[Announcer]: Growing up in a small town John Rochester learned early in life about hard work and sacrifice. When John was six, his father left and his mother had to go to work at the sewing plant to keep the family together. John worked his way through school, and returned home to practice law. As a youngster, John had shined shoes on the steps of the Clay County Courthouse, but he now sits as a respected circuit judge protecting Alabama's conservative values. Judge John Rochester, like a rock.
