ANSWER OF STATE COURT INTERVENORS TO THE EMERGENCY APPLICATION OF SENATOR JOSEPH B.
SCARNATI AND REPRESENTATIVE MICHAEL C. TURZAI FOR A STAY PENDING APPEAL TO THE U.S. SUPREME COURT

The State Court Intervenors¹ support the application of State Senator Scarnati and State Representative Turzai for a stay pending appeal to the United States Supreme Court. All of the State Court Intervenors are registered Republicans and include candidates and others who are active in in the Republican Party and involved in the campaigns of Republican candidates for Congress.

The State Court Intervenors support a stay because of their belief that the remedial map promulgated by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court has not been properly implemented and cannot be properly implemented in time for the scheduled primary on May 15, 2018.

The run-up to the May 15, 2018 Pennsylvania Primary Election has begun. It includes the statutory season for circulating nominating petitions, followed by the challenges to the nominating petitions, the certification of candidates for the ballots for the Primary Election, and the mailing of absentee ballots as well as military and overseas ballots. By now, all candidates should know where they are running, and the parties should know where to circulate nominating petitions, meet voters, target written and broadcast campaign communications, and request donations.

Unfortunately, everything that the voters, the candidates, and the political parties thought they knew has been swept away on the eve of the Primary by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's remedial map of February 19, 2018, leaving candidates and the electorate confused about who is running for what congressional district, what congressional district they reside in, and who they can vote for in the primary.

Implementing the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's map at this time degrades what is normally a two-year campaign cycle for Congress into a fifty-yard dash of less than three months to the Primary. To add to the public's confusion, however, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's remedial map renumbers all of the districts. Even more troublesome is the fact that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's remedial map does not show the specific vote tabulation districts in each congressional district. This is a particular source of confusion for candidates and their active supporters, such as the Amici, because the Statewide Uniform Registry of Electors ("SURE") system has not been not timely updated by the Pennsylvania Department of State. While the Department of State is supposed to fill that information in, the circulation of nomination petitions has begun, and the voters, candidates, and their nomination petition circulators are at a loss as to which voters in split counties reside in which congressional district. The lack of clarity concerning who is included in each district makes circulating the nomination petitions very difficult, and will likely lead to numerous challenges that will involve the courts and further reduce the period to campaign. To add to this confusion, under the remedial map, many voters may live in a different district than their current member of Congress. They face an election with candidates with whom they have no familiarity.

Local political parties begin recruiting and training volunteers in January to circulate nomination petitions for congressional candidates. The county parties hold events to circulate nomination petitions in February of an election year. As a result of the reconfiguration of all congressional districts and the delay in implementation, this opportunity has been lost and creates a serious impediment to a candidate seeking to secure the necessary number of signatures to appear on the Primary Election ballot.

Changing congressional districts before or after the nomination petition circulation period confuses voters. Intervenor Lynne Ryan believes that changing congressional districts during the nomination petition circulation period could cause a higher risk that a voter may sign a nomination petition for the wrong district. She believes that there is not enough time to inform voters of a change in congressional districts before nomination petitions begin circulation. She likens a change in congressional districts to changes in a voter's polling place: it would take time to educate voters of a change in the political and election process, similar to efforts to inform voters when their polling place changes at or near an election.

Intervenor Thomas Whitehead believes changing the congressional district boundaries will negate much, if not all, of the activities that he has undertaken as Chair of the Monroe County Republican Committee in connection with the 2018 congressional elections, including recruiting candidates, volunteers, and donors; organizing grassroots activities; creating public political communications in support of congressional candidates; and allocating campaigning activities and county committee resources amongst other candidates on the ballot. Whitehead made these efforts in reliance on Monroe County's current divide between the 10th District represented by Representative Tom Marino and the 17th District represented by Representative Matt Cartwright. Now, under the Supreme Court's map, Monroe County will be divided between the Lehigh Valley-based 7th District vacated by retiring Representative Charlie Dent and the northeastern Pennsylvania-based 8th District where Representative Matt Cartwright resides.

Changing congressional districts during the nomination petition circulation period could cause a higher risk that voters may sign a nomination petition for the wrong district. A voter may sign a nomination petition for only one candidate per office. Thus, if a voter is moved to a new congressional district and signs a nomination petition for her old district, not only is her signature invalid, but she cannot sign a second petition in her new district either, thereby effectively eliminating her rights. This could increase the number of objections to nomination petitions, thus increasing the burden on the courts and further delaying the identity of candidates for the primary election ballots.

The delayed nomination petition circulation period for congressional candidates has also directly impacted the special election for the 18th Congressional District. Governor Wolf issued a writ to hold a special election for the vacancy in the current 18th Congressional District on March 13, 2018. The special election will be held a mere fifteen days after petitions begin to circulate for the election for the redrawn 18th Congressional District—now the 13th, 14th, 17th, and 18th Districts—in November 2018. Thus, the special election campaign will take place during the circulation of nomination petitions for the primary election, yet the two major party nominees in the Special Election, Republican Rick Saccone and Democrat Conor Lamb, no longer live in this district as it has been redrawn by the remedial map. Voters may not support either candidacy in the Special Election knowing that neither candidate may be on the ballot in November. Furthermore, voters will be confused because each candidate will be running in a different district in the primary in May (the “old” 18th District). This will also create confusion in gathering signatures for nomination petitions for the primary and general election.

State Court Intervenors Brian McCann et al. support the factual assertions in this Answer by way of the affidavits and other factual assertions which were submitted or provided by the Intervenors and are in the record below. Information concerning the separate election calendars for members of Congress, for all offices other than members of congress, and for the special election for the 18th District is provided in Exhibit 2, along with a summary of the statutory requirements for valid nomination petitions.

RELIEF REQUESTED

State Court Intervenors support the granting of a stay pending appeal so that the primary and general election for members of Congress in Pennsylvania can be conducted in an orderly manner based on a fully clarified and properly implemented congressional districting plan.

Respectfully,

Lawrence J. Tabas, Esq.

Pennsylvania's primary election is scheduled for May 15, 2018.

To be placed on the primary election ballot, a candidate for the United States House of Representatives must file a nominating petition containing at least 1,000 valid of electors residing in the district he desires to represent. 25 P.S. §2872.1(12).

For all elective offices other than Congress, the schedule for filing nomination petitions, for gathering signatures, and for mailing absentee ballots to military personnel is:

Nomination petitions must be filed on or before the tenth Tuesday before the primary election. 25 P.S. §2873(d). This year, the tenth Tuesday falls on March 6, 2018. The time allowed for gathering signatures is February 13 to March 6, or three weeks. 25 P.S. §2868.

The last day for objections to nominating petitions is the seventh day after the last day for filing. 25 P.S. §2937. This year, the seventh day falls on March 13, 2018.

Absentee ballots are to be mailed to military personnel not less than fifty days before the primary election and to non-military personnel not less than 45 days before the primary. 25 P.S. §3146.5(a). This year, the fiftieth day falls on March 26, 2018, and the forty-fifth day falls on Saturday March 31 and rolls over to Monday April 2.

For congressional candidates only, the court-ordered schedule is:

Nomination petitions must be filed on or before March 20. The time allowed for gathering signatures is February 27 to March 20, or three weeks – but a different three week period than for all other offices. As a result, the opportunity for congressional candidates to participate in normal petition signing events where electors can sign petitions for every primary candidate is severely curtailed if not eliminated.

The last day for objections to nominating petitions is March 27.

Absentee ballots for Congressional candidates are to be mailed to military personnel and others by March 30.

A third calendar applies to the special election to replace Congressman Tim Murphy in the 18th District until January 20, 2018. The special election is scheduled for March 13, 2018. Nomination papers had to be filed on or before January 22, 2018, and objections had to be filed on or before January 25, 2018. The current boundaries of this district have been redrawn under the remedial map ordered by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, and the redrawn 18th District does not overlap the current 18th District.

The requirements for nomination petition signatures are:

Signers must be qualified electors and duly enrolled members of the party on behalf of which the candidate is running. 25 P.S. §§2867, 2868.

He or she must be a qualified elector of the political district identified on the nominating petition. 25 P.S. §2868.

He or she must provide his or her place of residence, “giving city, borough or township with street and number, if any.” 25 P.S. §2868.

He or she must provide the date of signing, which must be no earlier than the thirteenth Tuesday before the primary and no later than the tenth Tuesday before the primary. 25 P.S. §2868.

Each page of the nomination petition must carry the circulator’s affidavit stating:

- (a) that he or she is a qualified elector duly registered and enrolled as a member of the designated party of the State, or of the political district, as the case may be, referred to in said petition, unless said petition relates to the nomination of a candidate for a court of common pleas, for the Philadelphia Municipal Court or for the Traffic Court of Philadelphia or for justice of the peace, in which event the circulator need not be a duly registered and enrolled member of the designated party;
- (b) his residence, giving city, borough or township, with street and number, if any;
- (c) that the signers thereto signed with full knowledge of the contents of the petition;
- (d) that their respective residences are correctly stated therein;
- (e) that they all reside in the county named in the affidavit;
- (f) that each signed on the date set opposite his name; and
- (g) that, to the best of affiant's knowledge and belief, the signers are qualified electors and duly registered and enrolled members of the designated party of the State, or of the political district, as the case may be.

The qualification of electors is governed by 25 P.S. §§2811-2812.

The residence of electors is governed by 25 P.S. §§2813-2814.

An elector of the candidate’s party and the party itself may object to a candidate’s nomination petition. A person registered in a party other than that of the candidate cannot vote in the candidate's primary election, 25 P.S. §2832, and lacks standing to object to the candidate's nomination petition.

Signatures on a nomination petition can be challenged for lack of authenticity, for lack of qualification to vote, for incorrect or inauthentic accompanying information, or for residence outside the political district identified on the nomination petition.

A nominating petition can be challenged for failure to file a circulator's affidavit, for the circulator's failure to sign the affidavit before a notary, or for lack of knowledge that the individual signers signed with full knowledge of the contents of the nomination petition.
