

18 THE COURT: And does plaintiff have to have 19 each of the requirements of constitutional standing with 20 respect to each argument made in support of each claim of 21 unconstitutionality at this stage?

22 MS. YOUN: That's a little abstract for me. I'm 23 not quite sure what the answer to that would be. Maybe 24 if -- maybe if you wanted to put forward a concrete 25 example, I could give you a better answer.

1 THE COURT: Well, there have been any number of 2 arguments advanced for unconstitutionality of various 3 provisions of this act, and what I'm trying to sort out is 4 what the standing requirements -- does the plaintiff have

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
5 to have standing to make an argument, does the plaintiff 6 have to have standing to raise a claim, or is standing on 7 a jurisdictional issue, is that satisfied if the plaintiff 8 has standing under any theory to challenge the 9 constitutionality? Do they -- in fact, does the court 10 then have the authority to consider other arguments other 11 claims, et cetera?

12 MS. YOUN: My understanding of standing is that 13 it is done on a cause of action basis; that for each 14 particular cause of action that the plaintiff is 15 asserting, they have to establish standing for that cause 16 of action.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 MS. YOUN: If anyone has any elaboration --

19 MR. FEINBERG: I would say, Your Honor, that the 20 constitutional requirement is injury, in fact, in order to 21 raise any particular claim. So there may be multiple 22 claims within a single cause of action which are 23 challenging multiple provisions of the statute, and I do 24 think it's a constitutional requirement that the plaintiff 25 does have to be able to demonstrate injury for in order to 1 raise that particular claim.

2 As to the more refined question as to whether a 3 plaintiff who does suffer injury is entitled to advance 4 all arguments as to why that statute may be 5 unconstitutional, even if their arguments that they're not 6 affected by, I'm not actually sure of the answer to that 7 question. That's a trickier question. There may be some 8 sort of zone of interest type analysis that also plays in 9 here.

10 THE COURT: What about over breadth? If the
Page 177

11 plaintiff has, if the plaintiff has standing to raise 12 constitutionality as set forth in Count One, does the 13 plaintiff have through an over breadth analysis standing 14 to raise other aspects of the constitutionality in a First 15 Amendment case?

16 MS. YOUN: I'm not sure -- my understanding is 17 over breadth is not asserted in that case, but my 18 understanding at the trial level is over breadth does not 19 expand the requirements of standing, nor could it 20 constitutionally change the Article 3 requirements of 21 standing.

22 THE COURT: I'm not suggesting it changes
23 anything. It goes back to the question of how far does 24 the standing requirement extend. If the requirement is 25 that the plaintiff have standing to challenge the 454

1 constitutionality of the act, that's one level of 2 analysis. If the requirement is the plaintiff has to have 3 standing to challenge each aspect of the act that the 4 plaintiff alleges is unconstitutional, the trigger
5 provisions, the magic provisions, the CEP funding 6 provisions. And, finally, if so, does the plaintiff have 7 to have standing in effect to make an argument how far 8 does it reach? I'm just not sure. I think the cases are 9 a little bit muddled on this.

10 MS. YOUN: It's not the clearest area of law in 11 the best of times, and I'm made afraid I'm not able to 12 answer your question right now, Your Honor, but if Your 13 Honor would like briefing on the subject --

14 THE COURT: I'm not sure I need briefing. If 15 you could both be prepared to talk about this a little bit

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
16 tomorrow I'd find that helpful. Any citations you have 17 are helpful. I don't necessarily need a brief. I'd be 18 curious what you find.

19 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, if I may, I didn't want 20 to interrupt Ms. Youn but I did want to find out, raise 21 two objections concerning two of the exhibits that are 22 raised. One is Exhibit Number 20, excuse me, to Garfield
23 Two, which we've been talking about today and we discussed 24 that in conjunction with a table that was prepared by one 25 of the paralegals.

455

1 THE COURT: One of your exhibits that you're 2 talking about or no?

3 MR. LOPEZ: No, I'm talking about -- the table
4 was prepared by Mr. Proulx and they know where it is in 5 the record better than I.

6 MS. YOUN: It's in the footnote. It was what we 7 were referring to which was the table on page 42 of the 8 opposition for summary judgment brief, defendant's.

9 THE COURT: Yes, I have that, thank you.

10 MR. LOPEZ: Right, and we were having -- 11 Ms. Youn was discussing it in connection with Exhibit 21
12 to the Garfield declaration, Volume 2. And it breaks out, 13 I suppose, in a reasonably persuasive fashion how the, the 14 numbers are somewhat tailored to what was going on in 15 competitive elections and uncompetitive elections and then 16 uncontested elections. I would ask, I would -- I would 17 submit that the data is incomplete, Your Honor, and it is 18 misleading in some respects for several reasons. Excuse 19 me.

20 (Pause)

21 MR. LOPEZ: Could I have that sheet back I gave

22 you?

23 MS. YOUN: I don't think you gave it to me.

24 Sorry, you did. Here.

25 MR. LOPEZ: That's your copy. Okay, thank you.

456

1 We apologize.

2 First, it does not -- the reason that seems to 3 be in conflict with our data about how dramatically
4 expenditures will increase across the board for candidates 5 under the CEP is because this data that was considered by 6 the legislature doesn't factor in the grants that are 7 going to be made available to newly participating 8 candidates, and this cycle, there were almost 40 newly 9 participating candidates and if you factor that in, the 10 numbers would be significantly inflated and they would 11 look more like the numbers that we presented in Tables One 12 and Two of the Narain declaration. I would also --

13 THE COURT: Let me make sure I understand that 14 point. Where would those numbers, where would those 15 grants be factored in in this chart?

16 MS. YOUN: This is an historical, I think -- I 17 think it's about what the legislature considered.

18 MR. LOPEZ: That's absolutely right, but they 19 are being proffered, I believe, not only to, for the 20 purpose of what the legislators considered but to show how 21 carefully tailored these grant amounts are to three 22 different types of elections, but there is another type of 23 election and it's a newly contested election. It's 24 exactly the type of election that we're complaining about.
25 Excuse me.

457

1 THE COURT: So your point is there should be a 2 fourth category, major party senate candidate.

3 MR. LOPEZ: Right.

4 THE COURT: Facing for the first time --

5 MR. LOPEZ: Right.

6 THE COURT: -- opposition.

7 MR. LOPEZ: Right. And that would -- yes, sir, 8 and that would change, and then that would -- we submit 9 that the chart should be understood in that context and I 10 would make two other related points about this chart, Your 11 Honor. One is that it does seem to show that candidates 12 who were unopposed were raising war chests. They were 13 raising, completely unopposed, considerable amounts of 14 money. There's nothing in this chart that indicates the 15 money they raised they actually spent. As I explained
16 earlier in this, in my presentation, I believe yesterday
17 perhaps, and it's supported by testimony from Mr. Jepsen, 18 it's very common for a safe incumbent running unopposed to 19 build up a war chest because they are more ambitious 20 simply because they are going to roll over into another 21 committee that they control.

22 Prior to these amendments, prior to the adoption
23 of the Comprehensive Reform Act, you could do that. You 24 could roll the money over from your candidate committee 25 into another committee that you controlled and this was 458

1 common practice. And I would submit that that accounts 2 for why the expenditures were so high on the average for 3 uncontested candidates.

4 I also made the point yesterday that --

5 THE COURT: But wait a minute. This chart is 6 not showing what unopposed major party senate candidates

7 raised. It's showing what they spent.

8 MR. LOPEZ: Oh, but, Your Honor, if they roll it
9 over that's listed as an expenditure. If they roll it 10 over, that's listed as an expenditure.

11 THE COURT: If they --

12 MR. LOPEZ: They roll it over to another 13 committee. Now, go down to what an expenditure is, it's 14 listed as another expenditure.

15 THE COURT: So, your point is they gave the 16 money away to another major party?

17 MR. LOPEZ: Right. It has to be accounted for 18 somewhere. If they give it to the leadership committee, 19 they help out another candidate. That's what safe 20 incumbents do. It happens at the national level and it 21 happens at this level.

22 THE COURT: Okay, fair enough.

23 MR. LOPEZ: I think the same generalization can 24 be made about candidates who are facing token opposition 25 from minor party candidates. And I would also emphasize

459

1 concerning this chart, as it turns out, these safe
2 incumbents, and we went over this yesterday, Your Honor, 3 safe incumbents are tending to opt out of the program
4 because they get nothing from the program. You know, why
5 does a Senate candidate want to accept 25 when he can, you 6 know, in his sleep raise 50?

7 And so I think we went through a chart yesterday 8 and it would be Table One, I believe, which showed that 9 the people who are losing most are the people who, other 10 people who are opting out.

11 I would -- that doesn't make sense. I withdraw

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
12 that, Your Honor, that last point. There was a point 13 though --

14 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: We'll stipulate to that, 15 Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: I know just how you feel. I do that 17 all the time. That's the problem with everything being 18 down on the record.

19 MR. LOPEZ: And look, I mean, Ms. Youn went very 20 quickly through the organizational expenditure, what we, 21 what Commissioner Garfield described as a loophole. She 22 almost had me convinced that nothing's going on here but 23 that's not the case. You can read the statute for 24 yourself. I mean the most compelling, I mean the most 25 obvious thing, you can run broadcast ads on behalf of the 460

1 candidate. That's just amazing. And you can run on 2 behalf of the specific candidate. You can give a 3 candidate office space. You can give, you can give the 4 candidate a campaign advisor. So when the Brennan Center 5 or when the Attorney General referred to this as, the 6 danger of it is that the Legislative Leadership committees
7 could run campaigns, I think this is a legitimate 8 observation.

9 Ms. Youn also makes the point that major 10 party -- minor parties benefit from this equally, that's 11 not true. In theory they benefit from organizational 12 expenditures driven by their party but when the 13 legislature adopted this, they knew very well that minor 14 party candidates don't benefit from organizational 15 expenditures driven by Legislative Leadership and caucus, 16 that they don't have such committees, and that particular 17 point was raised by Mr. Garfield in his testimony. And 18 was not acting on it or -- I'm sorry --

19 THE COURT: Right, but I mean the defendants
20 make a good point on that argument, that the Act doesn't 21 have to level the playing field for all candidates. If 22 there's a candidate that's running as a Democratic or 23 Republican and they have advantages of party structure and 24 resources and so forth, you know, the Act doesn't really 25 have to take that away and say that you have to act no

461

1 differently than a minor party is able to act.

2 MR. LOPEZ: Fair point, Your Honor. But if, if 3 we -- that goes to the question of, you know, how this 4 affects the playing field.

5 But in terms of the State's interest here, I 6 think the fact that you have the organizational 7 expenditure provision and it is controlled by legislative 8 leadership committees which are historically, you know, 9 the primary source of corrosive money in the system, 10 according to John Chapple's declaration, then I think on 11 the question of the legitimate analysis of the State's 12 interests, you have to ask yourself -- or whether or not 13 the State's interests are disserved by the organizational 14 expenditure loophole, and then ultimately you could fairly 15 ask yourself as well whether the organizational loophole 16 is evidence of narrow tailoring or not. You might 17 conclude that this law would be better or more narrowly 18 tailored if it didn't have the organizational loophole.
19 Excuse me.

20 I heard a nice presentation about Lujan but I
21 what didn't hear anything about in that, in the quoted 22 text was a holding or any language that suggested that a

23 statement of intent is not adequate to establish standing.
24 And I would submit in a classic campaign finance, you come 25 along and you say, Your Honor, I'm challenging this law

462

1 that prohibits me from contributing more than $100 to a 2 candidate. To, to establish standing, I would put in an 3 affidavit or I would be put on a witness to say I intend 4 to contribute more than $100 to a candidate and I can't 5 because of this law. So that's a classic example of where 6 a statement of intent would come in.

7 Now, the defendants' point is that our statement 8 is not believable because we have not had the ability to 9 do that in the past, and we haven't done it in the past 10 much is their point. Although that's not true about 11 independent expenditures but it is true about -- as 12 respects our particular client, it is true about engaging 13 in a type of, of spending that would trigger the magic 14 matching fund provision.

15 But we do have a matching fund case out there,
16 and I referenced the court to it yesterday, which said 17 that the facts that are pled or actually testified to by 18 my client are adequate. And the Court, to the extent the 19 discussion of standing and the Court relies on a lot of 20 standing cases that arise in the electoral context where 21 they say a statement of intent is adequate, Lujan isn't to 22 the contrary, Your Honor.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MS. YOUN: If I might just reply on particular 25 points. First of all, with respect to the information

463

1 regarding candidate expenditures and the -- whether newly, 2 newly, new major parties candidates should be included in

3 that, I would submit I wasn't going to get into this 4 because I think of it as a 2008 expenditure issue on which 5 the data is not ripe to be assessed. But to the extent
6 that you can look at the Narain declaration and Table One 7 and Two particularly, today I would submit that the way in 8 which they are done is simply methodologically wrong and I
9 tried to explain this yesterday. Wasn't as artfully 10 crafted as I would have liked. I can say now that the way 11 to put this is if you're going to include newly contested 12 districts in Narain's Table One and Two, you have to 13 include newly uncontested districts or else your average 14 is substantially skewed. I have to include the positive 15 side of the equation as well as the negative because the 16 Narain Tables One and Two fail to do this. They are 17 methodologically wrong and shouldn't be considered.

18 Secondly, with respect to this idea that the, 19 the OLR research reports on campaign registrations
20 represent war chests rather than actual expenditures, I 21 would say give us a record as to what you think, what 22 these -- what amount, what percentage of those amounts 23 were war chests if you want to exclude it but otherwise 24 this is the best data the legislature had and it's what it 25 had when it had grant amounts that it wanted to tailor to

464

1 expenditures. It doesn't have to be perfect but they are 2 trying to tailor historical expenditures.

3 Additionally, this kind of a war chest argument
4 is in opposition to the, to the relevance of the returned 5 funds argument that the plaintiff made yesterday.
6 Specifically Mr. Lopez I think said, well, if you have a 7 full grant amount, even if you don't use it, it's still

8 like having a loaded gun. Well, what we're saying is if 9 you're going to talk about only actual expenditures in the 10 district, then you shouldn't use the full CEP grant 11 amount, whether they expend it or not. That would be 12 analogous to the sort of war chest fund that they are 13 talking about here that wasn't actually funded. If you're 14 going to try to show an inflation of actual expenditures, 15 then do actual funds not expended versus actual funds 16 expended, not hypothetical or potentially unexpended.

17 Finally, with respect to the Lujan analysis, I 18 was trying to have some pity on the court reporter and not 19 read even more lengthy citations from case law into the 20 record, but Lujan, 504 U.S. 564 said, "Such some day 21 intentions without any description of concrete plan or 22 any, even any specification of when" -- the court's 23 emphasis -- "the some day will be, do not support a 24 finding of the actual or imminent injury that our cases 25 require."

465

1 THE COURT: Isn't there a slightly, slightly
2 different standing rule with respect to campaign cases?
3 In other words, Lujan had to do, as I recall, with the 4 likelihood of persons visiting places outside the United 5 States again, and the campaign cases I think are closer at 6 least to Mr. Lopez's suggestion about the law says this 7 and, therefore, I intend to do that.

8 MS. YOUN: Sure, and that's why I think in our 9 briefing on this point we directed the court specifically 10 to the standing analysis in McConnell and looked at, and 11 also distinguished the situations in both Davis and in 12 Leak. In Davis, as the court pointed out yesterday, the 13 candidate was on the verge of making a specific

14 expenditure in a specific amount in a particular race that 15 they were going to contest. It was not an overall 16 allegation that in the future the Green Party will change 17 its strategy to engage in a course of behavior that 18 they've never before engaged in and, indeed, do not have 19 the demonstrated capacity to engage in.

20 Second of all, in Jackson v. Leak, even above 21 and beyond the fact that it was a motion to dismiss 22 ruling, in that case the plaintiffs had alleged that the 23 Act had already caused them to act differently. One 24 plaintiff alleged that he chose not to make -- that he had 25 already chosen not to make expenditures that he was

466

1 capable of making because of the independent expenditure 2 provisions, and the other plaintiff alleged that they 3 would have done so in a prior election. So what they are 4 talking about is past injury. The idea that Davis somehow 5 opens the door for allegations of future chill to provide 6 an end-run around, actual or imminent injury, in fact is, 7 I think, without foundation.

8 THE COURT: All right.

9 MS. YOUN: I'm pretty much done with the factual
10 presentation. I know Perry was thinking of something.

11 THE COURT: He looks a little worn out.

12 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Yeah --

13 MS. YOUN: I think we all do at this point.

14 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: It's been a long couple of 15 days but perhaps we ought to discuss what's left to do.
16 My understanding is -- I've got maybe 10 or 15 minutes of 17 remarks, sort of broader brush than what Attorney Youn has 18 gone through. I think it's going to be a little

19 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
ant climactic if we all reconvene tomorrow for that, but 20 you know, what may be left on the table is I think to 21 close out the discussion on 2008. I think we probably 22 have -- I don't have much more to say to that. I don't 23 know if Mr. Lopez does or if Your Honor has further 24 questions on that.

25 I think what our intention now is to do is we 467

1 have now I think affirmatively put some 2008 facts into 2 the record in our presentation right after we had that 3 discussion, so what we'd like to do is submit a limited 4 additional proposed finding of fact just on those facts 5 that we have referenced, and those are what we consider to 6 be the final, the pieces of data from 2008 that are final.
7 Number of candidacies, electoral results and 8 contestedness. You know, how many districts were 9 competitive and that increases or decreases contestedness.
10 We could put together a very brief proposed finding of 11 fact on that other data, particularly with respect to 12 expenditures and organizational expenditures. We think 13 that probably is -- I don't think we can give you 14 something that's sufficiently reliable because it's not 15 yet final and we would wait until March.

16 We talked about an additional brief, Rotman
17 declaration on, you know, on the high spending opponent 18 excess expenditure provision.

19 So, I'm not sure what's left for tomorrow other 20 than perhaps some closing remarks. I don't know if it 21 makes sense to try to push through today and finish. I'm 22 prepared to do that.

23 THE COURT: Well, let me hear from anybody who 24 has something they want to say tomorrow by way of 25 argument. My thought was if anybody feels like they 468

1 haven't had a chance to fully make their case or argue
2 issues of law, that we could come back. Obviously it 3 seems to me there are a number of issues in the case.
4 Standing, standard of review, whether the plaintiffs have 5 met the burden of proving their case, et cetera, 2008, 6 these are at least potential issues that people may want 7 to talk about. I have no great need frankly. I feel 8 fairly saturated at the moment.

9 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: I'm sure you do, Your Honor.
10 You know, we have, I think, so extensively briefed these 11 issues and discussed them at various points along the way
12 that, you know, I think it was important to make a factual 13 record. We may be beating the horse, I think, if we 14 continue with many some of the legal arguments at this 15 point. Unless Your Honor has particular issues of concern 16 we can address, it might make sense if we can take a 17 couple minutes and talk among ourselves to maybe make a 18 suggestion about how to proceed.

19 THE COURT: That's fine. Why don't we take a 20 ten minute recess.

21 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Thank you, Your Honor.

22 (Whereupon a recess was taken from 4:30 o'clock, 23 p. m. to 4:40 o'clock, p. m.)

24 THE COURT: All right. Anybody want to come 25 back tomorrow?

469

1 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Not us, Your Honor. Our 2 preference would be to try to finish today.

3 MR. LOPEZ: With a caveat, Your Honor, I think

Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
4 we can finish today as well. I would just ask that we 5 also be allowed because yesterday there were a fair number 6 of exhibits that were struck from our exhibit list, and we 7 reference those in our findings and, you know, we're naked 8 now on those findings and we would just like to submit 9 another round of findings to substitute as --

10 THE COURT: Well, you actually have some 11 exhibits that were excluded without prejudice to laying a 12 foundation or whatever. So --

13 MR. LOPEZ: I don't think I can do that without 14 putting on testimony.

15 THE COURT: Perhaps not, but while you were 16 caucusing I was caucusing too, and I think I've adjusted 17 my thinking about how to handle this case procedurally and 18 I think the best thing to do is to start drafting a 19 decision, not release that decision until we have the 20 March hearing and have a single decision. I know that's 21 perhaps a disappointment to getting this thing decided 22 more quickly but it will permit both sides to fill in the 23 record as they need to, either because there was no 24 foundation or because we had incomplete data. It does 25 away with the 2008 issue completely. It does away with

470

1 the scope of as applied versus facial because I'll decide
2 them both at the same time. I don't have to sort through 3 what evidence I can consider on one versus the other and 4 if I start work now, I should be able to issue the 5 decision promptly after the March hearing.

6 So, effectively, although it means delaying an 7 appeal by about two months, it may speed up the date on 8 which the entire case is decided. And that may be the 9 better way to go. So let me hear your thoughts on 10 that.

11 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, that's -- I
12 think that's acceptable to defendants and intervenor 13 defendants. I believe that's, I think that's largely what 14 we were proposing. I understand how we got here but I 15 think that's largely what we were proposing when we were 16 last together.

17 THE COURT: Yes, this has been very helpful to 18 me though because by the time of the March hearing, I 19 think I'll be fairly far along and I won't be issuing a 20 decision two months after March but maybe two weeks after 21 March.

22 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: I agree, Your Honor. I
23 think it's been helpful for us and I think it's been 24 helpful also for the plaintiffs, and I think when we get 25 to March, I think we're proceeding probably to a narrower

471

1 set of issues to address.

2 THE COURT: I think very narrow at this point.

3 MR. LOPEZ: I'm obviously disappointed, as I'm 4 sure my client is. We think it's significant we get this 5 done, an opinion out in January and opinion out in March.

6 Having said that, Your Honor, I just want to 7 raise one reservation that has nothing to do with the 8 Court, it has to do with further extensions and further 9 briefing and -- I mean I want to -- if we could just have 10 some binding representation from the defendants that we're 11 done, that we are going, we're going to live with those 12 dates and we're going to close the record and we're going 13 to have that trial and, you know, there will be no further 14 requests for extensions and we can put put this to bed in 15 March.

16 THE COURT: I'm not hearing any extensions. I
17 think we have the vast bulk of the record that anybody
18 wants to put in. We're really going to be finishing up.
19 If you want to put on a witness to get Exhibit 24 back in 20 or whatever, or if they've got that kind of clean up 21 witness, if there's any specific evidence -- presumably 22 you're going to want to put on Mr. DeRosa, I would assume, 23 on as applied. Perhaps not, but --

24 MR. LOPEZ: But, Your Honor --

25 THE COURT: We have March 11th and 12th.

472

1 MR. LOPEZ: We have what? March 11th and 12th?

2 THE COURT: March 11th and 12th, or what I have 3 on my calendar actually or -- is that right? Yes, I think 4 March 11th and 12th.

5 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, is there any reason we 6 can't -- Ms. Youn cut to the chase, she goes here it is,
7 Your Honor, this is what we've got about '08. Is there
8 any reason we can't do this in January or in February?

9 Let me raise one other issue. We've taken our 10 best shot here. I'm not sure what else I have to say
11 evidentiary, from an evidentiary standpoint. They've seen 12 a preview of my case. I don't know what their case looks 13 like. I am now at a disadvantage I'm not sure how I can 14 cure.

15 THE COURT: I don't understand that. You both 16 have put on your cases.

17 MR. LOPEZ: But I'm going to get a round of 18 evidence from them and that means another round of 19 fighting.

20 THE COURT: No, you're not. You're not really.

21 You're done, really. I assume in March most of the 22 evidence is going to come from you. March, we're talking 23 about the as applied challenge. In my view that's 24 Mr. DeRosa. Of course, if he or the Green Party -- can he 25 or can it show that, in fact, this Act is unconstitutional

473

1 as applied to them, and most of that you've put in. Maybe
2 all of that you put in. Maybe we don't even need a
3 hearing in March, I don't know.

4 MR. LOPEZ: Well, I submit I'm going to get 5 another round of evidence from the defendants which I have 6 to deal with --

7 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: I don't think that's --

8 MR. LOPEZ: You're not going to work up the '08
9 data that you --

10 THE COURT: Yes, the '08 data is the only thing 11 that's missing and the only aspect of that that's missing, 12 as I understand it, is how much was returned and, 13 therefore, how much was actually spent of the grants that 14 were made. Is that it?

15 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: And organizational 16 expenditures. What I would anticipate doing is putting 17 before Your Honor a pretty narrow set of proposed findings 18 of fact on the as applied challenge. I think we'll be 19 supplementing the data we talked about but really 20 focussing in on the issues with where Mr. Jepsen and 21 Mr. DeRosa were pre-CEP, where they are now. That's a 22 pretty small record. I think we are probably talking 23 about public record information.

24 I don't want to foreclose the possibility that 25 something will occur to us that is relevant to as applied

474

1 that might be new but I really do believe we're talking
2 about a very limited factual record because, as Your Honor 3 points out, we are now zeroing in on the as applied 4 challenge.

5 THE COURT: All right. And when is the '08 data 6 going to be available?

7 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: We calculated that the last 8 reporting, I believe it was mid-January and then the first 9 week of February, and then I think we got to March because 10 it's going to take a pretty hefty administrative effort 11 for them to gather all the individual reports and pull out 12 the data, and that's why I think we were requesting March 13 in the first instance.

14 So I do think when Mr. Lopez says let's do this 15 in January, our concerns we voiced to Your Honor the last 16 time we were together are still concerns. We'd like to 17 have March because that allows us to have the data and 18 without putting any undue burden from the cycle, putting 19 that data in a final and reliable form for you.

20 MR. LOPEZ: And one of my concerns, Your Honor, 21 is they get a second bite of the apple. They've seen now 22 our evidence and it seems to me they can go to work. They 23 only had a week to deal with these proposed findings and I 24 only had a week to deal with theirs. Now we can go to 25 work creating -- creating a dispute, if you will, over our

475

1 proposed findings, a dispute that could unravel all of our 2 proposed findings. That's what I would do in their 3 situation.

4 THE COURT: How are you at a disadvantage? You
5 can go to work on their proposed findings.

6 MR. LOPEZ: I don't have theirs.

7 THE COURT: I have theirs.

8 MR. LOPEZ: Their proposed findings basically
9 summarize the statute, Your Honor. Remember, they said 10 we're not addressing these half dozen issues in these 11 proposed findings.

12 THE COURT: Okay, so you'll have it two or three 13 weeks before the hearing.

14 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Yes, Your Honor. I'm sure 15 we'll set a deadline and we'll exchange proposed findings
16 but, you know, this was a bifurcated proceeding. I mean 17 Mr. Lopez put in whatever he decided to put in, and he did 18 know there was going to be an as applied hearing in March, 19 and so there should have been an expectation that we would 20 have a case that he would have to, you know, confront on 21 that as applied challenge. So this notion that it's going 22 to be somehow surprising we're going to come forward and 23 put a record before Your Honor as to the as applied 24 challenge, I frankly don't understand.

25 MR. LOPEZ: We have nothing else to add on the 476

1 as applied challenge. I don't know what else -- I mean
2 put a different spin on the same evidence? I don't have 3 anything else to add to the as applied challenge for them 4 to attack us. I've got nothing else to add. We put on 5 our, we put on our case.

6 THE COURT: Okay. This is what I'm going to 7 suggest. I still think we're going to be doing what I
8 just said, which is I'm going to be getting to work. This 9 is going to be a potentially massive decision in terms of 10 findings to be made, the conclusions that have to be made.

11 It's going to be a lot of work. We're going to get to 12 work on that and counsel should confer and come up with 13 the earliest reasonable date to exchange the underlying 14 data, to exchange proposed findings of fact and 15 conclusions of law and anything supplemental to -- if any 16 briefing is necessary, to exchange briefing, and either 17 get an agreement or call me up and we'll set a schedule so 18 that we get this done at the earliest possible date. I 19 want to have all of this sooner rather than later because 20 I want to be prepared at the hearing to focus on what I 21 need to focus on.

22 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, that works for 23 defendants. Mr. Lopez shouldn't be surprised when our 24 dates look like March, you know, 11th and 12th because 25 that was -- we had already sort of calculated out from the 477

1 last reporting date, but we certainly are very prepared to 2 have that conversation and report back in short order.

3 THE COURT: And if need be, we can have a
4 pretrial conference to sort through this. I really don't 5 see a disadvantage to the plaintiffs in the way this is 6 playing out.

7 MR. LOPEZ: I would, with respect, Your Honor, I 8 just think they are going to have a second run at my 9 evidence and I don't have anymore new evidence.

10 THE COURT: You don't --

11 MR. LOPEZ: I guess I'm going to go back and 12 figure something out, but --

13 THE COURT: That doesn't strike me as a problem.
14 I want to get this right.

15 MR. LOPEZ: Fair.

16 THE COURT: So, if they see something they
Page 197

17 haven't seen and they want to raise it, I'd rather have 18 them raise it with me than raise it for the first time on 19 appeal, because I want to make a finding of fact and I 20 want to consider and make a conclusion on it. So if they 21 have another run at your evidence, I don't see this as a 22 problem. I'm going to be running at your evidence from 23 now until a decision is done so I just don't see it as a 24 problem. You know, this is not who gets the last word, 25 it's what does the evidence show.

478

1 MR. LOPEZ: Can I solicit the court's assistance
2 in making sure that I have their evidence forthwith so I
3 can take a run at their evidence?

4 THE COURT: I just said, I just said I want it 5 at the earliest possible date and you want to confer with 6 them to get it at the earliest possible date. Let's get 7 it done.

8 MR. LOPEZ: Can we limit the additional evidence
9 coming in to the things that they've identified? I 10 personally think that they are blowing the whole time 11 about what's outstanding but can we at least limit it, the 12 additional evidence that is coming in to what they have 13 represented is outstanding and is so essential to their 14 case?

15 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, this is a little 16 surprising, this discussion. I think Mark, Mr. Lopez is 17 forgetting who has the burden here. He's brought, he's 18 brought a facial and as applied challenge. You know, we 19 have a trial coming up in March on the as applied 20 challenge or whenever, you know. This motion that we 21 should somehow be restricted about how we're going to 22 defend that claim is, I think it is true that the record 23 is going to be limited but I don't want to sit here in 24 December and define a couple limited areas in which we'll 25 be able to defend that claim. You know, I just -- it

479

1 strikes me as a little unusual.

2 MR. LOPEZ: Are we bringing in new witnesses?
3 Are we bringing in new experts? Something --

4 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Maybe, Your Honor. I don't 5 think so but why should that notion be shocking on its 6 face?

7 THE COURT: Yes, in the first instance the two 8 of you ought to confer -- or the four of you, six of you, 9 however many of you it's going to be -- ought to confer
10 and see whether you can come up with a reasonable 11 schedule. If you can't, if you have any problems, if 12 suddenly there's five experts and you feel that you're not 13 going to be able to prepare in time, call me up. We'll 14 deal with it.

15 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, not to be petulant but 16 if we were to withdraw our as applied challenge, would 17 that aid the court at all in getting us an opinion in 18 January?

19 THE COURT: I don't know. It certainly would be 20 possible to get an earlier decision. I would still 21 probably want to see the full 2008 evidence.

22 MR. LOPEZ: Well, in that case then we'll do it 23 the way you asked us to, Your Honor.

24 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Despite present appearances, 25 our record in conferring and coming up with agreements is

480

1 actually pretty good. So we'll have that conversation and
Page 199

2 hopefully get back to Your Honor.

3 MR. LOPEZ: It's pretty good because the one
4 time I pushed back and petitioned the court, I got slapped 5 down.

6 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: If we get back to Your Honor
7 by Wednesday of next week, does that work for Your Honor?

8 THE COURT: Sure, that's fine.

9 MS. YOUN: And did I understand that Your Honor 10 wants proposed conclusions of law as well as proposed 11 findings of fact?

12 THE COURT: You know, I have the briefs. I have 13 to come up with conclusions, but I don't think you need to 14 submit any. If, you know, there are points that you feel 15 have been raised in this proceeding that you're not sure 16 your briefing is adequate, I won't rule out accepting 17 another brief but I'm not going to encourage anybody to 18 submit another brief.

19 MS. YOUN: Sure. I think the one open point 20 from the hearing today that you asked about that we didn't 21 have an answer to was that question on standing, so I 22 don't know how you would wish us to address that, if at 23 all.

24 MR. LOPEZ: They raised the issue in the posture
25 of summary judgment so I guess that issue is out there,

481

1 your Honor. I guess I'm prepared to address it. If this 2 is -- I'm not sure what you want further addressed. I
3 thought we submitted our briefs, we made some argument
4 yesterday, you heard some argument today.

5 MS. YOUN: I was referring to the court had a 6 specific question which is does standing have to be

7 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
8 assessed on an argument by argument basis and I just don't 9 know the answer to that.

10 MR. LOPEZ: Clearly it doesn't, Your Honor. The 11 situation is a little more nuanced than that. If you 12 phrase it the way you did, then clearly not. What does it 13 matter whether you -- how you argue the case?

14 THE COURT: Exaggerate the issue.

15 MR. LOPEZ: Right, exactly.

16 THE COURT: But I do have a, I do have a serious 17 question whether it's a claim by claim basis.

18 MR. LOPEZ: Fair enough. And our response to 19 that was we would, we could have just as easily collapsed 20 or eliminated Counts Two or Three or collapsed them into 21 Count One and there would be no dispute. There is no
22 dispute that we have standing to challenge the CEP as a 23 whole and to challenge the trigger provisions in the 24 context of that whole because they operate in a way that 25 would create greater disparities between major and minor parties. I think that's relatively uncontroversial. The 482

1 issue is whether we can raise a separate claim.

2 THE COURT: I think the defendants, I think the 3 defendants expect you to have to prove as part of your 4 burden of proof that you have standing, which is not 5 surprising. They haven't conceded standing. They haven't 6 filed for summary judgment on Count One.

7 MR. LOPEZ: But I don't think there's any 8 dispute over that. I mean frankly, yes, of course, at 9 every stage of the proceedings you have to maintain 10 standing, have and maintain standing.

11 THE COURT: Trust me, standing is going to be an 12 issue in this court and the next court and the next court,

13 so you should be prepared to deal with standing because as 14 far as this case goes, it's going to get raised at every 15 level. It's a fundamental issue in any election case.
16 It's going to get raised so you're going to have prove it 17 here, you're going to have to have standing -- assuming 18 you win, you have to stand on that issue at the Court of 19 Appeals and further up, if it goes up.

20 MR. LOPEZ: But is there any doubt in anyone's 21 mind, so we don't, don't waste time on the issue, is there 22 any doubt in anyone's mind that we have standing to 23 challenge the discriminatory challenges of the CEP? I 24 mean we're here saying we're left out of the system and 25 we're worse off for it. I didn't know that anyone was

483

1 contesting our right to bring that claim.

2 MS. YOUN: As it's plaintiff's burden to 3 establish standing, including injury in fact, on any 4 causation, and I would say that the injury in fact, that's 5 a different kind of injury. To the extent that it would 6 be a chill argument rather than an equal protection 7 argument, that injury in fact has to be separately
8 established for standing purposes.

9 MR. LOPEZ: But in answer to your original 10 question, Your Honor, I mean our point is that -- and this 11 is why Monica and I both stood up two minutes ago, maybe 12 it's been ten minutes already -- why we both stood up, if 13 you have standing to challenge the trigger provisions in 14 the context of the whole statutory scheme, which is the 15 claim in Count One, it seems to me incongruous to us that 16 you wouldn't have standing to make a different argument 17 under the same constitutional amendment challenging the

18 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
19 same statutory provision. It seems to me that is a, would 20 be a hyper technical standing requirement. And I think 21 you asked that question, that's my answer. I addressed it 22 in our briefs. I didn't, because of the rush, elaborate 23 from the case law pointed out.

23 THE COURT: All right.

24 MS. YOUN: I'm not sure whether this particular 25 citation will help the court in the standing analysis but

484

1 in Davis the court found, this is 2769, "The fact that 2 Davis has standing to challenge 319(b) does not 3 necessarily mean that he also has standing to challenge 4 the scheme of contribution limitations that applies when 5 319(a) comes into play." "Standing is not dispensed in 6 gross. Rather, a plaintiff must demonstrate standing for 7 each claim he seeks to press and for each form of relief 8 that's sought."

9 The two different sections that are referenced 10 in that, 319(a) I believe is the scheme of discriminatory 11 contribution limitations that was at issue in Davis, and 12 319(b) was disclosure provisions that were at issue in 13 Davis and standing on one did not permit standing for the 14 other.

15 MR. LOPEZ: Those were two different statutory 16 provisions. We're talking about the same statutory 17 provision.

18 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: No, we're talking about 19 different provisions within a chapter.

20 THE COURT: Okay, I think I have a general
21 understanding of the parties' positions. Let me just say 22 this. It sounds as if it's possible that we may not have 23 a March proceeding if the plaintiff withdraws the as 24 applied challenge. As things now stand, I'm going to hold 25 open this record to permit the completion of the record to

485

1 the extent that the plaintiff wants to resubmit or lay a
2 foundation for exhibits that were excluded, to the extent 3 the defendants want to issue complete 2008 data. The 4 record of this proceeding is going to remain open for 5 those purposes. If we get to the point where the 6 plaintiff withdraws the as applied challenge, we'll 7 probably have some sort of conference to figure out what 8 anybody wants to do in terms of supplementing or 9 completing the record before we formally close it. All 10 right?

11 I'll wait to hear from counsel with respect to 12 your proposed schedule and we'll get to work. Thank you 13 all -- yes?

14 MR. FEINBERG: Your Honor, may we just have a 15 moment?

16 THE COURT: Sure.

17 (Pause)

18 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Your Honor, I guess the open 19 question here is, you know, I had remarks that I think 20 were going to be directed at the facial challenge case and 21 I think I'm prepared to make those. I think it might make 22 sense to make those. I think Mr. Feinberg had a few 23 remarks. I think I can restrict myself to 10 or 15 24 minutes. I was thinking it might make sense to wait until 25 March but apparently there's now a possibility we won't

486

1 get a March and have an as applied hearing. So if it
2 makes sense to Your Honor and without trying the patience

3 Transcript of 12-10-2008 Bench Trial.txt
of Your Honor and Your Honor's staff, I think we ought to, 4 you know, perhaps do that now.

5 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, then I would suggest,
6 I'm sorry, that we come back tomorrow. I see this turning 7 into another hour and-a-half presentation, especially if 8 the court has questions, and frankly this new development 9 has, has -- is a game changer for how I would have 10 proceeded and, frankly, how I would have dealt with 11 remarks, and I would ask you to give us the evening so we 12 be able to recharge.

13 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: You know, maybe a fair way 14 to do it, I mean really I'm not sure it makes sense to 15 reconvene for 15 minutes of comments that could be made 16 now. But, you know, maybe if there's a decision by 17 Mr. Lopez to withdraw his as applied challenge, we can 18 come before Your Honor for some closing argument remarks 19 on the facial challenge.

20 THE COURT: I think we'll do that anyway so 21 that's fine. Let's do that. We'll hold open the option 22 of closing arguments for both sides until we know when the 23 trial is going to be concluded.

24 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: Thank you, Your Honor. And 25 in the alternative, when we are before Your Honor on the

1 as applied, we would then be addressing in summation both 2 aspects of the claim?

3 THE COURT: Right.

4 MR. LOPEZ: Your Honor, I thought I had -- maybe
5 it wasn't clear. When you had said that your intention 6 was to keep open the record to take in supplemental 7 materials that are going to be available at least through 8 the first week of March, that -- the suggestion of taking 9 off my as applied challenge lost its advantages or its 10 appeal to us, so I don't think that we're going to be 11 proceeding that way. I think we would, if the record is 12 going to stay open that long, we would at least keep open 13 our option to put more evidence on the dates that you 14 mentioned.

15 THE COURT: That's fine. I've got the dates
16 blocked out March 11th and 12th. That's fine.

17 MR. ZINN ROWTHORN: I think in that case, Your 18 Honor, I'll probably be addressing Your Honor on the 19 facial challenge as part of that proceeding.

20 THE COURT: That's fine. We can do what amounts 21 to a single closing.

22 All right, thank you all. We'll stand 23 adjourned.

24 (Whereupon the above matter was adjourned at 5:05 25 o'clock, p. m.)
